Nixon Warns Allies

Times News Services

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — President Nixon, with the support of 24 former top officials from both political parties, said today it would be "an error of historic dimensions" for any of the North Atlantic Treaty allies to unilaterally cut their military forces in Europe.

Nixon issued the statement in a stepped-up campaign to defeat Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield's amendment to reduce U.S. troops in NATO by 50 per cent — from 300,000 to 150,000.

Nixon's statement followed one made Friday by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt in which Brandt said the U.S. could not cut its troops in Europe without its allies following suit.

Brandt said West Germany and the other NATO members have always taken the view that defence burdens should be shared equally.

"When they (the burdens) are reduced, they must be reduced for all; when they must be increased for security reasons, then likewise all must take part," Brandt said.

PROMOTE PEACE

Nixon's statement today said:

"At this point in time, it would be an error of historic dimensions for any of the North Atlantic Treaty allies to reduce unilaterally the military forces maintained in Europe for the common defence.

"As the most powerful member of the alliance, the United States bears a responsibility for leadership.

"Let us persevere to carry forward the policy of this nation under five successive presidents representing both political parties, confident that our united strength will promote the enduring peace we seek."

HIGH LEVEL

The White House said that former U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson spearheaded the move for backing by a high level bi-partisan group of former state department officials, defence leaders, NATO ambassadors and supreme allied commanders in Europe.

INAPPROPRIATE

Former presidents Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson were not asked to publicly support the statement, the White House said, "because it was thought it would not be appropriate."

Former defence secretary Clark Clifford and former deputy secretary of state James Douglas were approached, but refused to sign the statement.

Former defence secretary Robert McNamara declined to comment because of his position as president of the World Bank, the White House said. "He does not want this abstention to be interpreted as non-support of the statement," it added.

The statement was the outgrowth of a 90-minute meeting at the White House Thursday when Nixon summoned such elder statesmen as Acheson, former high commissioners of Germany Lucius Clay and John McCloy to discuss the Mansfield amendment.

Professors May Shun Uvic In Wake of Censure—Doyle

Censure of University of Victoria president Bruce J. Partridge by the Canadian Association of University Teachers "may well discourage" teachers across Canada from taking jobs at Uvic.

Dr. Charles Doyle, president of Uvic's Faculty Association, made this statement today after returning from a Toronto meeting of the CAUT national council which censured Partridge by a vote of 39-8.

"It doesn't amount to a censure of the university but it may well discourage faculty members from coming to a university with a censured president," Doyle said in an interview.

It is the first time CAUT has imposed censure on an individual president of an academic institution.

RESPONSIBILITY

"It seemed clear that the responsibility in this situation seems to come back to Partridge all the time," Doyle said.

"He's trying to have it both ways. The ultimate responsibility is his. His decision is the same as the dean's but both of them overturned the decision of a faculty advisory committee."

Doyle attacked Partridge's allegations that a small group of "dissidents" had been trying to bring about censure of Uvic. Partridge had called for their resignations.

REAL ISSUES

"I know that I am not a dissident," Doyle said. "President Partridge must realize that I and the executive of the faculty association are deeply concerned over real issues. What we want to talk about are these issues."

"Every time we try to get President Partridge to address the issues, he tends to resort to hints that it's a question of personalities. That puts me in with the dissidents," Doyle said.

The censure came after months of controversy over non-renewal of contracts for

GREENE preview of changes?

Tax Break Hinted For Low Incomes

Times News Services

JASPER — Speaking off the cuff here Friday, Energy Minister J. J. Greene hinted of changes to come in Canada's tax laws to give a better break to low-income Canadians.

Greene threw away a prepared speech to tell the annual meeting of the Petroleum Accountants' Society of Western Canada that 70 per cent of the tax load in this country is borne by people with annual incomes under $7,000.

"Many great and well-to-do companies don't pay any taxes at all," he added. He characterized this as "private affluence and public squalor."

Many of Greene's listeners wondered if his talk presaged changes to be contained in Finance Minister Edgar Benson's budget next month. In some respects his words seemed to echo those of former communications minister Eric Kierans when he resigned from the federal cabinet two weeks ago.

Greene said that when the federal government proposed tax changes designed to reduce major inequities, while continuing to encourage economic growth, heavy opposition came from "those who tell they were going to be hurt."

New Dam Could Run 20 Big Mines—Shrum

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum said Friday a dam of the size being considered for northwestern B.C. by private developers could keep 20 big mines going.

Mr. Shrum was commenting on a study being conducted in the Iskut and Stikine River systems into the possibility of construction of a 600,000 kilowatt power dam.

British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd. (Brinco) is conducting the study through Iskut Pulp Power Ltd., of which it is majority shareholder.

"This idea is something that comes up once in a while, every time there is a mining development," said Mr. Shrum. "We (Hydro) would like a source of power at that end of our grid, but we haven't found a market there.

"There is no point in going there if there isn't a market for the power."

He said the Iskut is awfully rough country through which to build a power line, but agreed that one could easily be built into Alaska's Panhandle country.

That could open up a market, he said, as could a copper smelter long suggested for B.C.

FRESH WATER SOUGHT FOR TYPHOID VICTIMS

BOUCHETTE, Que. (CP) — Officials of this Gatineau River village, caught in the throes of a typhoid fever epidemic, are to meet Quebec Water Board authorities in Montreal Wednesday to draft plans for a fresh water supply.

Drinking water drawn untreated from the muddy Gatineau River has been blamed for the outbreak of typhoid fever. The intake hose is just 50 feet from a pipe belching raw swage into the river.

Thousands Cheer Purge

Cairo Trials Likely

CAIRO (Reuter) — Thousands of workers and youths demonstrated for President Anwar Sadat in the streets of Cairo today as the Egyptian leader continued his investigation of a plot to dislodge him from power.

Under house arrest as the students chanted pro-Sadat slogans in front of the Kubbeh Republican Guest Palace were former war minister Gen. Mohamed Fawzi and Interior Minister Sharaway Gomaa.

Others in detention include former information minister Mohamed Faeyek and Abdel Mohsen Abul Nur, boss of Egypt's monolithic political machine, the Arab Socialist Union.

Also under house arrest are former assembly speaker Dr. Labib Shoukair and his two deputies: Dia Eddin Daoud, another top Arab Socialist Union executive, and Samy Sharaf, former minister for presidential affairs.

Informed sources said Sadat might order a public trial of some of the men involved in what he described Friday night as an attempted coup.

"Hang them, hang them," some of the demonstrators chanted in the courtyards. "We are with you" and "Down with centres of power."

The president's revelation of an attempted coup by an influential circle within the

TIMES INTRODUCES FAMILY SECTION

In line with modern newspaper trends, the Times today initiates a new Family section replacing what traditionally have been known as the "women's" or "social" pages.

This section will retain most of the features currently carried on these pages. But over the coming weeks and months the Family section will progressively broaden its horizons to include more news and features of interest to the whole family, to men as well as women, to young and old.

Keep an eye on the Times Family section. You're going to find it interesting.

From Samarkand To Siberia With Pierre

(Times Ottawa bureau reporter John Mika will be accompanying Prime Minister Trudeau on his Soviet visit which starts Sunday. Here is his somewhat bemused pre-takeoff report.)

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA — To Russia with the lovers should be a romantic assignment and the sly Soviets are doing their darndest to make it a second honeymoon — for the press, not Pierre and Peggy.

Certainly the prime minister hadn't planned it that way for his 11-day Russian romp which begins here Sunday, appropriately at the witching hour, as the Peace Tower clock sounds 12 muffled alarms into the night.

Who Knows What Awaits?

That'll be the signal for Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau, their retinue of 21 and 40 press type people to jet up into the dark sky to who really knows what awaiting them on that long Soviet sojurn from Samarkand to Siberia.

For it seems the Kremlin's clerks still are trying to crank out some kind of a program for the Canadian kids coming to say hello.

Hark; do you hear those whispers rustling through Red Square?

"Pierre who? But why us? Gromyko invited him two years ago? For Marx sake.

why? Trying to fill an awkward pause in Sharp's Dulles' reminisces?

"Oh well, okay. But tell them Maoist toadies nothing. And make certain the customs men check his bags for snowballs this time. He had 175 inches and a lot of time to prepare ammunition last winter."

And virtually nothing is what the Russians have told the Canadians in advance. For weeks frantic messages have been passing back and forth to Moscow asking again and again: "Okay, so what are they going to do over there?"

Travel Itinerary Sketchy

And Pierre's crisp instructions on where he wanted to go and what he wanted to see were handed on, too apparently to be dumped promptly into a wastebin.

Barely a week ago came "an outline" of the travel itinerary. It listed the arrival and departure times at Moscow, Kiev, Tashkent, Norilsk, Murmansk, and Leningrad. Nothing more. Except for arrival and departure times at Ottawa, added locally to help fill out the itinerary.

The briefing went something like this.

When PM was invited ("Who? Gromyko. Why? Search me, I think Sharp couldn't stop talking or something.) He was to go last autumn when time was ripe to settle and sign up a few things — settle the rotten fishy problem with Soviet trawlers on West Coast and sign our first technological and industrial exchange agreement.

But FLQ had other plans so he didn't go and the fish problem and exchange agreement have been taken care of in the meantime.

Ah, yes, the Russians do know Margaret's going. Uh, no, we still don't have her itinerary so we don't know if she'll sit and knit while hubby and kindly Kosygin swap translations of Old Right economics or whether she'll just sit and knit in her hotel room.

Women's Lib in Moscow

Well, yes, we were rather hoping you'd not bother to notice if she mingles on Red Square in her new babooshka-and-hot pants — she really doesn't want to attract attention unnecessarily. Only check on Women's Lib from the street sweepers.

Seriously though, the PM is really looking forward to this trip as he told the Russians because he wants to learn as much as he can about how they're doing in Siberia in view of his keen interest in our own north.

Yes, he told them that really was the main thing he wanted to do on this trip.

Why yes, they very kindly arranged for him to spend more than a day in Siberia. In fact, he's allowed to actually stay 24 hours and 35 minutes in Norilsk in the heart of Siberia.

Well, don't laugh, it's a real big breakthrough — no one's been allowed in there since Art Laing visited it in 1965.

Anyway, it's considered a really important precedent — well, alright, reconfirming a precedent — so that we can get Jean Chretien in there later this year.

That's why we're so excited that the PM has been able to get his foot into Norilsk for a day. Now we've got them. If they let in the advance man, can they continue denying our northern star?

Policemen Guarding Hab Coach

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — The hockey hysteria that usually grips this city each spring reached a new high on the weekend when plain-clothes policemen were assigned to watch out for the safety of coach Al MacNeil and other Montreal Canadiens' officials.

MacNeil ran his team through a light 60-minute scrimmage today in preparation for Sunday afternoon's sixth game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final against Chicago Blacks Hawks.

The Hawks lead the series 3-2. They worked out at Chicago stadium prior to boarding a Saturday afternoon flight to Montreal and were reported looking to win their first Stanley Cup since 1961 here.

Game time is 11 a.m. P.D.T.

After the workout, the Canadiens attended a noon-time news luncheon at the Forum, then denarted by bus for a Laurentian Mountain resort.

They will remain in seclusion until just prior to game time today.

It is understood the Quebec Provincial Police will take over the surveillance duties from the Montreal force while the club is out of town.

The police entered the scene after telephone calls were received at the Forum and reportedly at the home of general manager Sam Pollock, threatening both men.

RICHARD BLASTED MACNEIL

The calls apparently were the latest developments following an outburst by veteran centre Henri Richard against MacNeil.

Richard roundly criticized the coach to French-language newspaper men following Thursday night's 2-0 loss to the Hawks in Chicago.

Richard called the Montreal coach "incompetent" and "the worst coach I've ever played for during my career," and decried MacNeil's tactics of constantly shifting the personnel on his various lines.

However, Richard said Friday on his return from Chicago: "I shouldshave kept my mouth shut Thursday night."

cabinet and the Arab Socialist Union creatd a mild sensation even among a population fed on gossip of backstage power struggles.

By noon dozens of buses and trucks, horns hooting, were converging on the Kubbeh Palace on the outskirts of the city where other demonstrators already were shouting their support for the president.

Disclosing Friday night that even his own house and offices had been bugged, Sadat warned that he would crush any fresh attempt to destroy unity in the country.

"I have told members of the armed forces I will mince anyone who tries to undermine our internal front . . . but the storm is over," he told the nation in a 90-minute broadcast.

CABINET SWORN IN

A new Egyptian cabinet was sworn in shortly afterwards.

Presidential decrees issued today appointed Gen. Ahmad Ismail, former chief of staff of Egyptian forces, as head of genefal intelligence to succeed Gen. Ahmad Kamel who was dismissed.

Aly Noureddin, the public prosecutor, was replaced by Mohamed Maher, former counsellor at the court of Cassation.

Dr. Abdel Kader Hatem became one of the four deputy premiers under Premier Mahmoud Fawzi to replace Sharawy Gomaa, who resigned his deputy post and interior ministry portfolio Thursday.

Hatem has held the post before and is a former minister of national guidance, during which period he made sweeping changes in the information machinery.

The president also swore in Lt.-Gen. Mohamed Ahmed Sadek as minister of war to replace Fawzi and Mamdouh Salem took the oath as minister of the interior in succession to Gomaa.

The other new ministers in the cabinet are mainly younger technicians and engineers.

REVEALS DETAILS

Sadat revealed in his speech that besides his home and offices being tapped, steps were taken to prevent him entering a television building to make a broadcast during recent critical talks on the new federation with Libya and Syria.

The plot against him all began, he said, after he returned to Cairo from talks in Benghzai on the federation with the Libyan and Syrian leaders.

Shadow Mischief

Ecology Group Seeks Open File

WASHINGTON (AP) Environmentalists armed with a court order have demanded that he United States interior department throw open virtually its entire file of documents on the proposed Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

The department has until May 23—unless it asks an extension — to turn over more than 1,000 documents, but it can withhold those it considers privileged. Environment groups then could seek another court order requiring their disclosure.

The Environmental Defence Fund, Friends of the Earth and the Wilderness Society, which blocked construction of the proposed pipeline with a lawsuit more than a year ago, won the order after posing a series of questions to the interior department.

A federal judge ordered interior to respond to the questions by providing the three organizations a list of documents filed in the pipeline case. Interior complied April 22.

The list included at least 1,500 separate items, ranging from defence department research on cold-climate construction to interior's inter-office memos.

WON SECOND ORDER

The three organizations then won another order granting access to inspect and copy more than 1,000 of these documents.

Their list included about 200 communications to the interior department from companies proposing the pipeline, and nearly as many from interior to the companies.

Also requested were more than 300 entries on the pipeline's environmental impact and a half-dozen documents on readiness of the pipeline construction group.

Seven oil companies are seeking to build a pipeline some 800 miles from the arctic north slope of Alaska to a port at Valdez on its southern coast.

The line would carry hot oil across now-frozen ground, across mountains, over or under some 350 rivers and streams, and through an area prone to severe earthquakes.

The environment groups blocked the pipeline last year by winning a court order requiring the interior department to prepare an environmental-impact study before permitting pipeline construction across the vast federal lands in Alaska.

three Uvic professors. The CAUT executive had recommended censure to the national council after negotiations with Uvic's administration broke down.

Members of the board of governors came out in strong support of Partridge after the censure.

CONFIDENTIAL

Board chairman Willard Ireland said, "I have complete confidence in Bruce Partridge. I will go on believing he is doing a good job until someone convinces me otherwise."

"I find it odd that they would put the full onus on the president when in effect he was following the recommendation of the dean," Ireland said.

Board member Lloyd McKenzie said:

"All CAUT utterances so far have been characterized by appalling self-righteousness on the one hand and wholesale condemnation on the other. This is typical of people acting as judges in their own cases," he said.

Partridge said today he has yet to receive any kind of notification regarding his censure by the CAUT.

A spokesman for the Alma Mater Society stearing committee said, "We had expected that the board would have given some consideration to the implementation of the action by the CAUT. But their immediate response appears to be absolutely antagonistic and a retreat once again to their arbitrary attitude of the past."

"As a result, we are going to have the first of a series of meetings to determine appropriate action at upcoming university activities," the spokesman said.

TWO PERSONS

Meanwhile, it has been learned that two persons nominated by Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of the B.C. Supreme Court to sit on a panel to investigate the three cases have accepted positions. A third member of the review panel is now being sought.

The CAUT resolution passed at the Toronto meeting Friday contains a clause which would allow censure of Partridge to be lifted "if a resolution of these cases is achieved through acceptable procedures."

The resolution said the terms should be accentable to both the Uvic administration and the faculty association representing the professors.

Dr. Alwyn Berland, executive secretary of the CAUT, said Friday that discussion of the motion of censure at the CAUT meeting had been fair and two-sided.

"After long and conscientious debate the council has arrived at its decision regarding the University of Victoria.

TWO VIEWS

"It is important to stress that the debate was balanced, that two points of view were represented and that at the conclusion of the debate the council had reached a definite consensus concerning the university and its three cases."

Doyle, who was one of Uvic's representatives to the meeting, also said the debate was fair.

"From the floor of the meeting a very strong case was made for President Partridge's point of view. The University of Victoria representatives appreciated this in that it served to put our own view of the case onto fair and proper perspective," Doyle said.

The CAUT represents over 15,000 university teachers across Canada, which is over 70 per cent of faculty members.

AIDING ENEMY CHARGE LAID

By GEORGE WILSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — In what will be the first case of its kind in the Vietnam war, the U.S. marine corps announced Friday that it has decided to court-martial Sgt. Jon Sweeney for aiding the enemy while imprisoned by the North Vietnamese.

The 21-year-old marine from West Babylon, N.Y., could receiye a maximum sentence of life imprisonment — but not death — in the general court martial. Preliminary hearings are expected to start early next month.

Sweeney is accused of leaving his company in Quang Tri province "with intent to avoid hazardous duty, namely ground combat against the enemy" and of making "disloyal" statements while a prisoner of war from Feb. 22, 1969 to Aug. 24, 1970.

Sweeney's won story — one he told at a Stockholm, Sweden, news conference on Aug. 25, 1970 — is that his marine commander left him to die in the jungle "because I was ill."

Coroner Rules No Blame

CAMPBELL RIVER — Coroner Richard Murphy said Friday the Rescue Coordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt should make more use of local facilities in the case of marine disasters.

His statement came after a public inquiry Thursday night into the deaths of two men by exposure and drowning. He ruled no blame should be attached to anyone.

John Alexander Wilson and Donald John Barber, of Vancouver both wearing lifejackets, died after the sinking of their boat half an hour after she hit a log.

Even after the Comox-based rescue helicopter reached the scene it took amost 10 hours to find the bodies in the rough seas between Mitlenatch Island and Oyster Bay.

STANDBY

Murphy said he's still considering whether to make a second recommendation that two helicopters be on immediate standby at the Comox base at all times. Or, he suggests, that as soon as one goes on a mission, another is immediately put on standby.

Campbell River's Mayor Ken Forde said Murphy's recommendation of better coordination is "very good, but still it doesn't go far enough." He said it is essential that one helicopter be on immediate standby from dawn to dusk seven days a week.

Evidence at the inquiry led Murphy to believe that the rescue centre had not used Campbell River planes and helicopters as much as it could have.

The inquiry was told there had been a discussion on calling in Okanagan Helicopter Ltd., a private company with a base at Campbell River. The centre had ruled against this because the helicopter had no proper rescue equipment.

Murphy said the private helicopter could have been of great use in spotting the two men and, perhaps, the boat before she went down.

Also, he noted, when the two men gave their Mayday distress signal the ferry Comox Queen was about 11 miles away. She made three sweeps of the area but could not spot the men in the high waves.

Forde said his council has received "excellent support" from other Island municipalities in its campaign for constant manning of the rescue base.

SMALL VOICE

"It may be inevitable that their voice will be very small and inarticulate" but Greene said there should have been greater participation by specialists.

Participation in the debate seemed limited to the academics and "sometimes I wonder if they have gone too far and teaching is no longer important in our academic halls."

Two Public Hearings Set On Amchitka

The Atomic Energy Commission has set dates for two public hearings in Alaska on the second nuclear test explosion on Amchitka Island, Rhoda Kaellis, chairman of the Victoria Amchitka 2 Society, said today.

Robert Fleisher of New York, executive director of the Committee for Nuclear Responsibility, gave her the information in a telephone call Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Kaellis said Fleisher explained the hearings, set for May 26 in Juneau and May 28 in Anchorage, will be open to anyone.

Written or verbal presenatations, not longer than 15 minutes, will be accepted.

SHORT NOTICE

"That only leaves two weeks, so you can see the reasons for the short notice.

"I'm sure the fact that the U.S. government is holding the hearings is a result of pressure from the governor of Alaska. He's furious over the whole business," she said.

The Amchitka 2 Society has already sent telegrams to Premier Bennett and Liberal MP David Anderson asking them "to reply to our suggestion that B.C. should send a representative and-or a representation to the hearing."

"We are also investigating the possibility of getting the NDP to send a representative. Whatever influential source we can get to hit at this, the more pressure it will create," Mrs. Kaellis said.

Relations With U.S. Called Rape

Canada Is 'Curiously Feminine'

By ROB BULL

MONTREAL (CP) — For novelist Hugh MacLennan, Canada has always been "curiously feminine."

"That's why Americans have never understood us and never will," he told about 100 delegates to a national symposium on the Canadian universities at Loyola College Friday.

"When a Canadian says no, it's said the way a women says no, or yes for that matter. And you have to know a woman pretty goddam well before you accept a statement as an affidavit."

"I've been screaming rape about foreign domination of Canadian culture for years. But the trouble is there's something feminine in the Canadian mentality.

"And then, too, there's the well-known saying that you might as well relax and enjoy it."

Mr. MacLennan said he became concerned with the employment practices of Canadian universities in 1935 when he applied for a job teaching at Dalhousie University in Halifax.

He was turned down in favor of an Englishman with inferior qualifications.

"Perhaps you've got the wrong man for this meeting," he told the delegates.

He said that he could not advise them to seek special government legislation to stop American domination of Canadian universities.

GOVERNMENT WON'T ACT

"The government still seems to want to encourage immigration which is bad. The government doesn't want to interfere directly with a university administration which is good. No good has ever come to any academic community when a government muscled in on it."

He said governments have never really wanted to change the status quo and that he had tried for many years to influence Canadian politicians on this problem.

"But what on earth could anyone ever do to Mackenzie King," he said. "If you put your thumb into him in one place he bulged out somewhere else."

He said that Victorian Englishmen used to refer to a colony as a place which could provide employment for those who couldn't find work at home.

"That makes most Canadian universities American colonial institutions," he said.

Furthermore, Americans make bad immigrants, Mr MacLennan said.

"They don't adapt to our traditions. They try to apply their own inapplicable politics to our situation here. They're not too eager to become Canadian citizens and they continue to think of Canada as an extension of the United States."

Fredrick E. Baker, vice-chairman of the American Advertising Federation, will speak to the Kiwanis Club of Victoria Tuesday at 12:10 p.m. at The Empress. Baker's topic will be Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow.

The Willows Elementary Parent-Teacher Association will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium for its annual meeting. Len Michaux will direct the school band and Bernard Raju will lead the school orchestra in a musical program.

ATHLETES WORTH MORE THAN MP?

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday he finds it strange that some Canadians object to paying members of Parliament a salary less than paid thousands of civil servants and popular sports figures.

An MP "should be considered vital to the survival of democracy and liberty," he said in an interview on Entre-Nous, a public affairs program on television station CFTM.

Trudeau said an MP paid $18,000, would earn far less than the $22,000 "where the salary of an executive civil servant begins." In addition, elected officials have had no salary increase since 1963, while wages in all other professions have risen.

"I find it abnormal that people are shocked at the idea of paying an MP $18,000 when, for heaven's sake, the whole population everyday applauds sports figures — be it baseball, hockey or whatever — who can earn $20,000, $30,000 and even, as we know, in exceptional cases, hundreds of thousands of dollars."

"When a hockey player plays in Chicago ... no one asks him to pay for his hotel; it's paid for by the club. When a civil servant changes cities or province, or a TV cameraman or CBC crew go on a job in France or Africa, they don't pay their expenses; their expenses are paid for."

The member of Parliament, however, must often have two homes, travel back and forth to visit his electors and travel in his country.

Canadians Learn From Americans About Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — About 75 delegates to a national symposium on Canadian universities spent Friday listening to a student panel discussing the problem of trying to learn about Canada in universities dominated by Americans.

The symposium at Loyola College is entitled The Canadian University: Manpower and Canadianization.

John Weins, an education student from Simon Fraser University, said Canadianization is "a motherhood issue."

"You have to become aware of how much of it is sentimental and how much you're willing to act upon," he said.

He discussed Simon Fraser University's decision to establish a Canadian studies program with courses largely taught by Americans "because Canadians could not be objective enough and only Americans can look at Canada with the proper perspective."

Dawn Aspinall, a graduate student at the University of Toronto discussed the efforts of graduate students in English to get the university to add a Canadian element.

Of 107 courses for graduate students in English, there was one given in Canadian literature at the University of Toronto.

She said that some university administrators refused to help in a report on the status of Canadian studies in the department and others shelved the report without discussing it.

One student interested in Canadian literature at the University of Toronto decided to take a course in French-Canadian literature at the found there was only one available in English-Canadian literature. The department would not grant her credit for the course.

CITE STATISTICS

Throughout Friday's session, discussion returned to department of manpower statistics for 1969, the latest year available which showed that of 3,087 faculty hired in 1969, 77 per cent were non-Canadian citizens.

Prof. Henry Beissel, chairman of the symposium's organizing body, the National Committee for the Canadianization of Canadian Universities, cited the case of Mrs. K. J. Cottum.

Mrs. Cottum, highest ranking graduate in arts from Sir George Williams University in 1964, received a PhD. from the University of Toronto.

When an opening appeared recently in her field at U. of T. she and about 100 other Canadians were turned down in favor of an American.

Roma Standefer, a York University anthropologist from Toronto was the only Canadian in a group of five full-time anthropologists.

She said she had had several major battles with her foreign colleagues to introduce a course on the Canadian Indian and to get them to hire additional Canadian instructors.

Counting by Tens

THE TEN-TIMES-A-CENTURY head-count of Canadians will take place shortly — a nuisance, a duty, a lark, a job or whatever else a citizen may see it as — but a necessary part of the life of any modern nation. The people who answer census questionnaires relinquish a portion of their personal privacy. In return, the census takers guarantee the complete confidentiality of the answers given them.

If this still does not persuade an interviewee, it need only be mentioned that the decennial census-taking is a part of Canada's constitution and it is compulsory by law for every person to furnish the required information.

The information asked has become much more detailed and penetrating over the decades, to match the increasing complexity of our way of life and the louder cry of experts for more information to help them chart the nation's course. Basically, the census reveals the number of Canadians, where they live and what they do. But it long ago went beyond such simple facts and now peers into the material standard of life of the people, their degree of prosperity, the number and nature of many of their possessions and many other facts.

It is hardly to be expected that the census will curb its curiosity at this level. Future census questionnaires undoubtedly will probe more deeply into many now private facets of our lives. And at some point the individual is going to have to say "thus far but no farther" or succumb to the steady march of the regimented, computerized, totally organized civilization that is probably man's eventual fate.

That fate may be delayed a long time if the urge to retain personal privacy proves stronger than the pressure for integrated information. At this stage the census appears in the guise of an aid to planning, both economic and social, and a handy tool for experts who seek to have answers ready before the problems become acute. Thus, queries about the householder's clothes washer and radio may help to foretell the future demand for such goods, the possible need for more electric power to run them, and where and how that power may have to be applied.

Each individual morsel of information contributes to the final whole, and since at this point we are assured of anonymity we have little to lose and much to gain by complying.

Schools of Their Limited Choice

RECENT ELABORATION OF the Greater Victoria School Board's plan to give parents a measure of choice in the selection of the public school to which to send their children indicates a desirable degree of flexibility within the school system. At the same time, the explanations remove any suggestion that such placings may be effected at the whim of the pupil or his family.

Under the priorities now fixed, first consideration for enrolment will be given to children residing within the school's nominal boundaries. Next come those who attended the school the previous year, whose families have moved to another part of District 61, and who wish to return to the same school. After them come beginning pupils whose brothers and sisters have been accepted under the latter ruling.

Only then, if there is room, will requests be accepted from outside the nominal boundaries, and these applications will be subject to the ruling of the municipal superintendent.

The rigidities imposed on enrolment within the school boundaries at an earlier time have, of course, been varied in individual cases. A child, for instance, having difficulty in a particular school, or who has become a disturbing influence in it, has been transferred, on occasion, for his own benefit and for the benefit of other students. And when Fairey Technical School was the only one of its kind in the community, qualified students were admitted from regions beyond the Victoria High School boundaries.

Now greater elasticity has been given to the admission policy — but only after the accommodation needs of students previously entitled to go to a certain school have been met. The explanation will reassure parents concerned for their local situation.

Competition in Investment?

A EUROPEAN BANKERS' CARtel has set up an office in Toronto and, according to one source, this could lead to greater European investment in this country and a corresponding decline in the preponderance of the United States domination of our economy. This cartel is the European Banks' International Co. called EBIC, and it has a nominal capital of $2 millions although in reality it is backed by the assets of four banks with assets of more than $33 billions.

The banks are the Deutsche Bank of Frankfurt, West Germany, the Amsterdam-Rotterdam Bank of The Netherlands, the Societe Generale de Banque of Belgium and the Midlands Bank of Britain. The bankers' office in Canada will seek to promote European investment here and encourage Canadian-European trade. It will not engage in banking as such but will provide commercial intelligence on global conditions and facilitate business contacts.

Diversification could prove helpful in easing Canadians' fear of unilateral foreign domination, but the world financial structure is so interlocked that a decision on the effect of the EBIC venture will not be possible until it has become an established force.

Ah, Wilderness

THOSE OCCASIONAL EARTH movements reported in various wilderness areas may not be seismic disturbances after all. They could be the old Mountain Men turning over in their graves. And well they might as news circulates of the new type of camping ground geared to Mom.

The lady of the household who likes luxury with her outdoor life is being offered just that by some United States commercial recreation centres. In addition to trailers, with water, electricity and sewerage hook-ups, she may rent mobile equipment with a laundromat installed. Lest she tire, she can find a park with a reputation for excellent cuisine, a friendly, warm atmosphere, various types of music, dancing, a game pavilion for the kids and supervised programs with paid counsellors to keep them occupied throughout the day, whether they are tiny tots of six and under or in their teens.

With facilities and services like this, why should Mom object to the wilderness? But what such accommodation is doing to the shades of the Mountain Men could be shattering. Wonder who's chewing the buckskin now to soften the moccasins, or putting up the wickiup while the men are hunting or fishing?

Right Man, Place and Time

I should like to support wholeheartedly the recent column by Mrs. Audrey Johnson in regard to the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and the preposterous situation in which it finds itself at the end of its finest year. Laszlo Gati has made the orchestra what it is and deserves our unending gratitude and support. This is clearly a happy instance of the right man in the right place at the right time. Very few musicians of my acquaintance have his remarkable combination of abilities as a conductor, diplomat, program builder, public relations agent, or his tireless energy, charm, vast knowledge, and skill in dealing with musicians and public alike. We are fortunate to have him and we had best make very sure we keep him. Those members of the board who do not recognize this are, in my view, very suspect indeed. — Phillip T. Young, Chairman, Department of Music, University of Victoria.

Garbage Cans

I am writing to air my complaints about the lack of public garbage cans in this city. I can walk for blocks at a time without seeing any sign of one and it often becomes a very sticky situation when you're carrying something like an ice cream wrapper. Maybe if we begin cleaning up our cities by the simple installation of garbage cans we can expand more into cleaning up our country. — A Concerned Student.

'Wider, Please' the Denturists Ask Ontario

THERE is a man in Toronto who has developed a very nice sideline business by arranging dental appointments in Britain for Canadians who need false teeth. Under the British health service, complete denture work costs $34; even when the costs of a charter flight and other travelling are added on, the price is still cheaper than what dentists in Ontario are charging in many cases. Which partly explains why the "denturists" have surfaced in this province. Nobody — including the denturists themselves — are quite sure who or what they are, but everybody seems agreed that if they are allowed to do what they want to do, which is to sell dentures to the public without the prescription or intervention of a dentist, the price of false teeth will be much, much cheaper than it is.

Greer

Denturism, if it may be called that, is a new name for the old complaint. The technicians who make false teeth have been complaining for over 20 years that the lion's share of what the public pays goes to the dentist who prescribes and fits them. While dentists' fees have soared with the passage of time, thanks to the "suggested" fee schedules set by the dental associations, the price of laboratory work has not, thanks to competition. So the lion's share has got bigger and bigger, and the technicians have got madder and madder.

Campaigns to change the law to permit direct selling to the public have been successful in western Canada but in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes, for some reason, the technicians have grieved in silence. With the arrival here of one Gordon M. Smith, an unabashed former clergyman turned lobbyist who claims to have brought denturism to Manitoba last year, all that has changed. Denturist Societies have been formed in Ontario and Nova Scotia, Mr. Smith has been hired as master strategist, and campaigns have been launched to force the issue.

This consists of inviting legal prosecution by hanging out shingles and otherwise doing publicly what has been going on quietly, in many cases, for several years: direct selling to the public. Thus challenged, the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario could no longer wink at the facts and, exercising the powers it has under the Dentistry Act descended on the upstarts with police, search warrants and vehicles to cart away dentures, records and equipment.

Search and Seizure

This, of course, is precisely what the denturists want and it has already caused some light to shine on some dusty corners of government. Few persons realized, for example, that the dentists, a self-governing profession under the Dentistry Act, have the power through the Dental College of search and seizure. Or that the possession of dental equipment by anyone without the permission of the College is prima facie evidence of the practice of dentistry, and hence an offence liable to a fine which the College collects.

Similarly, the Dental Technicians Act provides that regulations passed by the board which registers technicians must be submitted to the Dental College before they go to the government for approval, a sequence which gives the dentists the opportunity, as J. C. McRuer noted in his Inquiry into Civil Rights in Ontario, to protect their competitive interest as opposed to the public interest.

Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence has said he finds such provisions quite offensive" and has promised a complete overhaul of all the legislation bestowing self-governing powers on the health professions. But this has been in the works anyway as a result of Mr. McRuer's study; what is more to the point is the recognition, if any, to be accorded the denturists and on this score Mr. Lawrence has been less enthusiastic and seemingly anxious to put the denturists down as untrained, unqualified and unsupervised. "Even a garage mechanic," Mr. Lawrence said, "has to have some degree of training and licencing."

This is only legalistically true and it is certainly unfair. Most of the 125 members of the Denturist Society of Ontario are registered dental technicians, which requires Grade 12 graduation, four years of work in an Ontario dental laboratory and the passing of a four-day examination. The remainder are not registered because of the peculiar purpose of the Dental Technicians Act.

The act does not prevent anyone who is not a registered dental technician from doing the work of a dental technician. Rather it says that only registered dental technicians may operate a dental laboratory. In fact, there are 221 dental labs in Ontario, 362 registered dental technicians (some labs have more than one) and 750 "other" employees, many of whom do the work of a dental technician but have not sought registration simply because they haven't the money or desire to go into business for themselves.

Key Argument

But this admittedly does not answer the key argument of the dentists that dental technicians are not trained to prescribe and fit dental prostheses. Clearly there are not and while many denturists have become so through clandestine practice, they are obviously over-reaching themselves in demanding that the government simply pass a law saying that they are. Even if the government decides to break the dentists' monopoly on the prescribing and fitting of dentures, it will be necessary to establish qualifications to be met by those admitted to the fold.

The Committee on the Healing Arts, a royal commission on health care in Ontario, concluded the dentists' monopoly should not be broken, holding that it protects patients "from some health risks which could arise if this work were done by persons lacking the dentist's training in the basic health sciences relevant to an understanding of the mouth." The committee, however, did not examine alternatives at any length and the government may wish to re-examine the question.

Trying to Save 'The Last Chance for Peace'

THE critical character of Middle East diplomacy has been disguised, but not altered, in recent weeks. The disguise may give peacemakers a useful breathing spell, but if the time is not used to advantage, the sharp edges of the crisis will once again appear. A month ago, on April 19, UN Secretary-General U Thant warned that "now is the last chance for peace in the Middle East. If this opportunity is not seized, I am very much afraid that all basis for peace in the foreseeable future may be lost."

Frye

The situation which triggered Thant's near-desperate plea has not changed. It had two basic ingredients:

- Israel's refusal to tell UN mediator Gunnar V. Jarring it would withdraw completely from occupied territory if and when it obtained a peace treaty satisfactory to Israel in all other respects.
- The Arabs' refusal to negotiate unless, at the end of the road, there was a prospect of regaining all lands lost in 1967.

Shortly before Thant spoke, word had come in that Egypt, Libya and Syria had agreed to federate, effective as of September 1. The latter two countries, led by extremists on the Palestine question, were to be able to control the foreign policy of the federation.

Constitutional Alterations

Since then, the proposed constitution has been altered to provide for unanimous decisions by the three on matters of major importance. But the implication is still very strong that as of September 1, there will be no further efforts to negotiate a peace treaty with Israel.

Egypt had told Jarring last February it would make peace provided it could thereby get its lost territory back. Now Cairo was in effect withdrawing the offer.

This was what prompted Thant to urge early action. In effect, he was pleading with Israel to put all the occupied territories on the negotiating table, though this nuance in his statement was largely lost outside of diplomatic circles.

Now Secretary of State William P. Rogers has been to four Arab countries and Israel. The immediate focus of his efforts has been to reach agreement on reopening of the Suez Canal; but his larger objective is to loose the basic logjam.

There is no sign that he has made progress toward the latter goal. Israel is still adamant that a peace treaty must provide for a new and different map of the Middle East. And Egypt is still digging itself into a hole on the territorial issue and preparing to pour in cement.

What remains, therefore, is the hope that, under the umbrella of reopening Suez, the armed forces of Israel and Egypt can be successfully disengaged and an open-ended cease-fire thereby obtained.

The big thing that gives this idea a possibility of success is that a Suez reopening would greatly benefit the Soviet Union. Moscow was notably silent during Rogers' trip; there were no loud propaganda warnings to the Arabs against "American imperialism," no organized rioting to disrupt his travel. The Kremlin clearly approved of his effort.

In return for facilitating Soviet naval access to the Indian Ocean, something would have to result from a Suez accord which would be of equivalent importance to Israel and the West. A prolonged de facto ceasefire would be such a commodity.

Egypt has always vowed it would never "abandon the struggle" — that is, would not release the pressure on Israel generated by wars of attrition — until there was a serious prospect of getting back its lost territories some other way.

Now Cairo is being asked to release its pressure, semi-permanently. There is a real possibility that the new Bar Lev line to which Israeli forces would withdraw in the Sinai would become, in effect, a semi-permanent international frontier.

This would give Israel a cease-fire with territorial acquisition (notably Sharm el-Sheikh). If in addition Israel got free use of the newly reopened canal, it would be an excellent deal indeed.

There would be a balancing quid pro quo sufficient to compensate for the freedom of movement the Soviet navy would acquire.

Egypt would not have scored similar gains in the short run; but over the middle and longer run, as the canal began to be once again a major source of revenue, Cairo too would benefit. The cease-fire could come to be seen as a boon and not a handicap, even with Israel in possession of Egyptian territory.

Nature of Disengagement

The big difficulty is Israel's understandable concern that the disengagement of forces in the Sinai might be temporary, not permanent. It would do little good, from her point of view, and indeed much harm, to move the line of Israeli-Egyptian confrontation from Suez a few score miles to the east, and then have the fighting renewed.

What are required are adequate safeguards to keep the zone between the canal and the new Israeli front line a genuine buffer. This involves not merely the many practical problems of international policing but the whole intangible question of Egyptian pride.

There is also Egypt's understandable concern that the scheme be visibly and demonstrably temporary, in the sense of a step toward a comprehensive peace settlement, not a permanent substitute for one.

These are the key problems which remain in the wake of the Rogers trip. No one need envy the men whose task it is to tackle them.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

As we drive along the highways we see the beautiful dogwood in full bloom. How many people know that the white of the flowers is not the petal but the bract, which appears on the tree in the fall?

Some trees have blooms that are four to six, and even up to eight, inches across. The true flower is the yellow centre, which in the fall turns to a bright red bead-like berry. If you examine these seeds when they fall to the ground you will find some that are plump and red. These will be from female flowers. Others will be thin and yellowish. These will be from the male flower.

Some of the trees will bloom in the fall, but if you examine these you will find that the blossoms are a faint pink. This tree has a very close relationship to the bunchberry. It grows close to the ground and the flowers look similar, but the berries form a bright red, showy cluster.

Do you know that the dogwood took its name from the word "dags", the wood from which butchers got their skewers because it is odorless and tasteless?

There is another rather fascinating tree often missed in our rambles. That is the cascara with its deeply veined cherry-like leaf. In the early spring the foliage has a coppery tinge in the bud as it unfolds. The small, greenish flowers are in a cluster and almost hidden beneath the leaves. The berries are a plump blue-black and are sought after by many birds.

At one time the bark of the tree was harvested for medical purposes and the tree was on its way "out." Thanks to synthetic methods, the drug people have found substitutes. For a long time the medical profession held this tree in high regard.

The bark is slightly mottled, often resembling the young red alder, though the older trees tend to become scaly at the base.

In the very young seedlings, the leaves do not drop in the fall. The few leaves always seem to droop — a characteristic which assists identification of the species.

B.C. POLITICS

Just for Argument Why Not Say Bennett Is a Lousy Politician?

By BRUCE YEMEN

It's almost a rule that every "what-do-you-think-of-Premier-Bennett" discussion ends with solemn agreement one one point.

It goes something like this:

"Well, no matter what you think of him, you have to admit he is a tremendous politician."

For "tremendous" you can substitute practically any adjective signifying brilliance, ruthlessness or even infallibility.

People who were at each other's throats a few minutes earlier seem to find common ground on Bennett's political skill.

But what would happen if somebody changed the rules of conversation about Bennett to make it optional whether he is regarded as a political genius?

A discussion might go something like this:

Joe: "Did you see what Bennett said the other day when he came off the royal yacht?"

Harry: "Yeah, wasn't that incredible? Imagine a politician telling us poor people, 'Yes, my friend, this IS the good life.' The nerve of the guy, after sailing around in the lap of luxury like that! Hasn't he heard of unemployment and the old-age pesioners?"

Joe: "You wouldn't catch the Queen or the Duke saying a dumb thing like that, and they don't even have to worry about getting elected."

Harry: "Neither does Bennett."

Joe: "What do you mean? Is he retiring?"

Harry: "No, he'll never quit. But he doesn't have to worry about getting elected. He couldn't lose an election if he tried."

Joe: "You mean the people love him no matter what he does?"

Harry: "Not exactly. Some people love him, some hate him, but that has nothing to do with winning elections."

Joe: "Why can't he lose an election?"

Harry: "Because he's got unbeatable prosperity on his side. He's also got a basically conservative population to support him and it's a population that is continuously being strengthened by new right-wingers from the Prairies."

Joe: "Is that all?"

Harry: "No. He also has the help of the hard-core unionists, radicals and other troublemakers who have traditionally been stronger in B.C. than in most other provinces."

Joe: "They're helping Bennett?"

Harry: "Of course. They serve to alarm the moderate middle into supporting the party that takes the hardest line toward labor bosses and long-hairs. And that's the Social Credit Party."

Joe: "Well, maybe, but you have to admit, Bennett is a tremendous politician."

Harry: "Are you kidding? He's one of the worst politicians in history. Why, only a few moments ago you were calling him dumb for what he said about his trip on the royal yacht. He's always saying dumb things."

Joe: "Oh, sure, but I mean you have to admit he's politically smart for the way he fights election campaigns."

HARRY: "Oh, come off it. What did you think, for instance, of that Marxian-Socialist garbage he brought up during the last election?"

Joe: "Well, speaking for myself, I thought it was ridiculous. But it sure was effective, wasn't it?"

Harry: "No doubt about it. It effectively cost Bennett a lot of votes. He could have won 42 seats instead of 38 if he'd run a sensible campaign. Be honest, now, Joe, have you met one person who was swayed by the Marxian-Socialist stuff?"

Joe: "Well, uh . . . gosh."

Harry: "I tell you, Bennett is a lousy politician. Any politician who could mangle an already bad election gimmick like 'The Good Life' the way Bennett did it this week . . . is definitely a lollipop."

Joe: "But he's done some pretty good things, hasn't he?"

Harry: "No question about it . . . as an administrator, he is very sharp. But his political sense is terrible. If it were possible for him to lose an election in this province, he would have done it long ago."

Joe: "Where does that leave the NDP?"

Harry: "Same place as ever — on the outside looking in with their regular 33 per cent of the votes. And a leader who has obviously decided to stay out of the way as much as possible and let Bennett create his own troubles."

Joe: "But if Bennett causes so much trouble for himself by being such a lousy politician, how does he get out of trouble?"

Harry: "By doing what no other politician would think of doing . . . completely reversing his own decisions. You know, the old 'we took a second look' routine. That sort of gyration in policy would kill any politician but Bennett."

Joe: "Well, Harry, I guess you're right. Bennett is a washout as a politician. He's just lucky to be in B.C. where he can't lose. But there's one thing you have to admit, Harry."

Harry: "What's that, Joe?"

Joe: "Bennett may be a terrible politician, but he's a fine statesman."

Harry: "Right on, Joe. He's a wonderful statesman. Nobody can deny that. Well, see you around."

Problem Needing Solomon

THE PROVINCE
An Editorial

Provincial court judge Lawrence Eckardt walked into a legislative and administrative maze when he suggested an investigation into why there are no residence or citizenship requirements for welfare recipients.

He said he's getting fed up with young Americans coming up here and getting welfare benefits while "we have enough of our own." He undoubtedly reflects the view of many but he deserves credit for articulating the problem. The solution may not be so easy to find.

The Canada-Assistance Act doesn't have residence requirement primarily because the federal government, which pays 50 per cent of the welfare bills, doesn't think a Canadian moving from one province to another should be discriminated against in seeking welfare. The act was primarily designed for home-grown needs but it does, as Eckardt says, allow non-Canadians to benefit.

If welfare applicants aren't Canadian citizens, they must be landed immigrants. When they apply, they must show they're landed immigrants by producing a landed immigrant card, a passport designating their immigrant status or a letter of confirmation from the Immigration Department.

There may be some fraudulent applications, say city welfare officials, but there are no foolproof regulations against a determined fraud.

The problem has been highlighted for Mr. Eckhart by the concentration of Americans in a period of high unemployment. But it has always been with us and it affects other nationalities as well. There are many people in Canada from many lands who've been here for years and who still have landed immigrant status. Canada doesn't require an immigrant to become a citizen within a specific period as some countries do, and surely Eckardt isn't suggesting that all landed immigrants should be refused welfare?

An investigation may help to define the problem. But it might require a Solomon to find an answer.

Conflicts of Interest In Key Area of Land Use

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

THE WEEK IN CITY HALL

The topic of this one-sided conversation is conflict of interest.

Conflict of interest is not a crime, however much it may sound like one.

There was a demonstration of this phenomenon during Thursday's council meeting when some bids were received from automobile dealers. Ald. Peter Pollen, who runs a large car dealership, hesitatingly asked whether he should leave the council table while the tenders were received. Someone said to him there was no need since council was only formally opening the tender bids and wasn't going to make a decision.

Pollen sat for a moment, then got up and left his seat to sit in the gallery. It was ironic that when all the bids were opened, none had come from Pollen's company. Apparently the lack of a Pollen bid was only a slip-up.

In a small city like Victoria, not many aldermen who run businesses could breezily decline the chance to bid on a city contract. But Pollen, having more than once suggested the topic of conflict of interest where others in city business is concerned, could hardly afford to take any chances himself.

Declaring one's interest seems an odd, symbolic gesture when there is no law to prevent the conflict, yet this is what people in that position do.

Pollen's zeal on these matters came rippling out last week when he was in one of his arguments over planning procedures with planning chairman Ald. Harold Olafson.

While arguing on a slightly related matter, Pollen spat out at Olafson that a member of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission had given "advance financing" to the Bay Village Shopping Centre enterprise and not absented himself from the APC meeting when it came to make a decision on whether to recommend approval of the development.

Olafson was quick to correct Pollen, telling him the APC member "did indeed" absent himself. How could Pollen know when he wasn't there to witness it one way or the other?

It wasn't the best roundhouse Pollen has ever unleashed in the direction of his planning foes, and he dropped the topic immediately.

The emphasis in that little exchange, however, was placed on the trifling matter of whether or not the APC member had absented himself in a specific case and not on the important issue: that the member is an active participant in a business which the Advisory Planning Commission regulates. The member is charged with advising on the rules and at the same time making his living under that same system rules.

The member, by the way, is James R. Genge, president of Rithet Consolidated Ltd., a company that deals in land. Exactly what the details of the "advance financing" are must surely be classified as business secrets, something nobody would presume to speculate on.

Mortgages on land must be registered with the provincial government, however, and the records show that Rithet Consolidated in 1961 granted three separate mortgages on land on which the Bay Village development in James Bay is proposed, amounting to $227,000.

The terms of the mortgages are that the amounts should be repaid, with interest at 12 per cent, within roughly three months, the actual length of time varying somewhat — but nothing to say that repayment has been fulfilled.

One mortgage was between Rithet and Mace Homes and Investments Ltd., the other two with Bay Village Developments Ltd., both companies headed by John Mace, the principal promoter of the Bay Village development.

Six or seven years have passed since this advance financing was provided, and perhaps hundreds of planning commission decisions about zoning and building matters. In that six or seven years James Bay, in which the Bay Village development is situated, has been evolving, growing, and there is of course a fair share of land speculation in the area — not only at the Bay Village site.

The situation provides an intolerable pressure on the members of the APC, who know one of their members has a quarter million dollars invested in the site. And there is also an intolerable pressure placed on a member whose business has depended for its viability on a zesty climate of real estate trading all these years.

It is the unhappy plight of many men who accept the burden of public duty that, if not their motives, then their actions, are held up to some rough house scrutiny.

In the case of Advisory Planning Commission members have in their hands the power that is most important to any city — that of land use and town planning. Their recommendations can be ignored by council, and they are, often enough to prove council is no rubber stamp for the APC.

But as for serving the public, this is something they can hardly do when they have no contact with the public. They receive delegations only from private interests. The public simply does not fit into the scheme of things devised for and by the Advisory Planning Commission.

Cities Stripped of Power

By BARRY CRAIG

EDMONTON — Local government has all but disappeared in Alberta. The machinery is still there — city administrations, mayors, aldermen — but it has been stripped of almost all power by the province.

The recently-ended session of the provincial legislature proved conclusively that Alberta's Social Credit government believes it alone should rule the province.

Municipalities no longer will have much to say about their spending on police, hospitals or regional planning, following introduction of legislation at the recent session which gives the province absolute power over these fields. Coupled with the powers the province took from municipalities last year — spending on schools and pollution-control — there is little left that Alberta's cities, towns and municipal districts can really decide.

The province's attitude to local autonomy is bound to be one of the chief isssues in the provincial election expected this summer. But what may be most hotly contested is the manner in which the province has robbed the municipalities of their power.

For example, municipalities were neither consulted nor even forewarned that the province was going to limit their share of oil and gas revenues to $38 million from now on. The government simply introduced the legislature at the past session. The result was that Edmonton, for one, was suddenly faced with re-examining its immediate fiscal future, since its revenue loss is the equivalent of two mills.

When the government has consulted the municipalities, as it did recently before introducing a new Police Act, it was unresponsive to most of their complaints. Despite the municipalities' vociferous objections, the province come July 1 will decide who the majority of commissioners will be on local police commissions, and will assume the power to order improvements in local law enforcement. The result is the municipalities are stuck with footing the bill for their policing but have little or no say.

As if to irritate municipalities even more, the government also has created a new provincial hospitals commission with the power to dictate local spending on hospitals and has established new provincial controls on the operation and financing of regional planning commissions.

Making It Look Lived In

By ART STOTT

The life expectancy of a "freezie" is equivalent to the time it takes a child to dawdle the long block and one half from the corner store to my front gate. At that point the frozen confection has been consumed. The wrapper, naturally is thrown on the border between my wall and the sidewalk.

When the St. John's wort, or hypericum, is in full foliage, the cellophane can filter down among the leaves, and is hardly noticeable. After the trim-back and before the new shoots attain growth, it adds a distinctive touch to the other litter dropped there by passers-by. If you're tidy, and remove it, you have to go indoors to wash the stickiness off your hands. Though I've never tasted one, I'm not fond of "freezies."

The wrappers are even more annoying than the paper cups, empty pop and beer bottles, discarded cigarette packages or old bags that once contained potato chips, when they decorate my front strip — or the municipality's strip, if you want to be technical.

Now the school board is beginning to show some irritation with youngsters who bestow this form of embellishment on public areas. One of the trustees has even gone to the extreme of calling the litterers "slobs." That should cause some fluttering in the psychological dovecotes. It's accepted procedure now to call children "kids". But "slobs"? What a derogatory name for these poor, misunderstood juveniles who are only copying their elders!

All these children need is a little consideration, a little patient instruction and a damgood crack across the hip pockets with a substantial lath. Love and sympathy will do it, if the lath's durable enough.

Still, the object-lessons are not always imposing. On the highways, the government has erected signs at various intervals declaring illegal the placing of litter on the highway. You can spot them between the cartons and brown-paper bags of garbage, or wrappings from picnic lunches, at the roadside. Sure there's a law against it. That seems to make the practice just a little more exciting.

A long time ago I read an engaging story that covers the situation. It dealt with the action of a neat little old lady, who saw a youth drop an empty cigarette package on the sidewalk. She picked it up, overtook the youth and told him he had dropped something. As she proffered the empty package to him, he told her he'd finished with it, didn't want it any more. Neither did anyone else, the neat little old lady replied. And, as the story went, the youth was shamed into accepting back his litter and packing it to a nearby trash container.

Nice, story. I also read, some time ago about Jack and the Beanstalk. Good story, too. But I didn't believe that, either.

In the historic epoch Before Pollution on this continent, litter was no problem. The aboriginal people set up camp where it seemed appropriate to them, lived there until the refuse accumulated to a point they could no longer stand. Then they moved off. That's what made them nomadic — and you thought it was the quest for food?

Then along came civilization and a spot of over-population. Peoples advancing into civilization established the security of roots, quit wandering and became more or less nailed down to their hunk of homeland. Litter, waste and refuse generally became a disposal problem. Ask anyone who wandered late at night down the narrow alleys of a medieval town 300 or 400 years ago.

Our problem now is that we just can't walk away from it all. Physically, it is still possible to move off when the litter piles too high. Economically, it's not feasible. The mortgage holds you back.

So, eventually, we're going to have to do something about it. And what we do is going to cause offence to some people who least expect it. It could even strike that paragon of humanity, the dog-lover.

I have a great affection for dogs myself, though at present our family is dogless. As I watch them walk by, exercising their animals, I figuratively doff my hat to the owners who show a sincere appreciation for their canine pets. My hat-doffing halts, however, when the dogs turn in at my gate and browse briefly on my lawn. They also can leave litter.

Have you ever known a dog-lover who also loved humanity so much that he'd return to clean off your lawn? I've heard of such people, but experience leads me to place them alongside the performers in the Hindu rope trick.

Let's not be hard on the dogs, though. They seldom have more intelligence than the littering "slobs" the school trustee was talking about.

Before the Judge

Robert Thomas Copeland, 26, of Nanaimo, charged with the murder of his wife May 6, expressed concern in provincial court here Friday for the welfare of his children.

Copeland, who lived at 955 Franklyn in Nanaimo, told Judge William Ostler the children were staying with his father-in-law.

The accused also applied for legal aid, and Ostler told him to take the matter of the children up with counsel when one is appointed.

Copeland's wife Barbara Gay, 24, was found dead in bed at the couple's home May 6. The case has been remanded to May 21 for plea.

The offences involved a car stolen from the Town and Country parking lot March 29 and a quantity of auto parts and tools, valued at $96, taken by the accused May 1.

Randy S. Sylvester, 48, of 2739 Scafe, was fined $300 by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving.

A 16-year-old youth, who Judge William Oster noted had been in trouble with the law since he was 10, was sentenced for theft to four months at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre at Boulder Bay.

The provincial court judge told the accused, Helmut Bradasch, that Boulder Bay was "not at all like a prison, more like a rigorous boys' camp."

"Everything humanly possible has been done for you in the family court division, but there still is time for you to turn back instead of continuing on the road to trouble," Ostler said.

Bradasch had pleaded guilty to car theft.

More Beds For Hospitals

Approval has been granted for plans to proceed on two extended care hospital bed projects.

The projects, a 15-bed addition to the Gulf Islands Lady Minto Hospital at Ganges, and construction of a 75-bed extended-care wing at the proposed Peninsula Hospital on Mount Newton Cross Road, have been approved by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

The Lady Minto project, estimated to cost $303,400, will now proceed to the detailed drawing stage — the last stage before tenders are called.

The Peninsula Hospital project includes two phases: the extended care wing and an acute care wing which would also hold 75 beds.

DENISON PROJECT

$60 Million Costs Seen

About 25 per cent of the financing for Saskatchewan's Choiceland iron ore development will be in equity, the balance in senior debt, said Denison Mines Ltd. chairman Stephen Roman in Victoria Friday.

Here briefly for a meeting with Premier Bennett, in which they discussed development of Denison's B.C. coal deposits, Roman said he thought the Saskatchewan project would cost upwards of $60 million and that European markets could be supplied with quality pellet feed for steel mills.

The project's participants are the Saskatchewan government (25 per cent), Denison, Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corp., and Choiceland Iron Mines Ltd. Denison, as one of the major shareholders, also is responsible for feasibility, supervision of the initial ore access shaft and subsequent mine development.

Completion of the project is planned for between three and four years.

$10 MILLION

Roman said Denison will spend up to $10 million in bringing the project to production, which will be sold primarily to Interprovincial Pipe and Steel Corp. whose operations at present are limited by the availability of scrap iron.

Timing of the undertaking is right because of foreseeable needs of the petroleum and natural gas transmission industry, Roman said.

Roman said he thought the trans-Alaska pipeline will be built first, then a gas line down the Mackenzie valley and later an oil pipeline may parallel it into existing Alberta or B.C. gathering systems.

BIG DEMAND

The demand for pipe thus will be "no doubt tremendous," Roman felt, but in addition, he sees development of smaller secondary industries to take advantage of the new source of steel.

At first, the new mine and mill will be aiming at 750,000 tons a year, producing pellets 90-95 per cent iron from magnetite ore about 29 per cent iron. Both electric melt and blast furnaces may use the pellets as mill feed. Later, the operation could turn out one million tons a year or more, Roman said.

"I think we will be able to sell it in Europe, shipping from Churchill," he said.

The ore is not high grade, but although deep it is easy to mine and refine.

An estimated 150 million tons of ore are proven, lying about 2,000 feet below surface. It is planned to drive a shaft 20 feet in diameter 3,500 feet long through overburden into 1,500 feet of the ore body.

Indications are that total ore reserves could be as much as one billion tons.

About 1,000 new jobs will be provided by the project directly, with another 3,000 to 4,000 in supporting and allied industries, Premier Ross Thatcher estimated. The government's studies of the undertaking will be completed in about 45 days, permitting the shaft tenders to be called for.

CONDOMINIUM APARTMENT LIVING (1st in Series)

For many years we have specialized in the marketing of self-owned apartments. Until a few years ago there was only a total of 109 suites in 8 buildings in Oak Bay. Today there are many more fine buildings, both Co-op. and Condominium. We have found in our interviews of potential buyers some confusion and much misinformation. What are the differences between Condominium, Co-op, and Strata Title apartments? How secure is the investment? How is ownership attained? Can they be financed? We hope to answer some of these questions.

To start with in B.C. the term Strata Title and Condominium are synonymous. The greatest application of this type of home ownership is in low and high rise buildings. It provides in effect, a form of "vertical subdivision". It is this aspect of subdividing vertical structures into various "strata" or levels, or portion of levels, which has led to the alternative name for condominium, STRATA-TITLE. Each of these levels or portions of levels in a single building thus can be sold with INDIVIDUAL TITLE.

YOUR TAXES

Critics Urged to Hold Fire

By I. H. ASPER

The curtain is about to rise on the final act of the Canadian tax drama that began nearly a decade ago. Finance Minister Benson and his legal draftsmen are putting the final touches on what is rumored to be a massive new Income Tax Act.

It may be unveiled along with the minister's forthcoming budget, itself expected to be an important document in the light of the current economic dilemmas.

Benson has announced he will bring down the budget on a Friday afternoon in June, likely the 11th or 18th. It is expected he will concentrate his resolutions on the terrible trio: Inflation, unemployment and economic slowdown. If that weren't enough to give analysts a hectic weekend he has indicated he will concurrently table the final and specific tax reform plan the government intends to implement Jan. 1, 1972.

On the tax reform plan, Benson has several options. He can issue a new white paper setting out in lay language, as he did in November, 1969, the basic ideas the government has adopted and will introduce by legislation next fall.

On the other hand, he can choose middle ground and table a specific summary of the actual legislation. Or, he can take the nearly irreversible step of tabling the tax reform bill in final forms.

If the printers can do their thing in time, the odds are he will produce the reform bill itself. This would be the wisest course since nothing would then be left to the imagination, uncertainty would be removed, and the final submissions by the public to the government could be made.

On the assumption that the government does not relish the idea of another round of public outpourings over a set of concepts which raise more questions than they answer, it is more reasonable to expect the final legislation.

With the final chapter of the great debate now being readied for submission to the critics, all those interested in tax reform would do well to reflect on where we have gone in the past decade. All can profit from such a review.

Benson Will Likely Table Final Form of Tax Bill

The Carter commission began its journey through the tax labyrinth in 1962. It was handicapped from the beginning because its terms of reference did not allow an inquiry into the subject of government spending.

It is rather difficult to review a tax system of government without deciding how much money it should raise, how much can safely be extracted from private citizens without impairing work incentives and investments initiative, without slowing economic growth, without creating inflationary pressures and the like.

The second impediment was the royal commission's inability to design a national tax package. The federal tax structure represents only about one-half of the taxing jusisdictions in Canada.

The rate of provincial and municipal tax escalation will shortly make those taxing systems more important than the federal system to the average citizen.

For that reason, while it is understandable, but regrettable, the federal plan proposed in the Carter report did not attempt to integrate or harmonize the three often conflicting systems.

Thus the entire basis of the current tax reform legislation ignores, of necessity, the competing taxing plans of the provincial and municipal gov-

The commission reported in 1967. Its concepts were novel and many of its proposals were revolutionary. It was understandable that they should provoke a heated public debate.

Two years later, Benson produced his own white paper proposals for tax reform. His approach was to make public his proposals and invite public dialogue. The idea was courageous and commendable, but the quality of the dialogue got off on the wrong track and never recovered.

It is here where we can all learn from past mistakes. The white paper was tabled in the Commons on a Friday at 7 p.m. By Saturday morning, editorialists, financial commentators, politicians, professionals, spokesmen for labor and business, and nearly everyone with any interest at all, had expressed himself in strong agreement or disagreement.

Inflammatory words were used to condemn, extravagant adjectives to praise — and all on the most superficial, and in many cases, inaccurate analysis. The lines were quickly drawn, the extremists on both sides were firmly in command and the opportunity for reasoned debate in moderate language quickly disappeared.

You were either "for" or "against" the white paper — an impossible and intellectually unacceptable set of options.

In the result, the public was not well served. Those who have the capacity and expertise to debate the issue must also show the responsibility to see that comment this time will be reasoned, not emotional, there must be conciliation, not confrontation of opposing points of view.

In the interest of a final resolution of this unduly protracted reform of the tax system, when the bill is introduced, its complexity will dictate against expressions of instant wisdom.

There will be profound differences in point of view, but they ought only to be argued after everyone has made an exhaustive analysis of the tax bill itself.

Commentators tempted to an immediate reaction would do well to accept a moratorium on immediate conclusions. We have waited nearly 10 years for this event, it would be unfortunate if the resolution of the contentious issue is delayed by an unwarranted and ill-considered emotional uprising.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer.)

AUTHOR'S NOTE: In a recent column, reference was made to the taxability of interest earned when family allowance funds are deposited in bank accounts. The point made was that taxpayers often forget to declare this income in their tax returns, and that this interest is taxable in the hands of the family head. It should have been pointed out that the policy of the tax office is that if the funds are deposited in the wife's name, the interest will be taxable in her hands, not her husband's. This is not based on any court interpretation of the law, but on departmental policy. Thus, while it is an assistance to taxpayers who segregate the family funds, because of the lack of judicial authority behind the practice, taxpayers cannot be certain that it will be continued.

Failures of Small Businesses Have Common Cause—No Plan

By JOHN R. HEARN
Managing Partner
Wates, Peat, Marwich and Co.

Statistical reports indicate that business failures are still at a high level. The majority of these failures involve companies that fall into the category commonly referred to as small business.

Their problems have never been more acute than at the present time. Increasing competition, rising costs and decreasing profit margins emphasise that today, as never before, small business management must be well organized and efficient.

This means it must work to a plan. The alternative is either chaos, chance success or simply mediocre results and, even for the last, some planning, even if unconscious must have occurred.

What is planning in the context of small business? It might be said to consist of establishing broad objectives and then attempting to predict all factors — physical, personnel, time and economic — required to achieve these objectives.

The result, ideally, should be a logical course of action or a plan which, if followed, will ensure success.

PHYSICAL FACILITIES

Small businesses usually exists because someone has seen the opportunity to provide a service — in the broadest sense — in a particular geographic or user market.

It should be obvious, therefore, that the required premises, equipment and other physical facilities (and any expansion thereto as the business develops) should be carefully planned to ensure that profit and service are feasible.

Management Memo

The plans should include such vital matters as size, location, expandability, design and operating or production methods. While no one will argue against this and most businessmen claim that they always follow such planning steps, there are endless examples of failure to plan physical facilities adequately.

Such failures can have the most adverse results on profitability, frequently on a continuing basis.

MARKETING STRATEGY

Planning the marketing strategy must include detailed product or "service" specifications, pricing policies, geographic areas, types of customer, percentage of markets anticipated, sales promotion tactics and competitor assessment. All these factors should be carefully co-ordinated and equated with the profit objectives and financial resources.

In the small business there are weaknesses in this area. Very often product lines are too wide for adequate profitability or too narrow to provide customer service; unprofitable products are continued while profitable ones are not promoted; customers with little potential are called on regularly, while large potential customers are given comparately little selling attention; inventories are too high and become obsolete; credit policies are too liberal or not enforced.

Future profitable growth can be severely limited unless more scientific attention is given to the marketing strategy as distinct from "old fashioned" selling methods.

PERSONNEL PLANNING

The single factor that probably contributes most to success in any business enterprise is the calibre of those who handle key responsibilities.

Despite increasing automation and the vast potential of computers, people are still vital to success in business.

Indeed, as business becomes more complex and profit margins narrow, the need for high calibre personnel at middle and senior management levels grows even greater. In general, the small businessman has been slower to recognize this fact than the senior executive of the large business.

The art of effective delegation is an integral part of this concept. It can be said that the small businessman who cannot delegate effectively will, at best, remain a small businessman; he may not even be able to stay in business at all.

Personnel planning in the small enterprise must include all phases of personnel administration: recruitment, selection, training, performance appraisal, promotion and compensation.

The typical small businessman could probably best begin this process by critically analysing his own workload and his own true skills.

Any business to survive and develop must have appropriate technical skills in all main functions — production, marketing, administration and finance.

A key to success in the small business is to allocate these logically among the optimum number of appropriately qualified personnel.

ADMINISTRATION

In the small business, finance and administration can frequently be considered together; the order in which they have been referred to is deliberate. Many small businesses become insolvent, while apparently earning reasonable profits, because of failure to properly plan their financial requirements.

The question "can the capital requirements to meet the physical, marketing and personnel plans be arranged and will the overall mix produce a profit" must be answered satisfactorily before planning can be considered complete.

The financial plan thus becomes the keystone of the entire planning structure, indicating whether or not revisions in other areas are required.

Failure to meet target dates occurs in all sections of our society. Major construction projects are not completed on time; promised delivery dates of the most ordinary products are missed; financial and operating statements are produced late.

All such delays are the result, to some extent, of poor planning.

In the small business the complexities of the typical cycle of transactions are appreciably less than in the large one.

It appears, therefore, that the small businessman should be able to co-ordinate the planning and timing operations and special projects with relative ease.

The benefits accuring to the business that develops a reputation is gained, prices are less important and profit potential are greater.

No set of operating plans, however, no matter how complete and sound when prepared, can remain satisfactory indefinitely.

Conditions change and the successful management of a business requires that operations change and the successful management of a business requires that operations change to meet these conditions.

Thus, a system of control and follow up should be instituted and plans should be reviewed regularly so that appropriate changes can be introduced.

Nu-West

Investment dealers are offering a $3 million subordinated convertible debenture issue for the western-based Nu-West Development Corp. Ltd., which came out Thursday at par with coupon at 8¾ per cent.

From June 15 to June 15, 1976, each $1,000 worth of bonds is convertible into 95 shares of Nu-West common, giving it a value of $10.50 a share compared with this week's price at Toronto Stock Exchange of about $9.

From 1976 to 1991 the conversion feature drops to 85 Nu-West common per $1,000 in debentures, or an $11.75 value.

Ocean

Ocean Cement and Supplies Ltd. says it is not aware of any reason for unusual activity in trading of its stock on Toronto Stock Exchange this week.

In October the company reported an offer to minority stockholders was pending, at a price "materially above recent stock exchange quotations." At that time Ocean was trading around $18.50. The prospective purchaser was not identified.

Shares rose from $23 to $25 Wednesday, and to $26.50 Thursday. Friday, trading was off about 50 cents.

Associated Portland Cement Manufacturers Ltd., which was friendly to the offer but intended to keep its majority, is the owner of 51½ per cent of Ocean stock.

Indusmin

A joint undertaking to develop the commercial potential of a bentonite deposit in the Avonlea district, 40 miles southwest of Regina, has been agreed upon by Flin Flon Mines Ltd. and Indusmin Ltd., a company controlled by Falconbridge Mines Ltd.

The companies hold 10,000 acres where the rare clay has been discovered. If sufficient reserves are outlined, a 10,000-tons-per-year plant is planned to provide treated bentonite for the steel industry, which uses it to pelletize iron ore.

All bantonite used by the Canadian steel industry — 250,000 tons a year — is imported at present.

Electrohome

Electrohome Ltd. had record sales and profits in the first quarter and reduced long-term debt by about $250,000.

For the first time, results were presented on a consolidated basis with subsidiaries Electrohome Communications Ltd. and Central Ontario Television Ltd.

Sales were up 21.1 per cent from $11.13 million to $13.49 million, while net income rose 44 per cent from $316,860 to $456,300, or 74 cents a share compared with 62 cents, even though there were more shares outstanding this year.

Long-term debt stood at $3.24 million.

To Dom

A new extendable debenture issue by Toronto Dominion Bank, which came out Thursday at par 7 per cent, was reported to have had few buyers at that price and within a few hours the price was cut to 99.25.

There were more takers at the revised offering, which will yield 7.18 per cent for five years and better than 8 per cent to maturity.

Dated June 15, the $30 million issue is extendable from July 1, 1976, to July 1, 1991, at 8 per cent.

Old Reporters Never Die . . . or Reform

(Second of a Series)

By JOHN MOSEDALE
Special to the Times

NEW YORK — It's been said that if you asked him to describe his occupation in one word, Ed Sullivan would answer "reporter."

There is more to this than the old "I used to be a newspaperman myself" gambit. The host of the longest-running show on television recently met an interviewer with a typed autobiography noting his birthdate — September 28, 1902, on East 114th Street in what was then mostly white Harlem in New York City — and a careful tracing of his newspaper career. There is no mention of television.

Assuredly, he could assume that his eminence as a guru in the global jungle would not be overlooked. But it was as a newspaperman that Sullivan first achieved worldly success, newspaper work that opened the door to show business and even today, after meetings with presidents and the royal majesties of mankind, Sullivan reserves a special awe when he speaks of the athletes he covered as a young reporter in a golden age: Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Helen Mills Moody, Bobby Jones and, "I still say Bill Tilden would have beaten any tennis player."

Long since financially secure with a weekly income running into six figures, Sullivan continues to write two columns a week for $250 for the Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News Syndicate.

His father, a customs bureau employee, moved the family from a deteriorating Manhattan neighborhood to Port Chester, N.Y., where Sullivan attended parochial grammar and high school, played football and baseball and took a $10 a week job for the local daily.

He moved on to sports reporting in Philadelphia and New York, including a stint on the sex-packed Daily Graphic of fragrant memory before moving to the Daily News in 1932, where his first column assailed the keyhole journalism, blind items and scandal-mongering already abloom in the public graffiti of Broadway and Hollywood.

CASUAL CURSES

In conservation, Sullivan's speech is sprinkled with the casual curses of locker room and backstage, but a sense of propriety, even courtliness, extends to his personal as well as professional life.

His nightclubbing and Broadway theatre appearances are always with his wife, the former Sylvia Weinstein, whom he married 41 years ago. Neither changed religion. Their daughter, Betty, was raised in his Roman Catholic faith.

The Sullivans have lived in a six-room office-suite at Delmonico's hotel for 27 years. They owned a country place in Connecticut, but Sullivan, a "city slicker," never liked it and they gave it up not long after he was nearly killed in an automobile accident returning to it after a show in 1956.

Sullivan detests home cooking, so Sylvia has never learned. They eat their meals in restaurants. Neither finds domesticity dull, being able to afford all the little extravagances: his twenty-fifth anniversary present to her was a Renoir; more casually, he once had Exio Pinza sing "Some Enchanted Evening" outside her door.

TO FILL A VOID

The finances weren't always that way. With his debut as a News columnist, Sullivan moonlighted in radio, emceed vaudeville shows and benefits, wrote and appeared in bad movies and produced a Broadway show. It was his work as host of the Daily News Harvest Moon Ball that lead CBS to ask him to fill some of the great void in early television with a variety show called "Toast of the Town" until it became the Ed Sullivan Show in 1955.

Sullivan was the first to use Negro entertainers on prime time television. Searching for the very best in entertainment, he never thought otherwise, his family training and youth all emphasizing racial tolerance. When advertising agencies expressed concern about the "Southern market," Sullivan said, "They're going on the show, and if you want to get the hell out, fine."

Today, after a cornucopia of honors for his work in promoting racial harmony before it was accepted thing, Sullivan simply says, "I've never understood why I got praise for it." Pegleg Bates, Louis Armstrong and Bill "Bojangles" Robinson were among his early guests. When Robinson died broke, Sullivan, anonymously, paid the funeral expenses.

HE WAS WRONG

Acceptance of his self-assurance about entertainment standards has produced such moments as Rise Stevens singing "Cement Mixer," Burt Lancaster reviving a youthful acrobatic routine and Lauren Bacall reciting "Casey at the Bat."

But Sullivan was upset when Secret Service men upset the backstage operation during Margaret Truman's television debut "until a few weeks later, armed fanatics tried to kill President Truman at Blair House in Washington, and then I realized it was I who had been wrong."

Amid the hoopla and press agentry of his twentieth anniversary on air, Sullivan told a Life magazine correspondent that "with the exception" of network chairman William F. Paley, the corporation was riddled with "ungrateful, impolite people. I've never heard anything vaguely approaching 'thank you' or 'good job.'. . . When you consider the money I've made for CBS! We've kept their Sunday night supremacy going for years with the strength we've provided for the programs that precede and follow us, the performers who worked here and then went on to their own CBS shows . . .

MAUSOLEUM

"At first I was hurt, but now I don't give a damn. I know them for what they are, and my relationship is strictly business. Thank God Bill Paley isn't like all the rest of the jerks in that mausoleum."

The celebrated Sullivan temper subsequently soothed — "I'm a pop-off" — but he remains no automatic respecter of reputations. If one date can be said to mark the emergence of white rock into the national conscious, it was Sullivan's introduction of the Beatles on U.S. television, Feb. 9, 1964.

When the late Brian Epstein, the group's manager, approached Sullivan saying, "I would like to see the exact wording of your introduction," Sullivan responded, "I would like to see you get lost."

The Sullivan years, then, were marked if not marred by show biz feuds that moved items like the Six Day War from the front page of tabloids. These included a costly ratings battle with Steve Allen, highlighted when Elvis Presley, at the apogee of his early game, appeared on the Allen show. Sullivan responded by snatching Presley, tightwalking the difference between fame and notoriety, for three appearances at $50,000, as Sullivan ordered his cameras to shoot above the celebrated and rotating Presley pelvis.

SINATRA'S AD

When Sullivan, in an agreement with Sam Goldwyn, showed a film clip from "Guys and Dolls," old friend Frank Sinatra complained, at one point taking a full-page Variety ad saying, "Dear Ed, you're sick. Frankie, P.S., sick, sick, sick!" But Sinatra rushed in as substitute host when Sullivan was injured in an auto accident and subsequently appeared on the program, as did his son, Frank, Jr., and daughter Nancy.

Similar disputes with comedian Jackie Mason over an alleged obscene gesture on air, and Walter Winchell were ironed out. Mrs. Sullivan says today, "Ed has a short memory for feuds."

If there is an exception, it involves Jack Paar in 1961. The trouble started when Sullivan guests, often paid in the thousands, subsequently turned up on the Paar program for a standard $320. Sullivan said he would match that payment for anyone who did so. Paar responded with customarily low-keyed cries of dictatorship.

The thing degenerated into name-calling. "Ingrate," said Sullivan who had put Paar on his show for $5,000 after the latter was fired by CBS; Paar called Sullivan "liar." A scheduled on-the-air joint appearance dissolved in a welter of Israeli-Egyptian charges and counter-charges.

"Almost everyone I fueded with are friends now," said Sullivan. "Jack Paar is an exception," said Mrs. Sullivan, "because he's not around."

BOATS HAVE CHOICE: HEAVE TO OR STOP!

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Such landlubber signs as "Stop" and "Keep Right" are in the works for United States waterways in order to cut down accidents, the coast guard's water safety chief says.

"We're not trying to reach the people who know nautical terms," Rear Adm. Austin C. Wagner said in an interview Thursday.

"A dam is built, forming a 20-mile lake and suddenly Farmer Brown is a boater. We have to reach him. Too many people just don't know how dangerous the water can be."

Speech-Writers Scuttle Greene's Home-Coming

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Those cliche-cluttered statements by cabinet ministers whenever they return from trips abroad may just get better editing in future.

After the hammering absorbed by Energy Minister J. J. Greene in the Commons Thursday following a statement about a recent trip to Australia, other ministers are bound to mention the matter to their speech writers.

Traditionally the external affairs minister has been the unchallenged champion of the junket jargon.

With all their speech-writing officials schooled in diplomatic niceties, all Canada's external affairs ministers have managed to report on frank, friendly and fruitful exchanges of views.

And all foreign talks have had a remarkable tendency to be held in a "spirit of co-operation between our two countries."

LITTLE CRITICISM

For years, opposition MPs have sat quietly through these ministerial statements, invariably opening their remarks by welcoming back the minister and then going on to talk about general problems facing the countries involved. The statements themselves have seldom been criticized.

But when Mr. Greene had finished reporting to Parliament Thursday, the opposition let him have all barrels. They didn't even pause to welcome him home.

In fact, they didn't even seem to notice that Mr. Greene avoided using the term "frank and friendly" in discussing his Australian talks. His statement said the talks were conducted "in an atmosphere of friendship and frankness."

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said that on the basis of the statement Mr. Greene must be considered a strong candidate for the external affairs portfolio.

Mr. Greene had said Canada and Australia share many common interests. It was in the interest of both countries to get the optimum price for raw resources. Objectives could best be attained by "working more closely together and having a continuing association."

PASSAGES SENSATIONAL

Some of the passages in the statement, said Mr. Baldwin, were sensational.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis was less gentle. He referred to the minister's statement as meaningless nonsense and Mr. Greene shouldn't have wasted the time of Parliament.

"I hope the minister had a good time in Australia."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette dismissed the statement as "a piece of rhetoric which means nothing."

Suds Kill Fish

LIBOURNE, France (Reuter) — Thousands of fish died when the Barbane River in southwest France was flooded with liquid soap from a truck after an accident near here. Local fishermen are considering legal action against the owner of the truck and an inquiry has opened to determine responsibility for the cause of the accident.

VEGA
CHEVROLET

IF WE DON'T HAVE WHAT YOU'RE LOOKING FOR IN A LITTLE CAR, YOU'RE NOT LOOKING FOR A LITTLE CAR.

Whatever you want in a little car, Vega's the little car you want. Because with four models to choose from—a Hatchback coupe, a two-door sedan, a Kammback wagon and a panel express—one will be just what you want. So don't be fooled by imitations. Vega gives you standard front disc brakes for sure, straight stops. Because we think it's important that the little car that goes so well, stops well, too. And to make it go, there's a standard 2300 cc. engine made from an aluminum/silicon alloy that's light, but strong. So you can scoot right up big hills or around other cars when you have to pass.
And there's Full Coil suspension, because you don't like to bounce around when you're driving, even in a little car. Go right ahead and relax, too, because the front bucket seats (standard) and rear seats are very comfortable. We build them with deep, full foam.
So, if you're looking for a little car—find out all about Vega. You'll see what a little car should be.

You could win up to $30,000.
Time is running out on the big Moneymiles Sweepstakes, so hustle down to your participating Chevy dealer's and get all the details. And drive Vega, the little car that does everything well.

$2351.
Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price for this Vega 2-door sedan at Oshawa, Ontario.
Price quoted includes Federal Sales Taxes. Provincial and local taxes, license, accessories, optional equipment and transportation charges are additional.

You cut down on air pollution, too.

About a decade ago, we made a promise to remove our cars from the air pollution problem.
Today we're making good. We're almost there.
1971 Chevrolets emit 80% less hydrocarbons than typical cars of roughly ten years ago.
And about 2/3 less carbon monoxide.
Best of all, we're testing devices that can reach control levels as high as 95%.
But it hasn't been easy. We've had to develop devices that muzzle and reburn exhaust fumes.
Devices that check wayward gases around the crankcase vent.
Devices that prevent the escape of raw gasoline vapors.
We've even had to invent instruments sophisticated enough to measure the effectiveness of these devices.
The goal and reward have been one and the same: cleaner air.
Estimates are that if all North American industry could make similar strides, and all cars on the road today were emission controlled like '71 Chevrolets, we'd be breathing 1940 air.
You might call that a great step backward. A step we've been proud to take.

That Old Socialist Battle Is Still Being Fought Today

By GEORGE WOODCOCK

David Stafford, of the Department of History at the University of Victoria, has just published a book, From Anarchism to Reformism, whose subject may seem remote indeed from Canada in 1971.

It is a study of the political activities between 1870 and 1890 of a French doctor, Paul Brousse, who began as a fiery anarchist, one of the earliest advocates of the "propaganda of the deed," and ended, as head of the Paris Municipal Council, welcoming to the French capital that notorious enemy of anarchists, King Alfonso XIII of Spain.

FROM ANARCHISM TO REFORMISM, by David Stafford. University of Toronto Press. $15.

In fact, Brousse's career, as Professor Stafford shows by patient analysis, was not so contradictory as it appeared; there is a direct, if subterranean, connection between the all-or-nothing revolutionary who was the young Brousse, and the elder self who adopted for his very pragmatic type of socialism the descriptive title of "possibilism."

By analogy, we can also find a link — and not a deeply buried one — between what went on in the tiny European socialist movement of the late 19th century and what happens in their successor movements even today.

The conflict that is the dramatic centre of Professor Stafford's book is fundamentally the same conflict as that which gave an unaccustomed excitement to the recent convention of the New Democratic Party in Canada.

For if we lightly assume that the struggle between Lewis and Laxer, the fight between the factions within the NDP, is a peculiarly Canadian phenomenon, we are neglecting the whole historical background to the movement whose local divisions were so evident in Ottawa.

Overtly, those divisions seemed to centre around the burning current question of Canada repossessing her resources. But it was not this particular issue that reverberated with 19th century echoes. It was deeply differing views of socialism that became evident in the struggle between the Lewisites and the Wafflers.

Temper Idealism

On the one side stood the old guard of the NDP, to whom the name of "possibilism" might justly be applied, since they seek to bring changes which will cause the minimum of conflict and to achieve solutions which will temper idealism with a recognition of social realities.

I am not suggesting that the Lewisites resemble anarchists — far from it — but there is a strong libertarian strain in the traditional CCF-NDP outlook, and this relates it to Paul Brousse, the subject of From Anarchism to Reformism, whose principal consistent attitude was his opposition to the authoritarianism of Marx and his disciples.

On the other side, talking a great deal of civil liberties, but in fact representing a doctrinaire and authoritarian program of nationalization and centralized state control, stand the would-be kingmakers who thrust Laxer forward as their representative.

Many are avowed Marxists; others are near-Marxists; all are doctrinaires with an unalloyed sense of their own rectitude and an illusion — which they share with Marx — that by the use of political power the world can be basically changed.

Near Grassroots

Once again, in that meeting in Ottawa, as in hundreds of socialist conventions since the 1870s, the old conflict within the First International has been re-enacted; the Marxists, the absolute state-socialists, the believers in politics as a way to change the real nature of human society, opposed to those who, in their various ways, seek programs that are nearer to the grassroots of society, to its social and economic foundations.

In the First International the opposition to Marx took the form of a curious alliance between English trade unionists and anarchists from the Latin countries; it was not an entirely accidental combination.

What David Stafford does — and this is the original element in his book — is to take the career of Paul Brousse, who started as an anarchist militant and ended as the French equivalent of a Fabian socialist, and to show that, once one strips away the romantic and usually false myths about anarchists as men of terror, there is a real connection between anarchism, which bases its theory on social and economic rather than political functions as the real basis of society, and the pragmatic and often libertarian attitudes of the non-Marxist socialists.

One could make a very interesting similar study, showing how the anti-Marxist elements in the British Labour Party derived originally, through Robert Owen, from the father of all anarchists, William Godwin; one could also show how far William Morris' friendship with Paul Brousse's anarchist friend, Prince Peter Kropotkin, renewed the libertarian and anti-Marxist strain in British socialism during the 1880's.

By illustrating in this way, through the example of one man's political evolution, the lasting division within the socialist tradition, David Stafford has performed a real and needed service to the history of political movements. He has also given a certain encouragement to those cynics who claim that the more things change, the more they stay the same.

Maquinna

An 'Amateur's' Labor of Love Puts Life Into Our History

By PETER MURRAY

Ian Mahood says frankly he is an amateur writer. Perhaps only an amateur would have attempted this fictional account of the life and times of the legendary Indian leader Maquinna.

It is an ambitious project and to say that Mahood has not fully succeeded does not mean his book lacks merit. If he misses the artistry of Christie Harris' Raven's Cry, a masterful fictional history of the great Haida carvers, Mahood does have a gripping story to tell that rises above his wooden prose.

The story of the ambitious Nootka chief who held sway over the west coast of Vancouver Island during the latter half of the 18th century is one of the highpoints of British Columbia's brief known history.

Mahood is sympathetic at the same time he shows how the often over-bearing Maquinna contributed to his own downfall and the despair of his people in a futile bid to trade in furs with the newly-arrived and grasping white man.

His life has all the ingredients of classic tragedy and Mahood deserves thanks, particularly in this centennial year as we delve into our past, for tackling the project. This obvious labor of love involved considerable research and was published at his own expense by the author.

He must have known that show-off reviewers would jump on the inevitable errors and complain about his lack of style — and anticipated as much, in fact, in a refreshingly candid press release accompanying review copies of the book.

Others have pointed out that in some incidents he contradicts the relatively few known facts about the Maquinna era. I noted that he misplaced Clo-oose at the entrance to Nitinat Lake, when it is in fact two miles down the coast. The stockaded village he refers to is actually Whyack. I was also annoyed by the sloppy editing, misspellings and numerous typographical errors.

These however are trivial mistakes that can be corrected in later editions. For the book deserves a wide circulation, especially in the schools, to bring about a greater awareness of the heritage of our first citizens, the Indians, and an appreciation of the natural splendors of the west coast.

THE LAND OF MAQUINNA, by Ian S. Mahood. Agency Press. $7.95.

For this is what Mahood communicates best. He loves the land and admires the culture developed by the Indians before the white man put his deadly touch upon it.

Mahood is a forester and part owner of a logging company which operates in the Nootka area. His book also includes a separate pictorial section glorifying current logging practices which demands comment.

If only the sustained yield resources policy was being applied as conscientiously as Mahood would have us believe. For example, he gives us an idyllic photograph of the Nitinat River meandering through second growth forest. But it is not the complete picture. Just a short distance downstream from his viewpoint I could show him a tributary stream choked with recent logging debris where it enters the Nitinat and ruined as a fish-spawning bed.

Not far away are some once-beautiful lakes with not a tree left standing around their snag-littered shorelines. They are spoiled for recreation for many years to come.

And steep, rocky hillsides that took eons to accumulate a thin protective soil cover now made barren again by logging that allowed this cover to be eroded away. They stand as ugly monuments to our greed.

I believe Ian Mahood is the kind of logger who cares about these things, but I also think he does us a disservice by pretending that all is well in the forest industry. It must do much better, either through its own management or at government insistence.

Recent surveys have shown that less than one acre in seven cut by the loggers is being replanted. This figure must be improved if B.C. is to continue to profit from its forest wealth.

To bring this about logging must be confined to areas that can be seeded again. And now that enjoyment of the forest has become so important to our lives much greater care must be taken to preserve the lakes and streams.

We look to men like Ian Mahood to provide the leadership toward these goals.

Unprepared for War

By R. H. ROY

Of the various army and navy official histories published in Canada since the end of the Second World War, this volume is without a doubt the most interesting and most valuable.

For almost 25 years C. P. Stacey was Director of the Army Historical Section and is presently a professor of history at the University of Toronto. This acknowledged doyen of Canadian military historians has had full access to all the relevant official documents in the possession of the Department of National Defence, as well as the Mackenzie King Papers and other private collections.

ARMS, MEN AND GOVERNMENTS, by C. P. Stacey. Queen's Printer. $12.

Together with personal interviews he has had with leading wartime figures, he has woven together an exceptionally clear and vivid story of Canadian wartime policies and the politicians who made them.

Canada entered the war almost completely unprepared. In the decade after 1918 there seemed to be no threat on the horizon, and in the 'thirties, when Hitler, Mussolini and the rest began sharpening their sabres, Canada was caught in an economic depression. The strength of the armed forces was minuscule, their equipment obsolescent, training limited and appropriations miserly.

Not only were our defences at an extremely low ebb, but the attitude of cabinet ministers and certain key civil servants verged on isolationism and neutralism. Mackenzie King, who thought of Canadian wartime commitment in the field almost solely in terms of avoiding conscription, was not only prime minister but held the External Affairs portfolio as well. His two senior officials in that department were Dr. O. D. Skelton and Loring Christie. Both men fed King's distrust of the army.

Stacey writes that, in the crisis years before the war, "if there was an argument between National Defence and External Affairs, 'the latter invariably won'."

He adds: "The Chiefs of Staff regarded Skelton as an enemy of defensive preparations. Skelton and some of his associates ... clearly regarded the armed forces with suspicion, considering that their activities tended to involve Canada in dangerous entanglements abroad."

Colonel Crerar, later the commander of the Canadian Army, considered Loring to be "a super-isolationist". Not until the very last moment did either of these two External Affairs men change their attitude.

This attitude also accounted for the lack of pre-war military co-ordination between Canada and Britain or Canada and the United States. As the author scathingly writes: "The absence of even the simplest planning for such co-ordination before September, 1939 is an absurdity and an affront to military commonsense."

Yet as late as 1937, senior officers attending the Imperial Conference "were admonished in strong terms against involving their country in anything that could in any way be regarded as a commitment." Indeed, when war came, no military information had been exchanged between Canada and Britain or Canada and Newfoundland regarding the latter's defence.

"Military absurdity," Stacey notes, "could not have gone much further."

It is not easy to point out where Stacey is at his best for there are few aspects of Canadian war policy he does not cover and cover exceptionally well. His comments on Mackenzie King, however, are most interesting, because of the political authority King wielded and the decisions he made.

Canada's minor role in deciding wartime strategy was due not only to King, but to "two fundamental errors of military policy." Stacey sees these as permitting our overseas air force squadrons to be removed from Canadian control and, second, agreeing to move a Canadian Corps to Italy, thus splitting the Canadian Army.

Probably the most interesting section of the book at least to this reviewer — is that dealing with the 1944 conscription crisis. It is rare indeed when one can term any portion of an official history "gripping", but the chapters dealing with this critical period of the Canadian wartime effort are superb.

They Kept Peace in Wilder Days

By TORCHY ANDERSON

It might be said, with some sardonic justification, that there are two compartments of our provincial history. The upfront history of pot-bellied politicians and long speeches, and the backstairs history of tough desperate men who did their talking with a six-gun or a Winchester.

This attractive book deals with the latter and the star role of The British Columbia Provincial Police. Cecil Clark was a policeman who saw and heard a lot of history and has written a series of cases with a delightful insight and an occasional touch of humor.

TALES OF THE BRITISH COLUMBIA PROVINCIAL POLICE, by Cecil Clark. Gray's Publishing. $7.50.

A good many newcomers to B.C. may not know that we ever had a provincial police force and, further, that it was in business long before the Royal Canadian Mounted Police force was organized. The Mounties took over provincial policing in 1950 and with the duties a good many of the provincial constables and officers.

Here is a collection of articles that, for my money, outshines most "police" fiction. The provincials did some good detective work, sometimes they were lucky, some died on the job. But they kept the peace by hard work.

Kitwanga, Kitwancool, Skeena, Kitseguecla, Metlakatla, Black Canyon, Wildhorse Creek — these are a few of the place names in the sonorous chorus of the violent side of our history.

There was plenty of powder burned and blood spilled in the incidents that dot the story of the police in their struggle to keep the peace. They met Indian trouble, they dealt with the toughest of the Cariboo gold rushers, the railway construction tough guys, and those deadly gents who ran booze to United States during Mr. Hoover's "glorious experiment".

If Inspector "Nobby" Clark had not recalled it who would know that there was a shoot-out on the main drag of New Hazleton that would have out-gunned the best that Dodge City could produce?

During construction of the (then) Grand Trunk Pacific nine Russians, said to be looking for funds to help brother revolutionaries back home, held up The Union Bank of Canada.

To scare the bank manager one of the Russians fired a shot. That was a mistake. Citizens became alarmed and then came on the run armed with handguns, rifles, shotguns. The leader of this do-it-yourself police force — the one provincial constable was stationed four miles away in Hazleton — was a husky fighting parson, Rev. Donald Redmond McLean, known around town as "Doc".

As the street fight started Doc and his Lee-Enfield were joined behind a rock pile by "Arizona" Smith and his "thutty-thutty" while other citizens blazed away from vantage points. A fellow in the barber chair almost got a closer shave when a bandit bullet crashed through the front window.

When the shooting stopped there were two dead men on the sidewalk, three wounded in the street and one heading for the bush with the money. They never found a trace of man or money.

Because it presents exciting scenes from our past and is devoid of dullness this book could pass for fiction but it IS history and, as such, important.

Grappling With Other Realities

By STEVE HUME

It almost hurts your head to read The Cloud Chamber, the latest novel by Dexter Masters.

The book is one of those intellectually impressive works that demand more than just the attention of the reader. It demands thoughtful analysis and careful consideration of the philosophical implications of what the writer is trying to say.

What Masters is trying to say in his second major novel is not easily or glibly said by anyone. It is, to use the jargon of the times, very heavy stuff.

THE CLOUD CHAMBER, by Dexter Masters. Little, Brown. $7.95.

At 302 pages the book is still dense. Jammed with philosophical complexities, unanswered questions and intricate social and psychological networks that require a great deal of concentration to puzzle out.

It is not that Masters is striving for complexity as some kind of pandering to the critics' axiom that if it's obscure it must be good.

The author is grappling with problems and concepts that are too large for the human mind. They are problems that go beyond the clear precision of the natural sciences — problems most scientists prefer to ignore; concepts that go beyond the orthodox difficulties of philosophy and religion.

It is apparent after a few dozen pages that this author is painfully trying to come to grips with other realities than those to which his scientific training has conditioned him.

And Masters has an impeccable scientific background.

A nuclear physicist of the first rank, Masters recognized early the threat of nuclear catastrophe. His book One World or None, a compendium of material by such scientists as Einstein and Oppenheimer, was published in 1946 and is still a classic.

Masters has been wartime consultant to the Office of Scientific Research and Development and a member of the MIT Radiation Laboratory. He has also been a director of the Consumers Union.

True to form, The Cloud Chamber is a novel of Atom Age America. The time is indeterminate but it is clear Masters' warnings are that it is getting closer.

The people populating Masters' world are people of today: people identified more by their social roles and offices than by their human uniqueness or their personalities.

There is a General, never identified, a Priest, a troop of Boy Scouts, the enigmatic and mysterious figure of scientist Will Kessler — a dead man whose philosophical legacy lives after him and provides the substance of the book.

Wars Carefully Planned

The landscape is of a continent blasted and ravaged by carefully planned wars sponsored by the para-military industrial complexes that control the state through Congressional committee.

The social structure is of an entire nation gone underground in defence against the devastation.

Masters' concern lies with the application of science to humanity and, vice versa, the application of certain non-measureable human realities to scientific process and procedure.

The Cloud Chamber is named after an instrument of physicists in which atoms can be traced. The collisions and disintegrations of the building blocks of matter can be observed in a dance of clouds that can be either beautifully meaningless or an indication of reality, depending on your point of view.

Will Kessler, the dead physicist and the main character of the book, is a man who has become aware at the end of his life that his science is but a keyhole through which he has been observing the greater mysteries of the universe.

His philosophical observations are repeated throughout the book.

But Kessler never appears. He is the atom in the cloud chamber, and he is important or absurd, valuable or useless according to the point of view.

It is a point of view that continually shifts. The narrator is sometimes a former student of Kessler's, sometimes a lover, the Priest, the General, the Boy Scouts looking at his shiny statue.

These shifts are what makes the book difficult to read, but they are essential to an understanding of what Masters is trying to say about science and society in the age of the hydrogen bomb.

It would be a mistake to take this novel as a polemic or an experiment in future shock. The guts of the book are the philosophy of science and the fact that most scientists have no philosophy are merely functions of a technological society with geometric demands and mechanical rewards.

Taking a Random Walk

The first book of the novel is entitled An Analysis of the Obvious and it begins with a quote from the dead Kessler.

"There are moments when the tide of man's life on earth pauses and begins slowly to shift — in which direction neither a man coming in nor a man going out can tell for the life of him, though always later it will be found to have been obvious."

The narrator, the former student, says "the random walk is a perfectly respectable process in science, and I see no reason why I shouldn't use it, too."

It is "a random walk through a set of events and relationships, supplemented by suppositious and even inventions, all to an end of a sort, though to see some things made clear in the light of others, and of course to raise some questions."

The most difficult of those questions arises in the second book of the novel, A Random Walk.

It centres on an inscription on Kessler's shiny new statue: "We have suffered enough to be wise." Nobody in the novel understands the inscription.

"The old Greeks didn't have the facilities to uncover their errors, and they had all those heady insights. Eighteenth century man knew more and didn't know enough to doubt what he knew. Happy, happy times! But poor, poor Kessler, who yearned for understanding of everything. And what did he find?

"Chaos down in the microcosm with all the particles not ever to be measured or seen. Chaos in the macrocosm with all the particles not ever to be measured or seen. Chaos in the libraries, where immutable laws have to be torn out or blotted over. Chaos in the world at large and chaos beyond."

Terrifying Comparisons

The point of view switches again to survivors on a mountainside: "all fellow passengers on the same small spaceship circling in the cold."

It is a simple and detached observation. While the survivors continue to feed on the ugly little wars in terror of the "big one that will cure the disease," earth continues to circle indifferently.

And later in the book Masters draws a terrifying comparisons between the latter days of the Roman Empire and what will happen to us because the scientists are unable to see what is happening to themselves or their own patterns in the fabric of society.

Kessler is quoted: "You know, the greatest of all mysteries is man's insistence that all mysteries conceal or reflect his own.

"If only he can solve something out there, he thinks, he'll solve the mystery of himself. Give him an inch of feeling and he'll invent a god. Give him an inch of data and he'll evolve a theory. As for the mysteries — well, they change from time to time, they do that, don't they."

The Cloud Chamber is too large a book to effectively review in the columns of a newspaper. Even a lengthy essay would be inadequate.

Perhaps it is enough to say that this is one of the most intellectually profound books published in the past few years.

Napoleon Lost War But Won the Film

Waterloo came as a pleasant surprise for me.

It looked so bad in the previews, and few kinds of movies are duller than historical epics. All those Great Men prating around like bemedalled brass gods mouthing Great Words about Great Events. How ridiculous.

But Waterloo is all passion. The inevitable pomp and circumstance — flags, horns, the omnipresent cast of thousands — are just fluff before the gutty grandeur of Napoleon and the silky majesty of Wellington.

But let's not say much about Wellington, for everyone knows he won. Waterloo is Napoleon's movie, and in Rod Steiger's hands he is a magnificent loser.

Steiger controls the movie. Through the sweat and bounce of his tight, fat body, exudes a soul intoxicated with power. The power which we like to think history once surrendered completely to genius.

This is the Napoleon which producer Dino De Laurentiis has created. The historical man is irrelevant here. Waterloo conjures a wild, romantic emperor-general, and Steiger makes him human.

Surely there must be some truth in this conception of Napoleon. And if there's none, who cares, the movie's good.

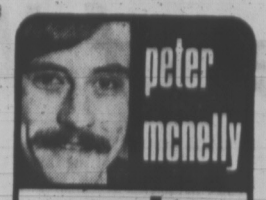
Some of the crowd scenes are among the finest I've ever seen, because they really bring off the feeling of a happy mob. The great battle is presented in full detail. Napoleon and Wellington watch it all through spyglasses, debating each other's strategies like chess masters. And they are far from certain whose plan is the shrewder.

Their regiments trundle forward at their total command, then feint retreats, run or stoically encounter slaughter. These war scenes far surpass anything done in Patton.

'Waterloo' Dominated By Steiger



Waterloo doesn't waste much time on politics or high society, though the film suffers through a foolish episode during a military ball at Wellington's camp in Brussels.

The plot is mostly a succinct linkage of events which bring the giants to battle. And as the events develop, Steiger steals the movie from Christopher Plummer (Wellington).

Plummer is a fine actor, but he simply cannot compete with Steiger. Plummer's stuck with this creepy British aristocrat for a character, a man who fancies wine and wit as much as victory.

Wellington may have been a fine gentleman, I have no way of knowing. But given a choice between a captive of the class system and a sweaty, populist hero however false these caricatures may be — I'll side with the populist.

That's the choice Waterloo offers. It's such a simple and romantically drawn film that the best thing to do is take sides.

One final note. The photography accomplishes a difficult task. It overcomes the breadth of the events to breathe yet another dimension of humanity into the movie.

By cleverly shooting the scenes between short and long-distance ranges and by always catching the characters in motion, director Sergei Bondarchuk virtually eliminated the scarecrow woodenness which has killed so many movies of the same scale.

If you go and see Waterloo don't get mad because it didn't say so many things which could have been said about war and power. Just enjoy it.

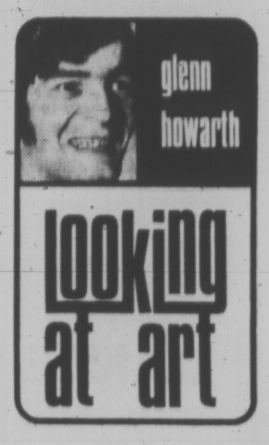
Far East Art Gives Gallery Stature



The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has been specializing in Far Eastern art and has built a collection of international importance. Though the gallery's grant from the city and municipalities falls short of paying basic operating costs, the collection has grown by way of gifts.

Last year when the gallery was in financial danger, the intermunicipal council voted special funds. Had the gallery with its collection now valued at one and one-quarter million dollars failed financially, it would have embarrassed the cultural pride of all Victorians.

As a consequence, this year the gallery's grant might be increased from $12,000 to $21,000. Oak Bay and Esquimalt have agreed to this doubled figure; Victoria and Saanich have still to decide.

If the money is granted, only the gallery's deficit will be repaired; there will be no surge of funds into gallery projects or purchases. Compare this with the galleries of Saskatoon and London, Ont., cities of similar population; their grants are $110,000.

Outstanding among the gifts to the gallery have been those of Mrs. Isabel Pollard. In memory of her late husband, a silk importer in trade with the Orient, she has given Japanese works of all periods, lately a series of contemporary prints.

There are reasons for the gallery focusing on the Far East. British Columbia is on the Pacific Rim. The geographical relation to the East is no more distant than to Europe. With Japan rising as a world power, the art gives hints to a cultural history that must be recognized. Today there is much interest in Far Eastern religion and philosophy for which art provides documentation.

Also, Eastern art is not as expensive as Western. European master works of good quality bring hundreds of thousands of dollars. The competition for these works is keen among the large museums in metropolitan centres.

However, as more museums begin to recognize the importance of the East, prices will rise. They have already begun to do so.

Another advantage to collecting Eastern work is the presence in Victoria of Old China Hands. Traders, sailors, professionals, they lived in the Far East and brought their collections of art with them to Victoria on retirement. Donations from this source have been significant.

Not all works offered to the museum are worthwhile; it takes an educated eye and much study of Eastern art to collect only important and genuine works. This professional scholarship is beyond the means of the Victoria gallery's finances. Colin Graham, the director, involved in administration and other duties, cannot compete with scholars who do nothing but research, so he has relied on the Royal Ontario Museum's staff of oriental scholars. The Ontario Museum's collection rivals that of Victoria's.

It was the Royal Ontario Museum which put the Victoria Gallery in touch with Professors Trou Mori of the art department at the University of Osaka and with Bunzo Nakanishi, a connoisseur-collector. These men advise the local gallery on purchases and themselves have contributed important gifts.

Since many gifts have come directly to the gallery, they cannot oversee every acquisition. But both have come to Victoria and, staying a month, inspected the collection from top to bottom.

There are pieces of international significance. Pride of the gallery is an A-Ji-Kan symbol, a painting designed for meditation. Its main figure, almost abstract, is the Japanese ideogram representing the vowel Ah, a ritual incantation of the Tendi Sect in Kioto. There is only one other similar painting outside Japan, in Boston, and in damaged condition.

In the winter of 1972, at the Royal Ontario Museum, there will be a major exhibition of Far East works. The Ontario museum will borrow 150 of Victoria's top objects. The hard-bound catalogue for this show will be well researched and will provide needed documentation of the Victoria treasures. Doing research on Victoria's objects will be six PhD. students in art history from the University of Washington.

In the spring of 1973, 150 pieces from Ontario will come to Victoria for another exhibition. Again this will be an occasion for a catalogue.

Though the Victoria collection covers all facets of Far East art, the museum specializes in the Nanga school, having in the collection 15 high-quality pieces.

From the 10th century onwards, there have been periods when a wave of Chinese influence swept the Japanese art scene. The last of these influxes occurred near the end of the 18th century and during the beginning of the 19th. Vital Japanese painters of this period looked to China and the Ming Dynasty. Their work belongs to the Nanga school.

Having an important collection is difficult for the gallery and its volunteer workers. When a scholar arrives to study the collection, much of which is not displayed but stored in the basement, works must be unshelved, temporarily displayed and filed away again.

The growing importance of the Far East collection will not overshadow other aspects of the Art Gallery. Colin Graham, gallery director, will collect art of any tradition if the pieces are worthwhile. The gallery will continue as a showplace for local art and provide local artists with a centre of activity.

After all, there would be no art in need of preservation, no art for the eye of scholars, if there were not at sometime a community supporting contemporary artists.

Stockhausen: Prophet of New World of Sound

By PETER HEYWORTH

LONDON — The wife of a French composer found herself sitting next to Stravinsky on one of his last visits to Paris. "Do you know much Stockhausen?" he enquired. The composer's wife confessed she did not. The old man, already in his late eighties, gently placed a hand on her arm. In a conspiratorial whisper he murmured, "You should, my dear, you should."

It was a tribute of the old world to the new. No man has used the pitched notes on which Western music has been based since the Dark Ages with more exquisite precision than Stravinsky. Karlheinz Stockhausen, who last month gave a series of concerts in London, is the prophet of a new world of sound that today threatens to engulf that old order.

The musicians he has influenced range from Boulez to the Beatles (his picture appears in the portrait gallery on the sleeve of Sergeant Pepper). A whole generation of composers on the continent has grown up under his shadow. Though there have recently been occasional rumbles of dissent, his followers hang on every work and word (Stockhausen is a marathon talker — last year at Darmstadt he lectured for six hours non-stop on his own music). Nor is he just the guru of a small cult.

Guests at an evening party recently given by President Heinemann of West Germany were entertained, not by the usual string quartet, but by Stockhausen and his chosen group of musicians. At last year's Expo in Osaka a special auditorium was constructed in the German pavilion, and in it over 4,000,000 visitors attended performances of his music. One work was given 72 times.

Even the most revolutionary artist never starts entirely from scratch and Stockhausen admits a debt to Webern, who first challenged the assumption that music should be based on themes, and so holds a position in history comparable to the first abstract painters. But when in 1956, like a latter-day Martin Luther, Stockhausen thundered out his basic creed, "No neo- . . . , no repetition, no variation, no development," he was challenging the very foundations of Western music, and in each work he has subsequently produced he has moved deeper and deeper into uncharted territory with an uncanny sense of purpose and direction.

History may see the works he and Boulez composed in the early 1950s, in which every detail was determined in advance according to a rigid application of serialism, as a last desperate attempt to shore up a collapsing order. But even then, both composers were preparing their escape from a water-logged craft. This took the form of allowing chance to play a part in how any given performance of a work turned out. Boulez soon drew back from the implications of this step: his French rationalism was appalled at the prospect of the flood of dilettantism and imprecision it has unleashed.

But Stockhausen, who believes that a period of intellectualism that had its origins in the way of thinking of the ancient Greeks ended in 1945, and that we are now moving into the Age of Aquarius, a spiritual era in which we "must concentrate on the intuitive and the supra-rational," pressed ahead.

From notes he moved to symbols, and the area left undetermined in his music steadily grew until in 1968 he produced a "score" that reads like an anthology of meditative exercises. "Night Music," for instance, consists of the following instructions: "Play a vibration in the rhythm of the universe, play a vibration in the rhythm of the dream . . . and transform it slowly into the rhythm of the universe."

Meanwhile Stockhausen had opened up a whole range of new musical material — or what unbelievers would call noise. He claims that in 1952 in Paris he was the first man to make music of synthetic-electronic sounds, and he clearly considers that this alone places him as one of the great innovators of the 20th century alongside men like Planck and Einstein.

As he penetrated further into "micro-acoustical regions," he blended the sound of instruments with the sound of those instruments electronically transformed, he married electronics and the human voice, which he has also used in highly unconventional (but much imitated) ways.

Over the years he has grown less concerned with inventing new ideas in the sense of themes, and more with suggesting ways in which sounds might be treated. In a recent work, for instance, the soloist takes as his starting point any sounds he picks up on a transistor radio that take his fancy. He has introduced the idea of music moving in space (he expects there will soon be an electronic instrument that will enable sound to be projected to a given point).

Not surprisingly, these new sound resources have led to Stockhausen's growing impatience with the straitjacket of the 19th century concert hall, designed for the purposes of a conventional symphony orchestra.

As long ago as 1958 he designed an ideal auditorium, and was able to put some of his ideas into effect in the concert hall of the German pavilion at the 1970 Expo.

He has also seized every opportunity to present his music in new settings. He has performed it in vast underground gottos in the Lebanon. He has written music to be performed simultaneously in four rooms of a house.

He sees space, which electronic sound now has the power to fill at will, as providing a new musical dimension, and in June, 1971 the Berlin Tiergarten will resound to a work written specially for out of doors. Hand in hand with his mystical leanings goes an engineer's determination to exploit new technical resources and a strongly practical vein that enables him to put his wildest ideas into effect.

At each stage in his voyage of discovery Stockhausen has produced a barrage of theories and commentaries, which are regarded by a devoted band of followers as blueprints for the future. No composer since Schoenberg has commanded such near-veneration or exercised such authority on those around him. For better or for worse, no composer has made so deep an impact on the evolution of music in the past 15 years.

Stockhausen adheres to no specific theology, but his cast of mind is essentially religious and mystical, and he is much preoccupied with rather windy notions of a universal religion — in which he would serve as high-priest and spiritual guide.

At university he studied philosophy as well as music and during this period supported himself by playing in a jazz group and accompanying an itinerant conjurer with piano improvisations. In spite of his mystical leanings there is nothing in the least unworldly about him when it comes to dealing with practical musical problems.

In those post-war years Germany was only slowly resuming musical contacts with the outside world, and Stockhausen's knowledge of contemporary music barely extended beyond Schoenberg. It was the impact of Messiaen's music at the Darmstadt summer school of 1951 that opened new horizons, and the following year he went to study with him in Paris. Here he met Boulez (who, though only three years older, was already an established composer) and made his first electronic experiments. He also learnt French which, like his mid-Atlantic English he speaks today with formidable fluency and precision.

He is a tall, robust man who looks younger than his 42 years. Only surprisingly delicate hands, silky brown hair that falls on to his shoulders and huge, solemn eyes (he does not laugh easily, and least of all at himself) suggest someone out of the ordinary.

He lives with his second wife and their two children in a strikingly modern house, designed by himself, that commands fine views over the hilly country east of Cologne and is furnished in the bare style favored by German intellectuals. His wife is Mary Bauermeister, a tall, turbulent Valkyrie, who is herself a painter and sculptress of considerable distinction.

Inevitably, he is a lonely figure, who talks about the importance of loving relationships yet finds difficulty in achieving them. Boulez is perhaps the only living musician he regards as an equal (the compliment is returned) and the two men spent last Christmas together. As a result, he is surrounded by followers rather than friends.

But over them — and they include some outstandingly gifted young composers and musicians — he exerts the fascination of a guru. One clarinettist recently told me that Stockhausen enabled him to draw sounds from his instrument he didn't know it could yield.

For Stockhausen this is only natural. He regards the composer as a spiritual guide. "When he walks on to the stage, a musician should give the fabulous impression of a man who is doing a sacred service."

In recent years Stockhausen has been trying "to connect . . . the performer to the streams which flow through me . . . to the inexhaustible source that flows through us in musical vibrations." Hence the increasing role allotted to improvisation, and hence, too, the formation of a special performing group.

But Stockhausen has his own highly personal interpretation of what is and is not worthwhile improvisation. His group undergo lengthy rehearsals before they appear in public.

He himself sits at the electronic controls and when any idea he considers inappropriate is produced, he promptly phases it out by the twist of a knob. Not surprisingly, resentment among his disciples reached explosion point last year at Darmstadt. Several parted company with him and Stockhausen confessed himself surprised and deeply hurt.

There is clearly an unre-

STRAVINSKY

solved conflict between his role as the apostle of what he calls "intuitive" music and his own highly authoritarian personality.

Yet without his presence performances of his recent works are liable simply to fall apart — one reason why they have until now made little impact in Britain. That is perhaps one reason why in his most recent work he has returned to notes, which are more amenable to control than human beings.

On the other hand, his mysticism is not viewed with approval by the politically committed young, and this was one reason why in 1969 a concert in Amsterdam broke up in disorder. His willingness to grace presidential soirees, the fact that during the Paris May of 1968 he was in retreat composing Aus den sieben Tagen and a recent visit to South Africa are also held against him.

Yet it would be a mistake to suppose that Stockhausen's music is elitist. On the contrary, in recent years it has shown its power of attracting the sort of audience that has eluded most avant-garde 20th-century music. Nor is he remote from other streams, though he tends to consider them only insofar as they relate to himself.

The improvisatory element in free jazz appeals to him, though it is often "full of unconscious citations of idioms I would rather get rid of." He also feels that it tends to misuse freedom: "But that's what happens whenever people say 'Let's be free.' It produces chaos and destruction because they have never learned to use freedom as a means of restricting oneself so that others may be free."

Stockhausen is not unsympathetic to pop and much of it has been dedicated to him. But he feels that it often tries to make use of the sound combinations he has pioneered without properly understanding them. He is also mistrustful of what he calls its militaristic beat.

"It makes people march without knowing it . . . That was exactly the way the Nazis tuned in the whole population . . . Whether it's marching music, pop or even a rock beat I don't like it. I prefer Balinese music, where you feel a basic rhythm, but the individual players are floating freely."

Symphony: There Is Obvious Solution

Following comments made in this space a week ago, concerning administration problems within the Victoria Symphony Society, I met with the president and two members of the executive at their request this week.

As a result of their presentation of the situation one arrives at the conclusion, after considering and comparing all statements, that more than one personality clash is present, although that between the business manager and artistic director is most fundamental.

It is also impossible not to conclude that a great deal of time has been wasted in unnecessary cogitation over the central issue.

And that the cogitation in itself has created an atmosphere of strain and some ill will and distrust between board members and between business and artistic personnel is pretty obvious.

President Stuart Soward, immediate past president Gerald Neely and executive member Barney Simmons admit, in a written statement, "There has been a division of opinion on the board concerning the business manager . . ."

They assert that a "minority" of members felt that the manager did not have some of the qualities deemed essential for a person holding that position with the Society.

But "a majority of members . . . who dealt most often with the manager were satisfied with his performance of his duties . . ."

Further on, however, the statement declares: "The doubts which had been expressed about the business manager's abilities relative to public relations and promotions were crystalized by conflict which arose between the artistic director and the business manager, based essentially upon a difference in temperament.

"The only split which existed in the board was the manner in which this conflict should be dealt with . . . A number of meetings were held as a result of which recommendations were made to the board" (from a three-member committee struck to examine the issues on both sides.)

As the postponed meeting of the board was apparently called at a time inconvenient to all members of the special committee, none were present and the upshot was a stalemate with votes of confidence going to both central figures, despite Mr. Gati's previous statement that he could not continue to work in the atmosphere that had been created.

"It became apparent subsequently that the estrangement which had resulted was too deep to permit a working relationship," this part of the statement concludes.

Considering that, under the heading of general comments, the executive members also refer more than once to the "marked increase in the standards achieved under the leadership of Mr. Gati," one would think that the obvious and only solution could have been arrived at some time ago.

Even while giving due recognition to the board's wish to allow a fair trial period for their appointee, it must be apparent that in this instance they have leaned over so far they have almost succeeded in tipping the vessel.

They provide evidence of this in explaining the dislocation of board meetings since February and in the indisputable fact of resignations with Victoria Symphony's budget their clearly defined reasons.

Neely points out that the has risen from $73,000 in 1960 to $211,000 for the season just concluded. It is now therefore virtually a quarter-million dollar business which is still being administered substantially on a voluntary basis.

On the business side there are only three salaried employees — the business manager, secretary and box office manager.

The Symphony Society's annual meeting is looming — it will be some time in June — and nobody should permit his name to go up for election unless he is prepared to devote a fair proportion of time and energy to the job of administering so large and important an organization.

There is nothing that is "closed-shop" about the symphony board. Anyone who is interested and has a little time, says the executive, will be a welcome capdidate.

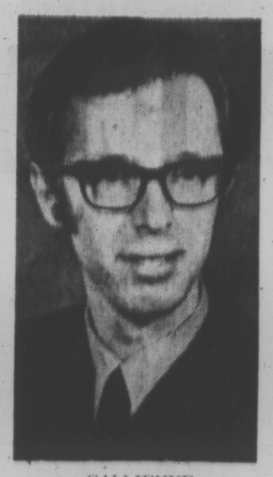
"The board is understandably concerned about the deficit this year, which is in excess of $20,000," says Neely. "To put this into perspective however, the deficit in 1965 was approximately the same, although the budget was half the budget that the symphony operates under today."

It is arguable that the deficit need not have been so large if there had been a more imaginative and intense promotion of some of the symphony's notable feature events this past season.

On the other hand one must acknowledge that "the lower economic activity in 1970 in the Greater Victoria area affected our revenue adversely."



GALLIENNE

'He's Walking Happy'

"You go west over the Rockies and you'll never be heard of again," John Gallienne was told when he decided to leave Ottawa's St. Mark's Anglican Church for Victoria's St. John's.

"I was also told I'd be pioneering here," he recalls, chuckling over the misinformation.

Gallienne, a gifted young man with an impressive background in the direction of church musical affairs, arrived here last fall.

He has found the city as vigorous and promising culturally as it is beautiful.

After being in Ottawa for three years and looking about for a fresh challenge, Gallienne came to Victoria for an interview and immediately said to himself, this is it.

After studying at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London, where he gained his diploma, Gallienne went on to the Royal School of Church Music in Surrey.

Most churches in England are affiliated with this school, which is a residential institution.

Following this he underwent a year of teacher training at the College of St. Mark and St. John.

He explains that he came to Canada in the first place "because everything in England is sewn up. All the liturgical music repertoire has been performed time and again. There is really nowhere to go."

In Ottawa he had a mixed and a boys' choir at St. Mark's. His special interest was the boys and in three years he developed this choir's reputation notably.

Mrs. Gallienne is the former Lianne Mitchell, daughter of Gifford Mitchell, organist of St. James United Church in Montreal.

The couple met at a music camp in the Laurentians where Lianne was manager and Gallienne was assistant to the musical director.

What Gallienne feels is a great coincidence took place upon their arrival in Victoria.

For accommodation they sought a side-by-side duplex — "preferably one where the occupants of the other half were at least tolerant of pretty frequent sounds of music."

They found one, conveniently situated, and who should be living under the other half of the roof? Richard Ely, first horn, and his wife Katherine, harpist, of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

Sharing interests and babysitting chores, their friendship is such that if either were to move to another part of the city it would be, hopefully, a dual move into similar dual accommodation.

The Galiennes find Victoria a friendly, culturally alive city.

"Opportunities for development are all around us, wonderful talent, fine teaching, interesting projects."

"In the church Canon Graham Baker has been marvellously helpful and co-operative and it's my aim to have a men's and boys' choir at St. John's second to none."

The music director leads a busy life for in addition to church duties he also teaches organ and has organized a Wednesday evening recital series at the church, using outstanding local musicians.

He also teaches choral music at Glenlyon School for boys.

First there will be a choir camp which John is directing for one week at Rothesay, N.B. Then he and Lianne will be back at Camac Camp in the Laurentians for three weeks, and again the roles of teacher and manager respectively.

End of summer and so to work for John Gallienne, lost forever in the murk off Canada's west coast, but walking happy and fulfilled.

LIGHT BULB FOR BEER DEAL EXPOSED

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI) — Two Cambridge students won a bet that they could not climb to the top of the city's lampposts and take out the light bulbs — but they ended up in court.

The youths, Mark Laing, 20, and Graham Fairclough, 20, told a court a man had offered to buy them a pint of beer for every bulb they produced.

They admitted stealing four bulbs but the judge dismissed the case after ordering them to pay for the items.

SUNDAY POP CONCERT

Several American musical groups visiting in Victoria for the Victoria Day celebrations will present a pop concert Sunday, May 23, at McPherson Playhouse.

The Newport Choir, a 50-voice ensemble from Washington State will present a cross-section of their repertoire, including Bridge Over Troubled Wates and Spinning Wheel.

The 50-piece Medford Concert Orchestra from Oregon will play a number of favorite pieces such as the theme music from the films Exodus and Love Story. Also on the program will be the big Interlake Jazz Ensemble from Washington State.

Stockhausen: Prophet of New World of Sound

By PETER HEYWORTH

LONDON — The wife of a French composer found herself sitting next to Stravinsky on one of his last visits to Paris. "Do you know much Stockhausen?" he enquired. The composer's wife confessed she did not. The old man, already in his late eighties, gently placed a hand on her arm. In a conspiratorial whisper he murmured, "You should, my dear, you should."

It was a tribute of the old world to the new. No man has used the pitched notes on which Western music has been based since the Dark Ages with more exquisite precision than Stravinsky. Karlheinz Stockhausen, who last month gave a series of concerts in London, is the prophet of a new world of sound that today threatens to engulf that old order.

The musicians he has influenced range from Boulez to the Beatles (his picture appears in the portrait gallery on the sleeve of Sergeant Pepper). A whole generation of composers on the continent has grown up under his shadow. Though there have recently been occasional rumbles of dissent, his followers hang on every work and word (Stockhausen is a marathon talker — last year at Darmstadt he lectured for six hours non-stop on his own music). Nor is he just the guru of a small cult.

Guests at an evening party recently given by President Heinemann of West Germany were entertained, not by the usual string quartet, but by Stockhausen and his chosen group of musicians. At last year's Expo in Osaka a special auditorium was constructed in the German pavilion, and in it over 4,000,000 visitors attended performances of his music. One work was given 72 times.

Even the most revolutionary artist never starts entirely from scratch and Stockhausen admits a debt to Webern, who first challenged the assumption that music should be based on themes, and so holds a position in history comparable to the first abstract painters. But when in 1956, like a latter-day Martin Luther, Stockhausen thundered out his basic creed, "No neo- . . ., no repetition, no variation, no development," he was challenging the very foundations of Western music, and in each work he has subsequently produced he has moved deeper and deeper into uncharted territory with an uncanny sense of purpose and direction.

History may see the works he and Boulez composed in the early 1950s, in which every detail was determined in advance according to a rigid application of serialism, as a last desperate attempt to shore up a collapsing order. But even then, both composers were preparing their escape from a water-logged craft. This took the form of allowing chance to play a part in how any given performance of a work turned out. Boulez soon drew back from the implications of this step: his French rationalism was appalled at the prospect of the flood of dilettantism and imprecision it has unleashed.

But Stockhausen, who believes that a period of intellectualism that had its origins in the way of thinking of the ancient Greeks ended in 1945, and that we are now moving into the Age of Aquarius, a spiritual era in which we "must concentrate on the intuitive and the supra-rational," pressed ahead.

From notes he moved to symbols, and the area left undetermined in his music steadily grew until in 1968 he produced a "score" that reads like an anthology of meditative exercises. "Night Music," for instance, consists of the following instructions: "Play a vibration in the rhythm of the universe, play a vibration in the rhythm of the dream . . . and transform it slowly into the rhythm of the universe."

Meanwhile Stockhausen had opened up a whole range of new musical material — or what unbelievers would call noise. He claims that in 1952 in Paris he was the first man to make music of synthetic-electronic sounds, and he clearly considers that this alone places him as one of the great innovators of the 20th century alongside men like Planck and Einstein.

As he penetrated further into "micro-acoustical regions," he blended the sound of instruments with the sound of those instruments electronically transformed, he married electronics and the human voice, which he has also used in highly unconventional (but much imitated) ways.

Over the years he has grown less concerned with inventing new ideas in the sense of themes, and more with suggesting ways in which sounds might be treated. In a recent work, for instance, the soloist takes as his starting point any sounds he picks up on a transistor radio that take his fancy. He has introduced the idea of music moving in space (he expects there will soon be an electronic instrument that will enable sound to be projected to a given point).

Not surprisingly, these new sound resources have led to Stockhausen's growing impatience with the straitjacket of the 19th century concert hall, designed for the purposes of a conventional symphony orchestra.

As long ago as 1958 he designed an ideal auditorium, and was able to put some of his ideas into effect in the concert hall of the German pavilion at the 1970 Expo.

He has also seized every opportunity to present his music in new settings. He has performed it in vast underground gottos in the Lebanon. He has written music to be performed simultaneously in four rooms of a house.

He sees space, which electronic sound now has the power to fill at will, as providing a new musical dimension, and in June, 1971 the Berlin Tiergarten will resound to a work written specially for out of doors. Hand in hand with his mystical leanings goes an engineer's determination to exploit new technical resources and a strongly practical vein that enables him to put his wildest ideas into effect.

At each stage in his voyage of discovery Stockhausen has produced a barrage of theories and commentaries, which are regarded by a devoted band of followers as blueprints for the future. No composer since Schoenberg has commanded such near-veneration or exercised such authority on those around him. For better or for worse, no composer has made so deep an impact on the evolution of music in the past 15 years.

Stockhausen adheres to no specific theology, but his cast of mind is essentially religious and mystical, and he is much preoccupied with rather windy notions of a universal religion — in which he would serve as high-priest and spiritual guide.

At university he studied philosophy as well as music and during this period supported himself by playing in a jazz group and accompanying an itinerant conjurer with piano improvisations. In spite of his mystical leanings there is nothing in the least unworldly about him when it comes to dealing with practical musical problems.

In those post-war years Germany was only slowly resuming musical contacts with the outside world, and Stockhausen's knowledge of contemporary music barely extended beyond Schoenberg. It was the impact of Messiaen's music at the Darmstadt summer school of 1951 that opened new horizons, and the following year he went to study with him in Paris. Here he met Boulez (who, though only three years older, was already an established composer) and made his first electronic experiments. He also learnt French which, like his mid-Atlantic English he speaks today with formidable fluency and precision.

He is a tall, robust man who looks younger than his 42 years. Only surprisingly delicate hands, silky brown hair that falls on to his shoulders and huge, solemn eyes (he does not laugh easily, and least of all at himself) suggest someone out of the ordinary.

He lives with his second wife and their two children in a strikingly modern house, designed by himself, that commands fine views over the hilly country east of Cologne and is furnished in the bare style favored by German intellectuals. His wife is Mary Bauermeister, a tall, turbulent Valkyrie, who is herself a painter and sculptress of considerable distinction.

Inevitably, he is a lonely figure, who talks about the importance of loving relationships yet finds difficulty in achieving them. Boulez is perhaps the only living musician he regards as an equal (the compliment is returned) and the two men spent last Christmas together. As a result, he is surrounded by followers rather than friends.

But over them — and they include some outstandingly gifted young composers and musicians — he exerts the fascination of a guru. One clarinettist recently told me that Stockhausen enabled him to draw sounds from his instrument he didn't know it could yield.

For Stockhausen this is only natural. He regards the composer as a spiritual guide. "When he walks on to the stage, a musician should give the fabulous impression of a man who is doing a sacred service."

In recent years Stockhausen has been trying "to connect . . . the performer to the streams which flow through me . . . to the inexhaustible source that flows through us in musical vibrations." Hence the increasing role allotted to improvisation, and hence, too, the formation of a special performing group.

But Stockhausen has his own, highly personal interpretation of what is and is not worthwhile improvisation. His group undergo lengthy rehearsals before they appear in public.

He himself sits at the electronic controls and when any idea he considers inappropriate is produced, he promptly phases it out by the twist of a knob. Not surprisingly, resentment among his disciples reached explosion point last year at Darmstadt. Several parted company with him and Stockhausen confessed himself surprised and deeply hurt.

There is clearly an unre-

solved conflict between his role as the apostle of what he calls "intuitive" music and his own highly authoritarian personality.

Yet without his presence, performances of his recent works are liable simply to fall apart — one reason why they have until now made little impact in Britain. That is perhaps one reason why in his most recent work he has returned to notes, which are more amenable to control than human beings.

On the other hand, his mysticism is not viewed with approval by the politically committed young, and this was one reason why in 1969 a concert in Amsterdam broke up in disorder. His willingness to grace presidential soirees, the fact that during the Paris May of 1968 he was in retreat composing Aus den sieben Tagen and a recent visit to South Africa, are also held against him.

Yet it would be a mistake to suppose that Stockhausen's music is elitist. On the contrary, in recent years it has shown its power of attracting the sort of audience that has eluded most avant-garde 20th-century music. Nor is he remote from other streams, though he tends to consider them only insofar as they relate to himself.

The improvisatory element in free jazz appeals to him, though it is often "full of unconscious citations of idioms I would rather get rid of." He also feels that it tends to misuse freedom: "But that's what happens whenever people say: 'Let's be free.' It produces chaos and destruction because they have never learned to use freedom as a means of restricting oneself so that others may be free."

Stockhausen is not unsympathetic to pop and much of it has been dedicated to him. But he feels that it often tries to make use of the sound combinations he has pioneered without properly understanding them. He is also mistrustful of what he calls its militaristic beat.

"It makes people march without knowing it . . . That was exactly the way the Nazis tuned in the whole population . . . Whether it's marching music, pop or even a rock beat I don't like it. I prefer Balinese music, where you feel a basic rhythm, but the individual players are floating freely."

Symphony: There Is Obvious Solution

sounding board

Following comments made in this space a week ago, concerning administration problems within the Victoria Symphony Society, I met with the president and two members of the executive at their request this week.

As a result of their presentation of the situation one arrives at the conclusion, after considering and comparing all statements, that more than one personality clash is present, although that between the business manager and artistic director is most fundamental.

It is also impossible not to conclude that a great deal of time has been wasted in unnecessary cogitation over the central issue.

And that the cogitation in itself has created an atmosphere of strain and some ill will and distrust between board members and between business and artistic personnel is pretty obvious.

President Stuart Soward, immediate past president Gerald Neely and executive member Barney Simmons admit, in a written statement, "There has been a division of opinion on the board's concerning the business manager . . ."

They assert that a "minority" of members felt that the manager did not have some of the qualities deemed essential for a person holding that position with the Society.

But "a majority of members . . . who dealt most often with the manager were satisfied with his performance of his duties . . ."

Further on, however, the statement declares: "The doubts which had been expressed about the business manager's abilities relative to public relations and promotions were crystalized by conflict which arose between the artistic director and the business manager, based essentially upon a difference in temperament.

"The only split which existed in the board was the manner in which this conflict should be dealt with . . . A number of meetings were held as a result of which recommendations were made to the board" (from a three-member committee struck to examine the issues on both sides.)

As the postponed meeting of the board was apparently called at a time inconvenient to all members of the special committee, none were present and the upshot was a stalemate with votes of confidence going to both central figures, despite Mr. Gati's previous statement that he could not continue to work in the atmosphere that had been created.

"It became apparent subsequently that the estrangement which had resulted was too deep to permit a working relationship," this part of the statement concludes.

Considering that, under the heading of general comments, the executive members also refer more than once to the "marked increase in the standards achieved under the leadership of Mr. Gati," one would think that the obvious and only solution could have been arrived at some time ago.

Even while giving due recognition to the board's wish to allow a fair trial period for their appointee, it must be apparent that in this instance they have leaned over so far they have almost succeeded in tipping the vessel.

They provide evidence of this in explaining the dislocation of board meetings since February and in the indisputable fact of resignations with Victoria Symphony's budget their clearly defined reasons.

Neely points out that the has risen from $73,000 in 1960 to $211,000 for the season just concluded. It is now therefore virtually a quarter-million dollar business which is still being administered substantially on a voluntary basis.

On the business side there are only three salaried employees — the business manager, secretary and box office manager.

The Symphony Society's annual meeting is looming — it will be some time in June — and nobody should permit his name to go up for election unless he is prepared to devote a fair proportion of time and energy to the job of administering so large and important an organization.

There is nothing that is "closed-shop" about the symphony board. Anyone who is interested and has a little time, says the executive, will be a welcome candidate.

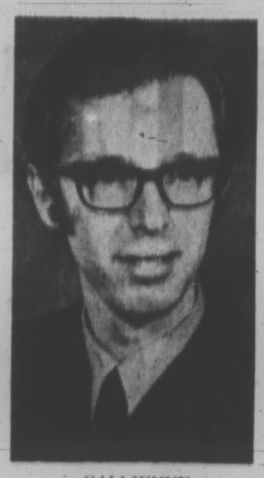
"The board is understandably concerned about the deficit this year, which is in excess of $20,000," says Neely. "To put this into perspective however, the deficit in 1965 was approximately the same, although the budget was half the budget that the symphony operates under today."

It is arguable that the deficit need not have been so large if there had been a more imaginative and intense promotion of some of the symphony's notable feature events this past season.

On the other hand one must acknowledge that "the lower economic activity in 1970 in the Greater Victoria area affected our revenue adversely."



GALLIENNE

'He's Walking Happy'

"You go west over the Rockies and you'll never be heard of again," John Gallienne was told when he decided to leave Ottawa's St. Mark's Anglican Church for Victoria's St. John's.

"I was also told I'd be pioneering here," he recalls, chuckling over the misinformation.

Gallienne, a gifted young man with an impressive background in the direction of church musical affairs, arrived here last fall.

He has found the city as vigorous and promising culturally as it is beautiful.

After being in Ottawa for three years and looking about for a fresh challenge, Gallienne came to Victoria for an interview and immediately said to himself, this is it.

After studying at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London, where he gained his diploma, Gallienne went on to the Royal School of Church Music in Surrey.

Most churches in England are affiliated with this school, which is a residential institution.

Following this he underwent a year of teacher training at the College of St. Mark and St. John.

He explains that he came to Canada in the first place "because everything in England is sewn up. All the liturgical music repertoire has been performed time and again. There is really nowhere to go."

In Ottawa he had a mixed and a boys' choir at St. Mark's. His special interest was the boys and in three years he developed this choir's reputation notably.

Mrs. Gallienne is the former Lianne Mitchell, daughter of Gifford Mitchell, organist of St. James United Church in Montreal.

The couple met at a music camp in the Laurentians where Lianne was manager and Gallienne was assistant to the musical director.

What Gallienne feels is a great coincidence took place upon their arrival in Victoria.

For accommodation they sought a side-by-side duplex — "preferably one where the occupants of the other half were at least tolerant of pretty frequent sounds of music."

They found one, conveniently situated, and who should be living under the other half of the roof? Richard Ely, first horn, and his wife Katherine, harpist, of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

Sharing interests and babysitting chores, their friendship is such that if either were to move to another part of the city it would be, hopefully, a dual move into similar dual accommodation.

The Galiennes find Victoria a friendly, culturally alive city.

"Opportunities for development are all around us, wonderful talent, fine teaching, interesting projects."

"In the church Canon Graham Baker has been marvellously helpful and co-operative and it's my aim to have a men's and boys' choir at St. John's second to none."

The music director leads a busy life for in addition to church duties he also teaches organ and has organized a Wednesday evening recital series at the church, using outstanding local musicians.

He also teaches choral music at Glenlyon School for boys.

First there will be a choir camp which John is directing for one week at Rothesay, N.B. Then he and Lianne will be back at Camac Camp in the Laurentians for three weeks, and again the roles of teacher and manager respectively.

End of summer and go to work for John Gallienne, lost forever in the murk off Canada's west coast, but walking happy and fulfilled.

LIGHT BULB FOR BEER DEAL EXPOSED

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI) — Two Cambridge students won a bet that they could not climb to the top of the city's lampposts and take out the light bulbs — but they ended up in court.

The youths, Mark Laing, 20, and Graham Fairclough, 20, told a court a man had offered to buy them a pint of beer for every bulb they produced.

They admitted stealing four bulbs but the judge dismissed the case after ordering them to pay for the items.

SUNDAY POP CONCERT

Several American musical groups visiting in Victoria for the Victoria Day celebrations will present a pop concert Sunday, May 23, at McPherson Playhouse.

The Newport Choir, a 50-voice ensemble from Washington State will present a cross-section of their repertoire, including Bridge Over Troubled Wates and Spinning Wheel.

The 50-piece Medford Concert Orchestra from Oregon will play a number of favorite pieces such as the theme music from the films Exodus and Love Story. Also on the program will be the big Interlake Jazz Ensemble from Washington State.

No Great Hope For Middle East

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

(World Copyright Reserved)

Canadian attitudes towards the Arab-Israeli conflict, and the problems involved in finding a peaceful settlement, reflect the same type of controversy as that among national leaders around the world.

There is no over-riding optimism for one thing, that peace in the Middle East will ever come. In general, for every four Canadians who believe peace is possible, there are three to deny it, and three who are undecided.

Moreover, asked to make a judgment on three possible concessions Israelis might make to Arab demands, clear-cut support is shown for each one. While the favored view is that Israel should return most of the territory taken from the Arabs, except Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip, this is the opinion of about only one-fourth of the nation. Close behind it, in popularity are the alternatives for an Israeli withdrawal to original frontiers, or of holding on to all, or most of the areas they have occupied.

While these opinions are held at much the same levels in all parts of Canada, this is an argument on which there is a very great disparity in viewpoint among those with University education, compared to those who have attended public school only. University people, presumably with more opportunity to study and assess the situation, are far more opinionated. The gloomy view that peace is not possible, is held by almost half these men and women — but almost as many think that it will come.

The question:

"Do you think that peace between the Israelis and Arabs is, or is not possible?"

Here's the national opinion, and a comparison of attitudes among the main educational systems.

	Peace Is Possible	Peace Not Possible	Can't Say
Canada	44%	30%	26%
Public School	43	23	34
High School; Technical	45	29	26
University	42	47	11

To see if Canadians had any clearly-defined viewpoints on what course Israel should follow in response to Arab demands, Gallup interviewers gave a choice of three possibilities for action. This is the national opinion.

Israelis should:

1. Withdraw to their original frontiers	16%
2. Return most of the Arab territory it now occupies, but retain some of it, such as Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip	27%
3. Keep hold of all, or most of the territory it now occupies	18%
Undecided	39%
	100%

Tigers To Fetch Ducks?

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Their ears stick up funny, their feet are too big and their soft baby's fur is a combination of bright orange and black, but they are being treated like pups by a golden retriever.

They are two Bengal tigers that Friday joined the litter of the retriever, Pepper. She gave them one startled look, a loving lick up the back and settled down to doing what she does best—being a mother.

It was a happy ending to a minor crisis that started Thursday when an 18-months-old tiger unexpectedly gave birth to the cubs after a matinee performance of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus at Madison Square Garden.

The real mother, Tina, was too young to nurse the cubs.

So circus officials in a race against time, started calling kennels in the area and heard about Pepper, who had two pups of her own two weeks ago.

Irving Field, president of the circus, delivered the cubs to the home of Janet Bunce, a dental assistant who for several years has trained and bred golden retrievers.

"I really had no idea what to expect, but retrievers have a tremendous maternal instinct," she said. "So we gave it a try."

'We'll Make It—If You Think There's Doubt, Forget It'

By PETER McNELLY

If realtor Eric Charman makes a success out of the 1971 United Appeal campaign this fall, no one will be able to say he is not a super salesman.

No matter how much money the Community Chest finally sets for its 1971 goal, campaign chairman Charman is convinced — and put that in hard-sell confidence — the money will be raised.

The drive is four months away. And while the Chest and its 25 member agencies are enduring the blood-letting ritual known as budget-cutting, Charman's busy thinking up ways to re-organize the campaign.

Last year's goal of $701,314 fell $50,000 short of hitting 100 per cent. Charman estimates the 1971 drive will seek between $765,000 and $800,000.

However, the agencies already have submitted a preliminary budget of $830,000.

Some Chest board members feel this is too much to ask, but some agency directors are beginning to feel that the Chest has put itself into the position of cramping agency programs by seeking only the amount of money it thinks the campaign can raise.

One agency told the Chest's board of directors this year the campaign should go to the public with a goal that represents the actual needs of all agencies.

If the campaign falls short, the argument goes, the final agency budgets can be set later.

CHARMAN
'realistic needs'

Charman, who also is on the board of directors of the Community Chest, says this proposal is workable. But without publicly committing the Chest to this approach, he took it a step further during an interview.

"If we could strive to meet the more realistic needs of the agencies, rather than the chopped-down budget figure, perhaps we would get more enthusiasm.

"I don't like a budget based on what we think we can collect. It's not the fault of the people that we haven't made it, and I mean this: it's the United Appeal's fault . . . We have not identified with the agencies."

Chairman says there's too much talk during the year about the Community Chest and not enough about the work the agencies do. So his fall strategy will be to emphasize the agencies.

He intends to sponsor open-houses during the campaign so the public will be able to meet agency staff and discuss their work. This tactic has been successful for Victoria Cool-Aid on a number of occasions.

Charman also intends to spend much more money on advertising. He believes that no matter how good your press is, the best way to take a direct message to people is to advertise it. However, he won't hire a public relations firm.

Charman's ideas about running the United Appeal campaign amount to a thorough revamping in its fund-raising techniques. Many of his ideas, he admits, come from successful campaigns in the United States.

That's no reason they shouldn't be used here, Charman says. For example, many people say the Boy Scouts and the YM-YWCA should not be in the Community Chest. That's normal, says Charman.

How did Chicago overcome this problem? By running full-page newspaper ads which read: "So you don't like everything we are doing . . . and that means you're going to let this child suffer?" Then the ad had a picture of a crippled child.

That, if anything, is hard-sell promotion. But in some respects it's accurate, for a substantial amount of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children budget — $45,000 out of $118,000 in 1970 — comes from the United Appeal.

Charman has not picked all his campaign staff, but they will be aggressive. To make their jobs easier, he is re-drawing their duties.

He has Community Chest-paid staff preparing detailed information on the history of residential and business donations over the last few years. One thing he's discovered is that Victorians give approximately $3 per capita to charities, a figure which ranks them a poor 28th among Canadian cities.

But Charman won't blame this on a lack of generosity. He maintains the money is there waiting to be given. The task is to go about getting it properly.

For example, he said the Chest has not revised its individual advance gifts list for 10 years, and hundreds of people in the residential canvass who gave $2 a decade ago still are giving the same amount.

In 1970, Charman was head of the individual advance gifts division, and he raised $76,000. This money came from only 300 donors. Charman says a great many wealthy, retired people have moved to Victoria who are not on the individual gifts list.

"It's our job to search them out," he says, and he plans to triple the list.

In 1971 Charman hopes to double the amount of advance donations to $150,000.

Last year's residential canvass took place at night in bad weather. Charman's change here is to hold the canvass on a Saturday morning and at the same time set up booths at shopping centres in the region to catch householders missed at home.

Instead of asking for a $2 or $5 donation, Appeal canvassers will be requesting householders to arrange monthly donations. Many people, Charman believes, easily can afford $5 a month.

To sample the strength of business and industrial donations, Charman is going to pick one firm for a pilot canvassing project this summer. He will try to raise $50,000.

When campaign staff canvass businesses, Charman says, part of their approach will be to tell the firms that without private support governments will move further into the social assistance field.

United Appeal campaigns in Victoria have succeeded only four times in the last 13 years, giving them the worst record in Canada and a loser's image. But Charman isn't hung up on past failures.

"We're going to make it. If you think there's any doubt, forget it."

Uvic Man Co-Chairman

University of Victoria development director Floyd Fairclough has been named co-chairman of the 1971 United Appeal campaign.

His appointment was announced today by campaign chairman Eric Charman. Fairclough, 47, of 3648 Crestview, has been associated with Uvic since its inception in the mid-1960s and was development director for Victoria College from 1960 until it became a university.

He is experienced as a professional fund-raiser in New York and Chicago and was vice-president of the fund-raising firm Deachmann, Fairclough and Parks in the 1950s.

Fairclough also ran the successful Royal Jubilee Hospital expansion drive in 1958-59. He is on the board of directors of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic, a United Appeal agency.

Announcing Fairclough's appointment, Charman said, "Fairclough has shown great organizational ability, and I'm very glad to bring the university into liaison with the community for this campaign."

Charman also announced that Mrs. Shirley Baker, Uvic women's activities co-ordinator, will be chairman of the appeal's residential convass division. Mrs. Baker held this position in 1968 and ran a successful canvass.

Low Income Home Funds Welcomed

Walter Olszewski, president of the Low Income Group, said today he hopes "the people of B.C. get a very good chunk" of the $100 million federal funds to be made available to buy homes.

The program, announced by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. Friday, will help families earning between $4,000 and $6,000 a year buy homes.

Money will be loaned at 8¾ per cent interest, repayable over 25 years. If these requirements cannot be met interest could be reduced to 7¼ per cent, repayable over 40 years.

Olszewski said the program is just what's needed to encourage people on welfare or low incomes to buy houses.

'LOT BETTER'

"It's a heck of a lot better than renting. I owned my own home once — I'd like to again."

He said the federal program's interest rates are a welcome change to most.

"Where else can you get a low mortgage at that interest?"

Under the program, down payments of five per cent of the cost of the house, must be made.

MORE ASSISTANCE

Olszewski said this can be met with assistance from the B.C. Home Acquisition Act fund.

"On a house that costs between $12,000 and $14,000, this means a down-payment of about $700."

Under the terms of the federal and provincial plans, a person would be able to get a $1,000 provincial grant and make the necessary deposit on a $20,000 home.

FIRST THUNDERBIRD SLOOP in the Pacific Northwest to be completely built of fiberglass was launched Friday at Ogden Point with the customary crack of champagne. There was also a spare bottle, complete with plastic cups. Ready for the big moment are Mrs. Glen Higgins, 54 Howe, right, wife of the sloop Freeway's owner, and Mrs. John Booth, wife of the builder of the plug and mold. Thunderbirds are the largest fleet in the area and were designed by the late Seattle marine architect Ben Seaborne.

25 Suicides Committed Here in 1970

The suicide rate for the four Greater Victoria municipalities in 1970 was 14.3 per 100,000 people, according to police records.

This rate is considerably lower than the figure of 19.2 per 100,000 people in Greater Vancouver, which that region's Crisis Intervention and Suicide Prevention Centre said this week is "approaching the highest levels in the world."

A breakdown of the 25 suicides and attempted 114 suicides for the four core Greater Victoria municipalities last year shows Victoria had 15 suicides and 65 attempts, Saanich with 9 suicides and 43 attempts, Oak Bay with one suicide and five attempts and Esquimalt with no suicides and one attempt.

Victoria's 1970 figures show a slight increase in the number of suicides in 1969 when 13 people took their lives. But the 65 attempted suicides in Victoria for 1970 show a decrease of four from 1969.

Comparative figures from Saanich show a decrease of two suicides from 11 in 1969. However, eight more Saanich residents attempted suicide in 1970. Figures for 1969 were not available for Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

The Greater Victoria rate was arriving at using an estimated population of 175,000.

Ernest Mainwood, a director of the Crisis Intervention and Suicide Prevention Centre Wednesday told Vancouver council Canada's average suicide rare stood only third to that of Austria and Sweden.

"And the rate in Greater Vancouver area is by far the highest in Canada," he told council.

The rate for Austria is 23 per 100,000 people, and the rate for Sweden is 21 per 100,000 people, he said.

In Victoria, 10 of the 15 suicides were males, but 43 of the 65 attempted suicides were females. Most frequently chosen method of suicide and attempts in Victoria last year was overdosing with medication.

The greatest number of attempted suicides for females in Victoria came from the 16 to 22-year-old age group (13 attempts) compared with five attempts for males in the same age bracket.

Next highest age category for attempted suicides was females in the 25 to 30 age (eight cases) compared with five attempts for men in the same group.

There were six attempts by females in the 33 to 37 age group compared with two men for this category.

This Museum Can't Display Another

Provincial Museum director Bristol Foster is opposed to a city council proposal that the government take over the Bastion Square Maritime Museum and accommodate the exhibits in the provincial museum.

"It's not realistic," he said. "We couldn't begin to do justice to the exhibits of the maritime museum with the space we have available."

The city made the proposal to the government to avoid having to subsidize the museum with grants every year.

SHIP REPLICA

Some aldermen suggested that the maritime relics could be used on the replica of Capt. George Vancouver's ship to be constructed for the human history display in the provincial museum. Work on the project is expected to start this summer.

Foster pointed out the maritime museum has 11,500 square feet of display which covers all the maritime history of western Canada to the present day.

'NO WAY'

"Our Capt. Vancouver ship — the Discovery — will only have 1,500 square feet of display space," he said. "Obviously there is no way we could compress 11,500 square feet of exhibit space into 1,500 square feet."

He also noted that the provincial museum would only be telling the maritime history of B.C. at the time the province was discovered by Capt. James Cook and Vancouver.

'ONLY HIGHLIGHTS'

"The aims and objectives of our exhibits and those of the maritime museum are different, but parallel," he said. "They are complimentary to one another, not in competition with one another."

The maritime museum tells its story in depth," he added. "We only show the highlights."

Douglas Turnbull, president of the Friends of the Museum, said the museum is a big asset to the city and if it were moved would be a loss to Bastion Square.

"Bastion Square would suffer if it were moved," he said. "It is the centre of attraction."

About 50,000 people visited the museum last year.

Jolt Victims Recovering

Painters Richard Finney and Frank Hancock, burned in a powerline accident Friday, are in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Finney, 18, of 11303 Chalet in Sidney, suffered burns to his right foot and right knee and Hancock, 31, of 7173 Brentwood, was burned on the soles of both feet.

They were injured when the ladder they were using to paint an apartment hit a 6,900-volt powerline, snapping it in two places.

IF THERE'S ONE OBJECT I'd prefer not to glimpse among May's greenery, it is a fist-sized mass of grey filament out near the end of a leafy bough.

That oversize cocoon holds tent caterpillars, an insect species we can get along nicely without.

This morning I spotted a tent high in a Pacific Willow, and kept an eye peeled for others among our fruit trees. Sure enough, a second colony of miserable spinners had pitched camp in a crotch of our heavy-bearing little Yellow Delicious.

But those were the only ones in sight, and a call to the Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside brought reassurance.

Indications are that tent caterpillars have hatched in no more than normal numbers this spring, and aren't expected to prove much of a problem.

That's good news, because every few years comes a peak infestation when the furry tentmakers deploy in munching hordes. They squish underfoot, drop down strollers' necks, and play the devil with the foliage.

They aren't fussy eaters, although I've noticed in disgust that they're partial to a cherry-leaf main course topped off with an apple-leaf dessert.

Nobody and nothing sets store by them except the few parasites that prey on them. Birds largely ignore them and gardeners detest them.

I suppose all-wise nature has a place for the tent caterpillar in her plan, but it continues to elude me.

When a citizen writes a letter to a mayor asking that a street name be changed, the mayor is duty-bound to pass the suggestion on to his municipal council.

But that doesn't necessarily mean he approves the proposed change, and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis tells me that he has no designs on Foul Bay Road's time-mellowed title.

"I've always though well of the present name," said good Mayor Hugh, "and I wouldn't like to see it replaced."

The changing of street names, he pointed out, is a lengthy process attended by various difficulties, and should be approached warily.

But naming a new street is something else again: and here we arrive at an idea which Curtis hopes will garner support.

He thinks it's high time we honored our greatest artist by naming a street after her.

"I feel that Emily Carr's name should be given to one of our new streets," he said, "and this would be a particularly appropriate year for us to do so."

A sound motion. I like it, and hope the mayor will find solid support for it.

And while we're on the subject, how about a street for another Victorian of note? Amor de Cosmos, editor, premier and Confederationist — a man too long ignored.

As a minor shadow on a sunshiny Royal visit, there was the case of the loyal lady who waved so enthusiastically that her wedding ring took leave of her finger.

That shadow can now be lifted. Thanks to another viewer of royalty who found the flyaway token, Mrs. A. R. Horner of 36 Sylvan Lane is wearing her plain gold band again.

On that happy note, and hungry as a tent caterpillar, I'm off to see what's for dinner.

Mt. Douglas Athletes Ramble to Fourth Title

Lorna McHattie, Weicker Named Meet's Top Stars

There were several flashes of individual brilliance, and the Mount Douglas troupe tramped hardest. By and large, however, the 25th annual inter-high school track and field may be remembered as a quiet one.

And cold.

But the chilly winds that swept through Centennial Stadium failed to cool off Mt. Doug's athletes on Friday.

Mt. Douglis swept team honors for a fourth straight year. The boys retained the Hocking and Forbes Trophy and the girls reclaimed team honors from Oak Bay en route to a solid victory as overall champions and winners of the Roy Jones Memorial Trophy.

Oak Bay, as was the case last year, again finished second and Claremont placed third.

VICS DISAPPOINT

If there was any surprise in the team listing, it resulted with Victoria High's relegation to sixth place, one level behind surprising Mount View.

Perhaps because of the weather, the drama and excitement that usually permeates the big day seemed to be lacking.

Heart-thumpin finishes were minimized, and greatest excitement was stirred by record-breakers. Even then, the record toll was modest — only six "A" and two "B" division marks were written intoto the books. Nineteen records toppled last year, including 13 in the "A" division.

Al Weicker of Oak Bay and Claremont's Lorna McHattie — voted the meet's outstanding performers — provided the day's highlights.

VALIANT MARK FALLS

Weicker erased a 19-year-old record with an outstanding time of 4:05.8 in the 1,500-metre run. The previous standard of 4:06.7 was established by John Valiant of Vic High.

Weicker also won the 800-metre run to complete his outstanding day.

Miss McHattie placed two new marks in the record book. She won the discus with a heave of 122 feet, three inches and put the shot a record 39 feet, four inches. The former discus mark of 111' 7½" was set by Lyn Hagglund of Oak Bay and the shotput record of 37' ½" was set by Penny May of Mt. Douglas in 1969.

Despite their "doubles" and record efforts, both Weicker and Lorna were hard-pressed in winning meet honor.

TRIPLE WINNERS

Weicker got the nod over Brad Yakubowich of Mt. Douglas, who won the 100 and 200-metre dashes and the 300-metre hurdles. Yakubowich, obviously recovered from a leg injury that sidelined him last year, also sparked Mt. Doug's 1,600-metre relay team to a second-place finish.

Miss McHattie also topped a triple-winner — Oak Bay's Jill Pelland. Victoria's woman athlete of the year, Jill won the 100-metre dash, the 80-metre hurdles and the long jump.

Claremont's Ken Fox was a double winner in the "A" division, winning both the discus and shotput events while Debbi Reid of Mt. Doug won the 800 and 1,500-metre finals.

In addition to Miss McHattie and Weicker, other "A" record-breakers included Lynda May of Mt. Doug, Penny's sister, and Gary Lockyer of Esquimalt. Both topped marks they set last year.

THORNE, TOO!

Lockyer topped almost 10 seconds off the former mark in the 500-metre steeplechase with a time of 4:41.4. Miss May added almost five feet to her javelin record with an outstanding toss of 132 feet, five inches.

Jim Thorne of Mt. Doug broke the 3,000 metres record, slicing more than 14 seconds off Rob Ross' 1970 mark with a run of 8:45.3.

"B" records were broken by Cathy Auburn of Belmont, with a 31' 6" effort in the shotput, and by Bodd Watt of Oak Bay, with a jump of 10' 7" in the pole vault.

LORNA McHATTIE

ACTION ON TRACK was exciting and eyes of all but one of spectators were on athletes. Girl at lower right was apparently more interested in some other activity. Mt. Douglas won fourth straight championship.

VICTORIA HIGH FIRST WINNER

Victoria High School athletes wound up in sixth place in team standings as the 25th annual inter-high school track and field championships were concluded Friday at Centennial Stadium, but they later found reason for happiness

The school was declared the first winner of the Colonist Inter-High Athletic Shield. Administered by the Greater Victoria Senior Secondary Athletic Association, the award is to be presented annually to the member school that earns the most points through the school year in all sports sponsored by the association.

It was a close finish in the race for the shield as Victoria wound up with 165 points to edge Oak Bay (163½) and Claremont (161).

BILL WALKER

Ah, yes! Guess what? Now the vice-president of the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball has taken the president to task for the unceremonious manner in which he dumped the national senior baseball playoffs (originally scheduled for Victoria) in favor of a junior tournament.

Ron Hayter of Edmonton in an aside to Bob Lacoursiere of Saskatoon has suggested "the manner in which you handled the whole episode is regrettable. . . ."

He continues:

"Your announcement lacked judgment . . . and certainly to British Columbia would have had to appear vindictive . . . it is no wonder that B.C is upset. Alberta would feel the same way if it were involved."

Lacoursiere had previously been cited for cancelling the tournament in Victoria without referring the matter to the CFAB executive. Hayter, is in his move, has suggested to Lacoursiere that if he was rash in his decision to act in this manner, it still is not too late to do some soul-searching, reverse that decision, and reinstate the senior playdowns.

"It is not too late to rectify this matter — The CFAB should, and must, do everything in its power to save this tournament for the good of Canadian baseball," Hayter has advised the president. . . .

So, there, Victoria and B.C. do have a friend after all. Let's cultivate him. Quick!

Or as sports columnist Bob Strumm of the Saskatoon Star Phoenix says:

". . . What good is a junior championship without a senior championship, really, when you are looking at the amateur baseball scene as a whole? Progress is the word . . . so is incentive. Doing away with the senior championship is not progress, nor does it provide much of an incentive. . . ."

Over to you Bob (Lacoursiere, that is). It's not too late to save face. If you get to work on it. Now!

Then, of course, there was this week's Saanich Police golf torunament at Cedar Hill, with a galaxy of stars, to be sure . . . There may have been a few smiles, well-camouflaged of course, when chief Bert Pearson took out a wood to play the 150-yard second hole, but guess who was smiling the broadest two strokes later when a 20-foot putt dropped into the back of the cup? . . . Or take the sixth hole, the old 18th, the side-hill delight? Jim Nott remarked as he stepped up to the tee: "Now, if I can just pop one onto the middle of the green, it may roll down the hill." It did. The ball rolled right into the cup. Jim jumped for joy, but then stopped just as abruptly. "What a time to get the hole-in-one — I can't escape this crowd," he said. He didn't try either and later was the perfect host . . . Jimmy Neilson, the former hockey player, had a different tale to tell of the sixth. "I thought I had a good tee shot, but the ball rolled right off the green. I had to chip back and then three-putted for a five." Jim, otherwise, had the best round of the day, a 70, for low gross. . . .

Oh, yes, on Nott's 4's there was interesting scoring, in which the foursome hit for the cycle—Nott 1, Stan Jackson 2, Rip Repasse 3, and guess who 4.

Meanwhile, word is out that Victoria's Bruce Twamley will play his soccer for Spartans . . . that several up-Island players are trying out for Royals . . . that Andy Stephen will again emcee the B.C. open golf tourney this year . . . that Brian Appleton will assist him . . . that the visit by Linfield of the Irish League is off . . . that Ron Coulter is to be congratulated for a fine golf tournament . . . that Wilf Sadler showed admirable restraint when asked to shorten the name of the "Combined Canadian Juvenile and Victoria City Firefighters Babe Ruth (16-18) Baseball League" to something more simple . . . that Ed Ashmore deserves a pat on the back for being selected as coach, and taking the Candian wrestling team to Japan recently . . . that Stan Jackson already is starting to talk up another Domino reunion for Vancouver next year . . . that Rudy Pilous, recently fired from Denver, will be a guest speaker at the Vancouver Hall of Fame dinner, June 1, which also will feature Bobby Orr . . . that the tariff for the banquet will be $25 . . . that Olympic champion Debbie Meyer will swim in Vancouver the weekend of May 22-24 . . . And the sad word from the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League is that Burly Bill has retired . . . Anyone under 170 pounds calls him Mr. Weldon, the batcher . . .

Memorial Cup Series May Have Kickback

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oil Kings moved to Quebec City today to meet Quebec Remparts in a playoff for the Memorial Cup, a trophy which, until Friday, wasn't supposed to be awarded this year.

And because the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association turned its back on the Ontario Hockey Association in approving the national junior championship, the issue could have repercussions at the annual CAHA meeting in Thunder Bay, Ont., next weekend.

OHA president Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz said Friday he will bring the issue up at the annual meetings.

The OHA's first-level junior group and the Quebec Junior Hockey League had until this week stood together against a national playoff with the Western Canada Hockey League from which Edmonton emerged this year's champion.

POSITION REVERSED

At a meeting in Toronto two weeks ago, the presidents of all CAHA branches except Ottawa district voted to withhold any decision on awarding the Memorial Cup until the meeting at Thunder Bay.

That position was reversed Friday when an official vote of the CAHA board of directors approved a three-game Memorial Cup series between Edmonton and Quebec starting Monday.

A week ago today St. Catharines Black Hawks of the OHA were in Quebec City for the fourth game of their best-of-seven eastern final against the Remparts. The Remparts won to take a 3-1 lead in the series but the Hawks were pelted by debris thrown by angry Quebec fans. The Hawks players later had to duck to the floor of their bus to avoid debris thrown through the bus windows by an angry crowd of about 2,000.

ABANDONED OHA

Representatives of the Quebec league abandoned the OHA and agreed with the WCHL that if the Remparts won the series, they would meet Edmonton for a Memorial Cup playoff.

The Hawks beat the Remparts at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Wednesday night to force a sixth game but Fred Muller, St. Catharines team president, immediatedly announced the team would not go back to Quebec City.

EDDIE LEGACE . . . . . . TAKES SINGLES

Valcartier Team Leads

Eddie Legace topped Lionel Highman for the open singles crown Friday at the CFB Esquimalt gymnasium to help Zone 6 representatives from Valcartier, Que., capture the team title in the fourth annual Canadian forces national badminton championships.

In a battle spiced with spectacular shots, Legace downed his rival from Rockcliffe, Ont., by scores of 15-13, 15-12.

Highman obtained revenge in the open doubles when he partnered Jack McGee for a triumph over Legace and Robert Arbour. Members of the seven-player group representing Zone 4, Highman and McGee matched the scores in the singles final as they blasted a 15-13, 15-12 victory over the Valcartier partners.

Competition in veterans' events was turned into a two-man show by Bill Cameron and Dave Pond, members of the Zone 5 squad from Trenton, Ont.

Pond and Cameron combined for a 15-3, 15-12 win over the Edmonton duo of Bob Glanvill and Ted Peard in doubles and then staged a struggle for the singles title, with Cameron stroking his way to a 5-8, 15-3 decision over Pond.

Seven groups of zone representatives, including a squad from the European zone, contested the three-day tournament. Visiting players will depart for their home bases Monday.

Tense Cloud Over Montreal After Tirades

MONTREAL (CP) — Peter Mahovlich figures Montreal Canadiens will be laughing when the Stanley Cup final series with Chicago Black Hawks is over.

He said as much when the team returned here Friday after Thursday's 2-0 loss to the Hawks in Chicago which left the Canadiens trailing the best-of-seven series 3-2.

"We'll be laughing when this all is over," the tall forward said, pointing to victory in Sunday's sixth game here which would force a seventh game in Chicago Tuesday.

But his words did not carry a ring of confidence they had carried when Montreal edged Boston Bruins in the quarter-finals or when they returned here last week trailing 2-0 in the series.

The reason for that may be a tenseness felt by the club—a result of Henri Richard's tirade against coach Al MacNeil following Thursday's game.

Richard called MacNeil the worse coach he had ever played for, "an incompetent coach."

"He's the worst coach I ever played for in my whole career," Richard was quoted as telling some French-language reporters.

Richard was reported miffed at having little ice time following a first-period penalty he sat out.

"It's hard to win games when they're run like that," he was quoted as saying.

"It may be easy to win games by frequent line changes with a club like the Voyageurs, but it doesn't work like that in the National Hockey League."

MacNeil coached the Voyageurs, Montreal's entry in the American Hockey League, during the 1969-70 season.

"I always gave 100 per cent," Richard said.

"I never loafed and I don't deserve to be benched. I'm paid to play."

Richard was a little sheepish Friday when the team boarded a plane to return to Montreal and all he would tell reporters was:

"I should have kept my mouth shut."

No sooner did he quiet down than did a story appear in a French-language daily quoting right winger Claude Larose as being disgusted with his coach.

"I have never criticized a coach in my life, but today, I'm disgusted," Larose told a French-language reporter.

"I've got nothing to lose and I'm certain that I won't be in the Canadiens' organization next year," he is quoted as saying.

REASON TO SPEAK

For that reason, Larose said he felt he could speak out.

"MacNeil simply has not been honest with me since he replaced Claude Ruel last December," Larose is quoted as saying.

He said he was not the only Canadiens player who felt this way about MacNeil, adding that Richard, John Ferguson and Pierre Bouchard also shared his sentiments.

The teams play the sixth game Sunday afternoon, an 11:05 PDT start which will be televised by the CBC and CBS television networks.

Should Canadiens lose, it's all over until next season.

General-manager Sam Pollock feels, however, that Richard and his team-mates will come back strongly against Chicago.

"The same kind of thing happened four years ago and Henri came back and helped us win the Stanley Cup against St. Louis," he said when he learned of the incident.

Trapp Trailing By Four

JUNCTION CITY, Ore. (AP) — A pair of Orgeon golfers shared the first-round lead but several British Columbia pros stood in challenging positions in the $27,500 Payless Golf Classic.

Jim Petersen, the 1965 Northwest Open champion from Hillsboro, and Bob Wolsborn, an amateur from Fresham, shared the lead after scoring five-under-par 67s Friday.

Both scored eagles in their rounds. Petersen sank a 25-foot putt for a three on the 520-yard, par-five ninth while Wolsborn holed out a 200-yard, three-iron shot for a two on the 440-yard, par-four 16th.

Touring pro Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, B.C. shared third with John Tuft of Seattle, a stroke behind the leaders.

Vollmer got away in sensational fashion, scoring a six-under 30 on the front nine to tie the course record set by Tacoma pro Al Mengert in 1967.

Norm Reid of Kelowna and Buddy Sullivan of San Rafael, Calif., shared fifth with 69s while Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Vaughan Trapp of Victoria were in a group scoring one-under-par 71s. Bob Cox of Richmond carded a 73 while John Morgan of Victoria had a 75.

The 54-hole tournament winds up Sunday.

Caponi Leads Proette Field

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Donna Caponi, from North Hollywood, Calif., shot a one-under-par 72 Friday to take a one-stroke lead at 143 in the $50,000 Sealy women's golf tournament.

Miss Caponi led Marlene Hagge, the first round leader with a 69, who shot a 75.

Two strokes back were Kathy Whitworth and Jo Ann Prentiss, tied for third with 145s'

Sandra Haynie, at 146, with rounds of 74 and 72, is looking for her fourth tour victory in a row. She is tied for fourth with three others.

Sandra Post Elliot, a Canadian now living in Boyton Beach, Fla., fired a 77 for a two-round total of 152.

Lion Golfing Tiger

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — With a low gross score of 68-74—142, Tom Nettles of British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League led the way Friday through the second round of the professional footballers' golf classic. The 54-hole tournament winds up today.

TIMES OPEN SEMI-FINALS . . .

. . . AT UPLANDS SUNDAY

'Junior Has Nothing to Lose . . .'

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Seven is the lucky number. There is no advantage for any of the semi-finalists in the handicap section of the Times Vancouver Island Open golf tournament.

Each plays to a seven handicap, so the survivors will be on equal terms for the 36-hole semi-finals at Uplands Golf Club.

The handicap scramble for the Hugh Francis Trophy fills a supporting role in the Island's major match-play tournament. The spotlight usually focuses on the championship combatants but players in the handicap division invariably are good enough to join the main event crowd.

Two of Sunday's handicap semi-finalists, for example, have had their flings in the championship in past years. They are Gorge Vale's George Murphy and youthful Marty Smith of Uplands.

As the luck of the draw would have it, Murphy and Smith are matched in one semi-final. The other pairs Doug Hunt of Cedar Hill against Harry Panteluk of Gorge Vale.

Because of similar handicaps, they'll play on a scratch basis for the rounds that will start at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Still, the championship hogs the spotlight.

And the battle of the day is the one that matches Bob Beauchemin, the sensational 16-year-old southpaw from Gorge Vale, against Cowichan professional Bill Wakeham, a two-time champion.

Even though Beauchemin captured medal honors, Wakeham has been the hot favorite to "win it all" since the tournament opened.

Wakeham is the only player to win Island Open honors as a junior. He was 18 when he scored his first triumph in 1959.

Beauchemin celebrates his 17th birthday next Wednesday and has to be given an excellent chance of stopping Wakeham's march into the May 23 final. Beauchemin has consistently flitted with par figures since the qualifying round.

He has a fluid swing, perhaps the finest of any lefthander ever developed in B.C. He has accuracy and distance off the tees. Quiet and unassuming, Bob also has displayed excellent nerves and an ability to "think" his way around the course.

Wakeham himself suggests his junior rival has no reason to be over-awed by the professional. "Remembering my days as a junior," said Wakeham, "I honestly feel the pressure was on the seasoned players and favorites. The junior has nothing to lose . . ."

The same "nothing-to-lose" attitude also may be with Reg Clarkson, the 45-year-old Gorge Vale amateur who has been the surprise of this year's tournament.

Clarkson, a former winner of the Francis Trophy also faces a professional and two-time champion in Norm Boden to round out the day's schedule.

But they might own a little bit of yours.

They might be investing in our Mortgage Fund.

It's a unique fund with us at Royal Trust. And last year, it was one of the best performing pooled trust funds in Canada. (Last year, we loaned over 120 million dollars to help Canadians buy and build new homes.)

Wade 'Burns' Labatts

It "Burns" at both ends, you might say about one of Langford Drywall's guiding lights in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Pitcher Wade Burns provided the fire at both ends Friday when his pitching and batting sparked Langford to a 9-3 triumph over Labatts at Heywood Avenue Park.

Burns checked Labs on seven hits, including triples by Dusty Miller and Skip Porteous that set up all three Labatt runs. Burns walked but one and struck out seven.

But the winning hurler was even sharper with bat in hand. He went three-for-three at the plate with a double and two home runs, driving in six runs.

Diabetic Drug Cleared by Study

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — An estimated 150,000 diabetics in Canada need not fear the use of tolbutamide, an expert study committee of the Canadian Diabetic Association has concluded.

Tolbutamide is a popular oral anti-diabetic and along with two related chemicals is used to lower sugar levels in the blood.

Starting last summer, a dark cloud of uncertainty and in many cases fear descended over the drug among diabetics and doctors.

A much-publicized U.S. University Group Diabetes Program (UGDP) study concluded that tolbutamide therapy increased a patient's risk of death from heart disease, compared to diet therapy and insulin therapy.

A week later in Canada, the Federal Food and Drug directorate (FDD) concluded differently — that there was not enough evidence to change the normal practice, which was to treat mild, adult-onset diabetes first with diet and weigh-loss therapy, then with tolbutamide (many times in combination with diet control), and finally with insulin (used regularly in more serious cases of diabetes).

Final Pruning Time In May and June

By JACK REASTALL

The last of the pruning for this year is done during late May through June. It includes the group of plants commonly eferred to as the spring flowering shrubs.

The illustration above shows the skeletons of the shrubs, the leaves omitted for clarity. The actual shape and growth will vary from garden to garden but the principles of pruning remain the same.

Each gardener must assess his own shrubs and decide how much pruning, if any, sould be done.

Forsythias are found in most gardens. Grown locally are two or three species, two sports, and several named varieties. Small plants should have all the portions removed which have carried flowers. This is important during the first few years. Cut as shown in figure 2, just above a new shoot (N.S.).

Established plants of forsythia can be very leggy when left to their own habit of growth. After five years it is possible to judge old and new wood from the bark.

The oldest wood with greyish rough bark can be removed at soil level as shown in figure 1 at A. This reduces the size of the shrub considerably. Younger good flowering wood (B) should have the flowered parts removed, cutting approximately at the heavy black crossbars shown in the drawing.

At C in figure 1 is shown a greenish-brown new growth which has no leaves or side shoots at present. These growths are kept to replace the oldest growths that have been reoved. They will flower flower in about two years.

The spireas, not to be confused with the wayside plant called the wild spirea, are known to many gardeners as bridal wreath.

We see many different spireas in local gardens including spireas thunbergi with tiny white blossoms (centre growth figure 2), spirea arguta, more floriferous, and spirea prunifolia flora plena with double blooms (right-hand growth), and spirea vanhouteii with flat heads of blossoms (left-hand growth), which is just coming into flower.

All the spireas are treated the same as forsythia, severe pruning for young plants, and removal of oldest wood and flowered tips on established plants.

Yet to flower are the weiglas, mock-orange (philadelphus), deutzia, and the beautybush (Kolkwitzia).

Weigela and Kolkwitzia are severely pruned to a strong side growth below the flowered portion. Deutzia has flowered shoots cut back about two-thirds, while mock-orange is treated the same as spiraeas.

Prunus triloba flore plena (figure 3), the double flowering almond, is a small shrub with reddish-pink flowers. In some seasns the shoots which have borne flowers will die as the flowers fade. Severe pruning is the rule, cutting well back to a new side growth (N.S. in drawing). This sometimes means cutting away three-quarters of the shrub.

The upright brooms are naturally leggy in habit and many are killed when a northeast freezing wind splits the bark on exposed stems. To keep the stems protected requires regular pruning from the first year in the garden. This is done when most of the flowers have faded.

Two need attention this week, cytisus kewensis with arching branches of light cream flowers (figure 4), and the more stiffly upright cytisus praecox.

Young plants have the flowered portions cut off with secateurs, older plants are trimmed with shears to remove most of the fading blooms. This is done before the last flowers fade.

One other shrub which is troublesome to some gardeners is the flowering currant (figure 5), ribes sanguineum, especially in its early years when considerable summer die-back is noted in some seasons.

Severe pruning is best when the plants are young, cutting well back to a strong new shoot (N.S.). Once the plant is well shaped and established it requires very little pruning.

Listed here are only shrubs common to most local gardens. Many others flower before the end of June, some of which never need any pruning. Shaping, if needed, should be done as the flowers fade.

New shoots develop rapidly after flowering, ripen during the summer, and bear flowers next spring. No pruning is done on these shrubs during summer or fall as it would remove next year's flowers.

Tips for The Home Gardener

WORK FOR THE WEEK

If nights are consistently warmer in your garden, the more tender annuals can be put in though paper protection may still be required if night temperatures go below 40 degrees.

Take off the tiny seed pods with the old blooms of camellias and rhododendrons; important on small young plants.

Clip early spring blooming heathers promptly as brightness goes from flowers.

See that shrubs, particularly the smaller shallow-rooted kinds are not lacking moisture. Even though a shower occurs now, this will only refresh the foliage, not reach the root area.

Get the home-raised tomato plants accustomed to outdoors. When planting out, give paper or cardboard protection on cool nights even though no frost.

Continue thinning of vegetable seedlings. Firm the soil around those remaining, and irrigate in little side furrows.

So early variety of sweet corn (Polar Vee) for late July cobs; and another sowing by mid June for September.

Sow annual herbs outdoors.

Sow a few bush beans; but hold main sowing until end of month. They will not grow if night temperatures are below about 45 degrees.

Spectracide. All you need to control virtually every insect in your garden

Sure your garden is crawling with a great variety of insects. But you don't need a great variety of insecticides to control'em. In fact, in most cases all you need is one . . . Spectracide.

Spectracide [with Diazinon] controls virtually every important insect known to gardens. Mites, ants, chinch bugs, aphids, leafminers are just a few examples.

Protect your lawn, shrubs, flowers, fruits and vegetables with Spectracide.

Spectracide®

Spectracide® Contains Diazinon

Available in liquid concentrate, granular or pressurized spray, wherever fine garden supplies are sold.

If the grass looks greener on the other side, your neighbour's probably using:

Weed 'n Feed with Killex doesn't do things by halves. It feeds your lawn with a long-lasting fertilizer that releases UF nitrogen slowly into the soil — for lush green growth. And at the same time Weed 'n Feed applies Killex, the weed killer that gets weeds even 2,4-D misses. Weed 'n Feed with Killex is lightweight, yet concentrated so a 22 lb. bag covers a full 5000 sq. feet. And it flows evenly through your lawn spreader. You can't go wrong with it.

LAWN AND PLANT CARE

Lawns

How many times a year should a lawn be fertilized? For best results, spring, summer and fall. What formula? Soils differ, so requirements differ. But it's generally agreed that a 20-10-5 ratio is the best overall balance. If you use a fertilizer of this type, you can be sure of good results.

Weeds—If the only weeds in your lawn are simple dandelions and plantains, a 2,4-D type of weed killer will clear them up in a hurry. Either spray with Weed-No-More or use Weed 'N Feed 20-10-5 Lightweight Fertilizer with 2,4-D.

However if you have hard-to-kill weeds such as Ground Ivy, Heal-All, Black Medick (Yellow Clover), Chickweed, etc., you'll need something more potent. Use Killex as a spray, or in the form of Weed 'N-Feed 20-10-5 Fertilizer with Killex.

Shrubs, Hedges, Evergreens

Control weeds with Green Cross Granular Weed Preventer containing Trifluralin. This chemical prevents weed seeds from germinating in the soil. So if the soil starts clean (after a good hoeing, for instance) it'll stay clean.

Sir Tyrone Guthrie Dies

— GUTHRIE
. . . famed director

NEWBLISS, Ireland (UPI) — Sir Tyrone Guthrie, theatre producer, director, actor and playwright, died today at his country home. He was 70.

A family spokesman said Guthrie was reading his morning mail after breakfast when he collapsed and died.

A commanding figure just short of seven feet tall, Guthrie established his most lasting reputation as a producer and director of Shakespeare.

'LOCK UP YOUR DAUGHTERS'

Bubbling Musical Has Stylish Touch

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Turn off the TV, lock up your houses and head for the McPherson Playhouse tonight or any night next week.

Look Up Your Daughters is the name of the show there and it's worth the effort. It's a bright, blithe, bubbling musical, directed with a light hand and a stylish touch by Walter Burgess, guesting for Bastion Theatre from Toronto.

Final production of the current Bastion season, it is away happy and in a mood for encores.

This is a show that has plenty going for it in the first place.

It possesses all the picturesque charm of its 18th century setting and the plot witticism and tongue-in-cheek intrigue of its progenitor — Henry Fielding's comedy, Rape Upon Rape.

It has music by Laurel Johnson and lyrics by Lionel Bart of Oliver fame. And it has several appealing tuneful numbers like It Must Be True, Lovely Lover, When Does the Ravishing Begin? and The Gentle Art of Seduction.

To all this director Burgess's choreographic gifts and flair for stylization have brought buoyancy, discipline and vitality.

There is a fine small pit orchestra, firmly and flexibly controlled by Howard Denike.

There are settings by Jack Trueman that are imaginative, and while they do not always work as well as they should — especially the revolves — they contribute to the character of the production.

And then there is the cast.

The overall impression is of a fine team of attractive people with delightful voices and a genuine sense of tempo, although the brio, in a show of this type, could be still more intense.

One or two individual performances being lower-keyed than others, were responsible for dulling the effect of a scene now and then.

But Janie Woods is entirely charming, competent and vocally lovely as the pure heroine; Edward Greenhalgh's Justice Squeezum is a splendidly oozing, leering comic portrait, and Marge Bridgeman's performance, luscious and lusty, is memorable — especially when she turns on the sex in the Ravishing and Seduction songs.

Barry Grimshaw, Roy Silver and Ray Middleton's voices are attributes of the production and there are several good supporting comic performances besides an amusing characterization by Stuart Kent as the bumbling coffee house politician.

Curtain time for Lock Up Your Daughters is 8 p.m.

If you're holidaying in Britain does it really make sense to tiptoe through the tulips first?

Two airlines fly out of the West direct to Europe this summer.

But only one actually flies to Britain. Air Canada's Western Arrow.

The other flies to Amsterdam. Then arranges with another carrier to take you on. For an extra $25 per person. The story is that you get to see Amsterdam for a couple of days for only $25 extra.

$25?

C'mon, you're not going to eat? Drink? Get hotels? Taxis? Souvenirs?

Let's face it, most couples go a little overboard the first few days of their holiday. In that mood, your Amsterdam stop-over could end up as a substantial bite out of your British holiday budget.

And that money, spent in Britain, could go a long way...to a car and mileage or simple accommodation. So obviously, if you're going to Britain, it makes sense to go with the airline that goes direct, for less.

And that's us.

Air Canada. With our famous Western Arrow.

We're convenient.

From the West direct. Or from the East with BOAC. But we want to be more than that. So?

Atlantic 71. An all out effort from all of us at Air Canada to make sure that if you're not coming with us because we're convenient, you'll be coming because we care for you more.

Ask your travel agent about it.

Come see what you've been missing.

PBECC Nations Urge Japan to Ease Import Restrictions

By NORMAN GIDNEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pacific Basin Economic Co-operation Council ended its four-day annual meeting Friday with a Canadian selected to become its next president and a call for a more liberalized Japanese import policy.

The man who will be PBECC's new president is K. H. J. Clarke, a top executive of International Nickel Co., and leader of the 84 Canadians at the conference. He takes over in 1972 after the next conference in Wellington, New Zealand.

The reference to Japan came from luncheon speaker Jean-Luc Pepin, federal minister of trade, industry and commerce. He told the 200 business leaders that Canada wants to export metals to Japan as well as ores, finished papers as well as raw pulp.

Less than three per cent of Canada's exports to Japan were finished products, he said, while 96 per cent of Japan's $1.3 billion worth of exports to Canada last year were "fully manufactured end products."

Japanese industrialist Shigeo Nagano, chairman of Nippon Steel Corp. and president of the Japan Chamber of Commerce, said Japanese businessmen held the same views as Mr. Pepin and have urged their government to lift many import restrictions.

There are restrictions on only 40 items, most of them agricultural products, while as recently as last year there were more than 80 restricted products, the founding president of PBECC said.

The council took the first steps toward establishing an ocean pollution information centre and said it stood ready to help set up any economically viable multi-national nuclear fuel processing operations.

It also agreed to undertake a study of cargo flow on ships through the Pacific, with a view to developing two-way or triangular voyages to eliminate trips in ballast.

A resolution urged each member's government to concentrate aid on improving ports, docks, railroads, highways and airports in the developing nations.

TRAINING PROGRAM

PBECC's committee on human resources resolved to canvas corporations in each country that would undertake to help train middle management personnel from the developing nations. Trainees would spend six to 12 weeks on the job before returning home.

Members also agreed to work on reducing non-tariff barriers, which Canadian and New Zealand delegates said threatens to wipe out the general 35-per-cent tariff reductions achieved by the Kennedy Round general agreement on trade and tariffs four years ago.

The name of the organization was shortened to Pacific Basin Economic Council.

Sandwiches, Coffee Replace Ceremony

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was a graduation ceremony all right, but there wasn't a mortarboard or gown in sight as 200 graduating Vancouver City College students received their diplomas Friday night.

College officials made a few brief remarks but there was no guest speaker and no valedictorian to tell the audience how sorry the students were to be leaving the place.

Nor was there any marching to the stage and shaking hands with the inevitable platform party.

Instead, students simply picked their diplomas out of one of eight cardboard boxes in a corner of the college cafeteria. Then they joined friends, relatives and teachers for sandwiches and coffee.

The informal reception was held after a poll of students showed they didn't want the standard full-dress procession.

"Students today aren't as prepared for formal ceremonies and want things on a more personal basis," said Principal J. D. Newberry.

"For someone who's been at it as long as I have it seems unusual, but I suppose it's a sign of the times."

Bail Set at $20,000 In Stolen Stock Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bail of $20,000 was set in provincial court Friday for a man accused of taking part in a nation-wide scheme to sell stolen stocks and bonds.

A second man, who the Crown alleges played a lesser part in the scheme, had bail set at $3,500.

William Henry Lemmon, 42, of Vancouver, Irwin Edward Schubert, 37, of suburban Richmond municipality and two men arrested Wednesday in Ontario, are charged jointly with conspiring to possess stolen goods.

The four also face a second charge of conspiring to trade in securities while "not being registered as a broker, investment dealer, broker-dealer, security issuer, or as a salesman of a registered broker, investment dealer, broker-dealer or security issuer."

Provincial Court Judge J. J. Anderson set bail at $20,000 for Lemmon after Prosecutor J. L. McCarthy said the Crown will allege Lemmon approached a member of the local investment community with a proposition to sell $2 million in stolen stocks and bonds in a package deal.

Kamloops Gets Copter Ambulance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Royal Inland Hospital at Kamloops has established a full-time, daylight helicopter ambulance service under an agreement with Vancouver - based Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., it was announced Friday.

R. M. Latta, a government representative on the hospital's board said he believes it is the first such service to be established in Canada.

Royal Inland had experimented in the past with helicopter ambulance service on two holiday weekends and has built a helipad on its grounds.

The new service will cover a 100-mile radius to speed patients to the 275-bed regional and referral hospital.

"If we save one life, all the effort will be well worth it, and I know we're going to save lives," Mr. Latta said.

He said the RCMP would decide whether to dispatch a helicopter, surface ambulance or boat to rescue accident victims in the Kamloops region.

Okanagan will supply Bell 206 - A JetRanger, a turbine-engined helicopter that can be quickly converted to carry two stretcher patients. It has a cruising speed of about 140 miles an hour.

GUTHRIE
. . . famed director

NEWBLISS, Ireland (UPI) — Sir Tyrone Guthrie, theatre producer, director, actor and playwright, died today at his country home. He was 70.

A family spokesman said Guthrie was reading his morning mail after breakfast when he collapsed and died.

A commanding figure just short of seven feet tall, Guthrie established his most lasting reputation as a producer and director of Shakespeare.

'LOCK UP YOUR DAUGHTERS'

Bubbling Musical Has Stylish Touch

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Turn off the TV, lock up your houses and head for the McPherson Playhouse tonight or any night next week.

Lock Up Your Daughters is the name of the show there and it's worth the effort. It's a bright, blithe, bubbling musical, directed with a light hand and a stylish touch by Walter Burgess, guesting for Bastion Theatre from Toronto.

Final production of the current Bastion season, it is away happy and in a mood for encores.

This is a show that has plenty going for it in the first place.

It possesses all the picturesque charm of its 18th century setting and the plot witticism and tongue-in-cheek intrigue of its progenitor — Henry Fielding's comedy, Rape Upon Rape.

It has music by Laurel Johnson and lyrics by Lionel Bart of Oliver fame. And it has several appealing tuneful numbers like It Must Be True, Lovely Lover, When Does the Ravishing Begin? and The Gentle Art of Seduction.

To all this director Burgess's choregraphic gifts and flair for stylization have brought buoyancy, discipline and vitality.

There is a fine small pit orchestra, firmly and flexibly controlled by Howard Denike.

There are settings by Jack Trueman that are imaginative, and while they do not always work as well as they should — especially the revolves — they contribute to the character of the production.

And then there is the cast.

The overall impression is of a fine team of attractive people with delightful voices and a genuine sense of tempo, although the brio, in a show of this type, could be still more intense.

One or two individual performances being lower-keyed than others, were responsible for dulling the effect of a scene now and then.

But Janie Woods is entirely charming, competent and vocally lovely as the pure heroine; Edward Greenhalgh's Justice Squeezum is a splendidly oozing, leering comic portrait, and Marge Bridgeman's performance, luscious and lusty, is memorable — especially when she turns on the sex in the Ravishing and Seduction songs.

Barry Grimshaw, Roy Silver and Ray Middleton's voices are attributes of the production and there are several good supporting comic performances besides an amusing characterization by Stuart Kent as the bumbling coffee house politician.

Curtain time for Lock Up Your Daughters is 8 p.m.

If you're holidaying in Britain does it really make sense to tiptoe through the tulips first?

Two airlines fly out of the West direct to Europe this summer.

But only one actually flies to Britain. Air Canada's Western Arrow.

The other flies to Amsterdam. Then arranges with another carrier to take you on. For an extra $25 per person. The story is that you get to see Amsterdam for a couple of days for only $25 extra.

$25?

C'mon, you're not going to eat? Drink? Get hotels? Taxis? Souvenirs?

Let's face it, most couples go a little overboard the first few days of their holiday. In that mood, your Amsterdam stop-over could end up as a substantial bite out of your British holiday budget.

And that money, spent in Britain, could go a long way... to a car and mileage or simple accommodation. So obviously, if you're going to Britain, it makes sense to go with the airline that goes direct, for less.

And that's us.

Air Canada. With our famous Western Arrow.

We're convenient.

From the West direct. Or from the East with BOAC. But we want to be more than that. So?

PBECC Nations Urge Japan to Ease Import Restrictions

By NORMAN GIDNEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pacific Basin Economic Co-operation Council ended its four-day annual meeting Friday with a Canadian selected to become its next president and a call for a more liberalized Japanese import policy.

The man who will be PBECC's new president is K. H. J. Clarke, a top executive of International Nickel Co., and leader of the 84 Canadians at the conference. He takes over in 1972 after the next conference in Wellington, New Zealand.

The reference to Japan came from luncheon speaker Jean-Luc Pepin, federal minister of trade, industry and commerce. He told the 200 business leaders that Canada wants to export metals to Japan as well as ores, finished papers as well as raw pulp.

Less than three per cent of Canada's exports to Japan were finished products, he said, while 96 per cent of Japan's $1.3 billion worth of exports to Canada last year were "fully manufactured end products."

Japanese industrialist Shigeo Nagano, chairman of Nippon Steel Corp. and president of the Japan Chamber of Commerce, said Japanese businessmen held the same views as Mr. Pepin and have urged their government to lift many import restrictions.

There are restrictions on only 40 items, most of them agricultural products, while as recently as last year there were more than 80 restricted products, the founding president of PBECC said.

The council took the first steps toward establishing an ocean pollution information centre and said it stood ready to help set up any economically viable multi-national nuclear fuel processing operations.

It also agreed to undertake a study of cargo flow on ships through the Pacific, with a view to developing two-way or triangular voyages to eliminate trips in ballast.

A resolution urged each member's government to concentrate aid on improving ports, docks, railroads, highways and airports in the developing nations.

TRAINING PROGRAM

PBECC's committee on human resources resolved to canvas corporations in each country that would undertake to help train middle management personnel from the developing nations. Trainees would spend six to 12 weeks on the job before returning home.

Members also agreed to work on reducing non-tariff barriers, which Canadian and New Zealand delegates said threatens to wipe out the general 35-per-cent tariff reductions achieved by the Kennedy Round general agreement on trade and tariffs four years ago.

The name of the organization was shortened to Pacific Basin Economic Council.

Sandwiches, Coffee Replace Ceremony

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was a graduation ceremony all right, but there wasn't a mortarboard or gown in sight as 200 graduating Vancouver City College students received their diplomas Friday night.

College officials made a few brief remarks but there was no guest speaker and no valedictorian to tell the audience how sorry the students were to be leaving the place.

Nor was there any marching to the stage and shaking hands with the inevitable platform party.

Instead, students simply picked their diplomas out of one of eight cardboard boxes in a corner of the college cafeteria. Then they joined friends, relatives and teachers for sandwiches and coffee.

The informal reception was held after a poll of students showed they didn't want the standard full-dress procession.

"Students today aren't as prepared for formal ceremonies and want things on a more personal basis," said Principal J. D. Newberry.

"For someone who's been at it as long as I have it seems unusual, but I suppose it's a sign of the times."

Bail Set at $20,000 In Stolen Stock Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bail of $20,000 was set in provincial court Friday for a man accused of taking part in a nation-wide scheme to sell stolen stocks and bonds.

A second man, who the Crown alleges played a lesser part in the scheme, had bail set at $3,500.

William Henry Lemmon, 42, of Vancouver, Irwin Edward Schubert, 37, of suburban Richmond municipality and two men arrested Wednesday in Ontario, are charged jointly with conspiring to possess stolen goods.

The four also face a second charge of conspiring to trade in securities while "not being registered as a broker, investment dealer, broker-dealer, security issuer, or as a salesman of a registered broker, investment dealer, broker-dealer or security issuer."

Provincial Court Judge J. J. Anderson set bail at $20,000 for Lemmon after Prosecutor J. L. McCarthy said the Crown will allege Lemmon approached a member of the local investment community with a proposition to sell $2 million in stolen stocks and bonds in a package deal.

Kamloops Gets Copter Ambulance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Royal Inland Hospital at Kamloops has established a full-time, daylight helicopter ambulance service under an agreement with Vancouver - based Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., it was announced Friday.

R. M. Latta, a government representative on the hospital's board said he believes it is the first such service to be established in Canada.

Royal Inland had experimented in the past with helicopter ambulance service on two holiday weekends and has built a helipad on its grounds.

The new service will cover a 100-mile radius to speed patients to the 275-bed regional and referral hospital.

"If we save one life, all the effort will be well worth it, and I know we're going to save lives," Mr. Latta said.

He said the RCMP would decide whether to dispatch a helicopter, surface ambulance or boat to rescue accident victims in the Kamloops region.

Okanagan will supply Bell 206 - A JetRanger, a turbine-engined helicopter that can be quickly converted to carry two stretcher patients. It has a cruising speed of about 140 miles an hour.

Drought and Man's Engineering Wiping Out Everglades

By PHILIP D. CARTER
The Washington Post

EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK — Florida's natural drought on record and the unnatural works of man have brought slow, choking death to the everglades and threatened all south Florida with environmental disaster.

Within the 1.4 million-acre everglades national park at the state's southern tip, vast sloughs and countless waterholes, teaming with life in a normal May, today are dry and barren. Alligators have vanished. Fish have disappeared. Birds and mammals have departed.

In the densely populated towns and cities of the state's southern coasts, water rationing has been widely ordered in the face of salt water contamination of local fresh water supplies.

And in the once-thriving swamps and the fertile farmlands outside the park, fires sweep out of control. By one recent count, 7,366 fires have swept 560,518 acres of south Florida this year in the course of the six-month drought. In wide areas the earth itself is destroyed, and the pungent smoke from the burning muck often blackens the skies of Miami.

Little rain has fallen across south Florida in the past six months. Scattered showers have recently brought some relief to limited areas. More rain is predicted — today, tomorrow, next week, next month — when the summer's wet season is finally due to begin.

But the great dying off of the everglades may never be reversed. Shrunken and drained to fit the needs of farmers and developers, its waters channelled to the cities and the sea, the everglades today is like a great, crumbling sponge squeezed dry by man and nature. By some measures, man's is the harsher hand.

Arthur R. Marshall, a University of Miami ecologist who has studied the problems of the everglades basin for the past 16 years, recently warned Florida Governor Reubin Askew and his cabinet that the region is approaching its "limits of resiliency" as an ecological system.

"Should we continue on our past course of environmental insensitivity or indifference," he warned, "we shall see a snowballing degeneration of major resources of the everglades in this decade. . . .

"The everglades is not just stressed — it is distressed — a condition brought about to a major degree by past works of the flood-control project."

The project he referred to is the work of the Central and South Florida Flood-Control District, known locally as the FCS.

Since the project's inception in 1947, the FCD has spent more than a quarter of a billion dollars developing a complex network of canals, leeves and water-control systems aimed at controlling the natural annual flow of water through the region. The broadest effect of the project, which is implemented by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, has been the wholesale diversion of water away from the interior basin of the southern peninsula and into the sea.

In narrow practical terms, the project has meant the "reclamation" of thousands of once-swampy acres for intensive agriculture and housing developments. In the broadest ecological terms, this "progress" has been bought at an unknowable but monumental price.

For thousands of years, the complex life systems of the region were inexplicably dependent on the natural yearly cycles between high and low water.

Each summer, drenching rains fell on the basin, refilling the region's reservoirs, the lakes of the Kissimmee Valley and Lake Okeechobee and refilling the potholes an dsloughs of the vast grassy river of the everglades itself.

Following the slope of the land, the overflow slowly moved southward through a 200-mile-long basin to the dense mangrove forests at the tip of the peninsula, there to mix with the sea.

In the lower everglades, the great sheet of water spreads up to 100 miles across. Here, innumerable species of small aquatic animals — killifish, crawfish, mosquito fish — reproduced and foraged in the warm summer wet. Then as the rains slackened, the water continued to flow southward, constantly reduced by evaporation, groundwater seepage and transpiration — the release of water vapor by plant life.

As the water contracted, the minute, dispersed life forms it contained were concentrated to the extraordinary densities essential to the needs of birds, fishes, reptiles and predator mammals.

At the uppermost end of this intricate "food chain," alligators and crocodiles presided. As recently as 1950, according to Dr. Frank Craighead, probably 2 million alligators survived. Today, says the Florida naturalist, only 1 to 5 per cent of that number survives. Crocodiles are virtually extinct.

Penny-Poor Rome Rapped For Park Buy

ROME (AP) — The city of Rome is getting a gorgeous new park by buying it from a rich Italian princess for $3.2 million.

The 235-acre Villa Doria Pamphili has just been opened to the public, but not everybody is happy about the acquisition. A controversy has erupted that demonstrates the quandary of a big city that has many debts and a shortage of public services.

Many think the municipality cannot afford to keep up the land and princely buildings on it.

Princess Orietta Doria Pamphili is a descendant of Italy's celebrated naval commander, Andrea Doria, who defeated the Turks in the 15th century. She sold the land to the city for about two billion lire.

The princess' British husband, Frank, says flatly: "It was a sale in lieu of expropriation."

HAD CHOICE

In fact, the city could have had the land free if it wanted to wait. Long ago it zoned the noble villa as park land and set up machinery to expropriate it and similar tracts. In 1965 it expropriated an adjacent 185-acre portion of the princess' land and opened it to the public.

For the portion now opened, the city had two choices: wait for the years-long expropriation procedure and acquire the land free, or buy it immediately.

Even at the negotiated price city officials believe they got a bargain.

The new area is twice the size of Rome's hitherto most famous park, Villa Borghese. It includes pastures, woods and gardens just inside the city limits behind the Vatican.

A MOST TRUSTED NAME IN TRAVEL.

Your Okanagan vacation:
Why you should count on PWA.

1. TWO EXTRA DAYS.
Your PWA flight takes only minutes, instead of a day there and a day back that driving would take. So you save two whole days. And that's two extra days for your vacation. To catch a few more fish or a deeper tan.

2. FAMILY FARE PLAN.
You can enjoy substantial savings when you fly with your family. Here's the plan. It's called the "Seven days a week family plan". Even if you decide to return before your family there's no extra charge. And if they've never flown before, it's the relaxed way to introduce them to the wonder of flight -- PWA style.

3. COST Travelling by car does have its good points. But here's our point. Add up the cost of gas and oil consumption, plus depreciation of the car, and flying becomes a very reasonable proposition. And we'll match our luxurious Boeing 737 jets with the family car anyday!

4. PROPER PLANNING.
Be sure that you have all the information before you go and we are here to help. For further information write the Tourist Associations in Penticton, Kelowna and Vernon. Also check with your local travel agent for hotel and motel reservations.

5. CAREFREE.
Is this the kind of vacation you thought you had to go abroad for? Where you can lie in the sun on golden beaches. Swim in clear blue waters that are a comfortable 75 degrees. Eat peaches and apricots fresh from the tree. Enjoy lively summer festivals. And where there's excellent fishing and sailing too. This is the Okanagan vacation. PWA puts it all right on your doorstep.

6. BUSINESS AND PLEASURE.
You can combine them perfectly with PWA. For example, you can take your family on a business trip with the "Seven days a week family plan". And whatever your business arrangements are, your family can stay on without affecting the special fare.

7. TRAFFIC.
No matter how much you enjoy driving, it's good to take a break from the traffic now and again. A PWA flight provides an enjoyable, relaxing break from the wear and tear of a long drive. With PWA you get to enjoy the view, too.

8. ARRIVE RELAXED.
Our whole idea is to make your PWA flight so enjoyable that it becomes part of your vacation. With great service, Real Pacific Western-style hospitality, in cool, spacious comfort. All you have to do is sit back and enjoy the view as you soar high above the clouds and mountain tops. And that's real relaxation.

9. SPECIAL TILDEN HOLIDAY PACKAGE.
Save 15% on car rental. Reserve a Tilden car for your Okanagan vacation when you book your airline ticket and you'll save 15%. This offer is good June 1 through September 6. Reservations must be made in advance through your travel agent or PWA.

Count on us.

Flying in a Jumbo Jet Somehow Gets to Peoples' Bladders

By ROGER EGLIN
The London Observer

LONDON — Some of BOAC's America-bound passengers who recently switched from a strike-bound Boeing-747 jumbo jet to a less spacious British VC-10 were less than disappointed. Indeed, they welcomed the change.

This is scarcely surprising. Deftly putting its finger on one of the grumbles about the 747, BOAC was advertising its Washington-London service last summer in terms of a choice between flying "with over 350 other people on that other plane, or taking BOAC's exclusive, more personal VC-10."

BOAC's passengers have not been the only people to take a somewhat jaundiced view of jumbo flight. Other airlines have detected a tendency among more experienced passengers to prefer the 747's less jumboesque sister, the 707. Considering that Jumbos each cost a cool $28.8 million including spares, and were supposed to herald a new era of comfort in air transport, that kind of consumer reaction is most disappointing.

To write off the plane as a flop, however, would be foolish. In less than six months of service jumbos carried a million passengers, and up to mid-summer last year operated at an average load factor of 63 per cent, a figure which would leave any airline management wreathed in smiles.

There were, however, unexpected teething troubles. There was, for example, the well-publicized need to modify the Pratt and Whitney JT9D engines. And the tracks carrying a flap on the wings are being strengthened, as are the spar attachments for the wings. (None of these faults, however, affects the safety of aircraft in service; they were discovered on fatigue-testing rigs that have accumulated many more "hours" than any 747 flying.)

Any major new aircraft does expect to encounter problems of this nature. But what has rather taken the airlines aback is the problems they have encountered in the cabin.

Pan American, for example, has made the curious discovery that jumbo flight affects passengers' bladders. Whether or not it is the extra space, passengers certainly feel disproportionate calls of nature on jumbo flights. Then there were the food carts. These blocked the cabin alleys, leading to aisle-long jams of irate passengers and stewardesses.

Trans World Airlines was only one of several airlines to find its stewardesses shunning 747s for 707s. Pan-Am has already launched a $60 million improvement and rectification program for its fleet.

One airline executive summed up the troubles as "the passenger liberation movement." It is simply that having provided passengers with more space to wander airlines did not foresee quite how much use they would make of it.

Thus, passengers determined to sleep have found it impossible, irritated by passing sky-wanderers. "We spent all those years trying to make aircraft engines quieter and none of us realized how much noise 350 people tramping about one cabin could make," grimaced the airline executive.

And that is not a facetious remark. In what amounts to sheer desperation Pan-Am has installed scientifically selected sleep inducing music in the in-flight entertainment systems on its fleet.

On the face of it the 747 looks a disaster in terms of economics. For flights to carry as few as 16 passengers is not out of the ordinary. But it would be surprising to find a new passenger aircraft flying chock-full right from the start. The 747 is designed to have a life that will run to the end of this century, and is planned to cater for market growth a few years from now. Normally this anticipated gap between size and immediate capacity would have been bearable. Unfortunately, no one planned for its introduction to coincide with a major depression and endemic overcapacity in air transport.

Fortunately airlines can draw some consolation from the fact that its basic operating economics look good. Pan-Am president and chief executive Najeeb E. Haleby announced after a few months' experience with the 747 that preliminary direct operating costs for the plane appeared to be 15-20 per cent lower than for Boeing-707s on the same route.

As yet no airline operates a 747 in scheduled service at its most economic capacity of 450 or so seats. But at this level of congestion would the passenger liberation movement finally rebel?

'Passenger Liberation Movement' Causing Jam-Ups, Irritating Noise

Man Transforms City's Lakefront

TORONTO (CP)—The expression of a German-born architect's determination to show Toronto what it can make of its often-criticized waterfront is almost ready for the Ontario public.

Ontario Place, a group of space-age buildings sitting in the waters of Lake Ontario off the Canadian National Exhibition grounds, will open May 22.

With its huge dome of a movie theatre and five steel-pavilion "pods" sitting on stilts, it is only a beginning to the transformation Eberhard Zeidler has in mind for his adopted city's lakefront.

In the works is Harbor City, a proposed housing development that would sit in the lake alongside Ontario Place, allowing thousands of people to live within walking distance of this city's downtown core.

The development and growth of Ontario Place from a mere replacement building at the CNE reflects Mr. Zeidler's thinking about his profession.

LINKED BY CANALS

An architect's responsibilities don't end with considerations of business, art and technology, he says.

Sociological and anthropological considerations are important too — cities must be made into good places to live.

Ontario Place started out to be a replacement for the Province of Ontario building, sitting in one corner of the CNE grounds, complete with a doggedly educational set of exhibits about the historical, geographical and historical attractions of the province.

What evolved from that modest pavilion is a development that includes a movie screen as high as a six-storey building, restaurants, boutique villages and beaches, all linked by canals and walkways.

ESCAPED THE EAST

"I really didn't want to accept the Ontario Place assignment," says Mr. Zeidler. "But after thinking about it, I figured that if it worked, it might show people what could be done with this wonderful lakefront of ours."

After studying architecture in both East and West Germany — he escaped the East on his third try — Mr. Zeidler came to Canada in 1951 and taught at the University of Toronto from 1953 to 1955.

As an architect, he won 14 Massey medals and two National Design awards and designed schools in Peterborough, Ont., a hospital in Whitby, Ont., and a health sciences centre at McMaster University in Hamilton.

Tourism Soaring

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tourism in the Pacific is booming, especially in out-of-the-way places like Papua, Easter Island and New Caledonia, and is increasing in value by about 20 per cent a year, delegates to the Pacific Basin Economic Co-operation Council were told here.

C. H. Rennie, chairman of the Australia and New Zealand Bank, told the tourism committee of the council that the value of tourism to the countries of the south and east Pacific increased to an estimated $760 million in 1969.

This compared with receipts of $517 million in 1967 and $645 million in 1968. Figures include Australia, Cambodia, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and South Vietnam.

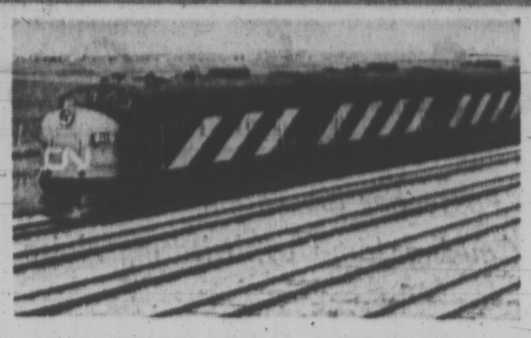
PIPELINE, TANKER CRITICS FAN INTEREST



Moving Oil by Rail Seriously Considered

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The head-on collision between drawbacks of an Alaskan pipeline-tanker route and a Mackenzie Valley pipeline route for Prudoe Bay oil has revived serious interest here in a third transportation mode — the old-fashioned railway.

Announcement is likely soon of a Canada-U.S. crash program to research the economic, engineering and ecological feasibility of building a railway from Alaska's North Slope oil fields to Hay River, NWT, it was learned Friday.

Hay River already is connected to Edmonton by the Great Slave Lake Railway and Northern Alberta Railway built in recent years as a result of government efforts to open up the sub-Aretic resource areas and develop the Mackenzie Valley transportation route.

Unit tankcar trains for moving the Alaskan oil have been under preliminary study by the prestigious Carnegie-Melon University's Transportation Research Institute in Pittsburgh which has become excited by the prospects.

The Canadian counterpart to the U.S. institute is the Canadian Institute of Guided Ground Transport at Kingston, sponsored by Queen's University, the department of transport and both national railways. It likely would carry the load of research with Carnegie-Melon.

The Carnegie-Melon work corelates well with a special study commissioned by the Indian affairs and northern development department a couple of years ago to analyze relative economics involved in all possible forms of bulk transportation in the Arctic.

An internal document that was never published, it was prepared for the department by the Warnock Hersey International consulting firm after surveying the costs and obvious engineering aspects of superships, super-submarines, pipelines, railways, hovercraft, aircraft, off-highway vehicles, conveyor belts and monorails.

It concluded that ice-breaking super-ships, nuclear submarine supertankers, unit trains and pipelines were "the four modes of transport deemed most economical" to haul bulk commodities from the Arctic to national and international markets.

However, nuclear submarines would have to await more technological development and new pollution-control regulations made Manhattan-type ships more expensive for the Prudhoe oil field than pipelines.

The immediate choice lies between pipelines and unit trains for the north, the Warnock Hersey investigation showed and it produced some interesting figures.

A 48-inch pipeline running 1,500 miles over the Mackenzie Valley route would cost about $1 million per mile to build to handle 12.3 million tons annually.

Together with annual operating and amortization charges, the pipeline cost would run to 8 1-3 cents per ton-mile.

A unit train system of 500 miles would cost an average of $350,000 a mile to build and using five 10,000-ton unit trains to make 150 trips each annually could carry 7.5 million tons a year.

Amortized capital and operating costs would work out to 6 1-3 cents per ton mile.

On the flat Mackenzie Valley grade, 10,000-ton unit trains of 100 cars each carrying 100 tons could be pulled easily by four locomotives, the report said.

(Since then, such trains have gone into regular service carrying coal from the Rockies to the West Coast on steeper grades.)

A transportation specialist today explained that 37 daily smaller trains only three locomotives pulling 80 100-ton tank cars could match the 250 tons daily throughput of oil proposed by the Aleyska consortium's pipeline-tanker route if instead a railway was built linking Prudhoe Bay to the Edmonton marshalling yards.

"The development of the oil field's capacity on the north slope will be spread out over a number of years because it takes time to sink wells and that's another advantage of rail over pipeline," he said.

"Its capacity can be paced instead of bunching up all financing and development demands at the outset as they are with a pipeline."

Warnock Hersey pointed out a major advantage of a railway over a pipeline in the Arctic — in terms of environmental and technological problems — is that Canada has built and operated successfully four railways on permafrost.

They are: The Hudson Bay Railroad from The Pas to Churchill; Quebec Northshore and Labrador Railway from Sept Iles to Schefferville; the Great Slave Lake line and the Pine Point railway in the Northwest Territories.

"By utilizing the experience of these lines, the pitfalls of building a railroad over Arctic permafrost could be avoided," the report noted.

An expert today pointed out that a rail line by its nature presents a less hazardous intrusion into the delicate Arctic eco-system of plants and wildlife than a hot oil pipeline.

"And, in terms of ballpark figures, the economics of a pipeline and railway are about the same. The initial capital cost of a railway would be samller but its annual operating costs would be a bit higher than a pipeline.

"Yet even this could be a benefit to Canada because a rail line for moving the U.S. oil would produce more jobs and would mean considerably more of the investment benefits would stick to Canadian fingers."

The specialist, who wishes to remain unidentified, said "the interest in a rail system for moving the oil has never really lagged but it certainly has not had much public exposure or attention before."

It has been getting more attention lately because of the "frying pan-fire" dilemma outlined by environmentalists in the choice between the Trans-Alaska pipeline system and Mackenzie Valley pipeline routes.

Last month, while testifying to the Commons special committee on pulltuion, Richard Passmore, exective director of the Canadian wildlife Federation, told MPs:

"One (alternative) which seems to get very little play in the press or in anyone's consideration is a railway line which could carry oil from Prudhoe Bay to somewhere on the continent by unitized tank cars.

"I think it is worthy of much more consideration than it is now getting."

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Why the Scholar Believed: 'Promises Became Facts'

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

A few years ago I read in a British periodical a report of a television program in which a well-known Scottish minister and teacher of ministers, Dr. J. G. McKenzie, was interviewed. McKenzie died shortly after the interview, in his 82nd year.

Toward the end of the program the interviewer said this to him: "Professor McKenzie, you're an old man now and your physical powers are beginning to fail. Looking back over the many years of the past, tell me in a word why you believe."

Earlier in the broadcast, when asked what he believed, Dr. McKenzie had straightforwardly stated some of the great basic doctrines of Christianity. But the interviewer now wanted to know why he held these beliefs, why he subscribed to these great centralities of the Christian religion.

This was the old man's answer: "My fundamental ground for believing is not intellectual at all. I found my religion verified at every turn of my life. Promises became facts."

McKenzie was not anti-intellectualis in religion. He was not a fanatical believer who would strangle reason and repudiate faith's rational dimension. He had a modern, scholarly approach to the Bible and to Christian doctrine. He was well-informed in philosophy and in the social sciences. He was a pioneer in the applying of the insights of modern psychology to religion.

He did reason about faith, reason rigorously and critically. But he said that his fundamental ground for believing was not intellectual, but in the verification his faith received as he strived to live it. "Promises became facts," he said.

"Promises became facts." That underscores one of the basic practicalities of the Christian religion, that in the life of faith proof and practice go hand-in-hand. The proof of faith is in the living of faith. In the life of faith promises do become facts.

You can't get faith right off the rack and ready to wear. Faith is not that kind of thing at all. Faith is always a venture, a venture which begins in taking a chance that God is, and that God is good, and that God cares for us and cares about us, and that in Jesus of Nazareth God revealed to us a pattern for life and offered us power for the living of that life.

It is as we venture ahead in faith that we get our proofs and come to a deep awareness of the meaningfulness of life.

Virginia Woolf, a greatly gifted and terribly disturbed English novelist who in a fit of despair took her own life during the Second World War, in her diary expressed a yearning for a sense of life's meaningfulness, for, she said, "something that one can lay one's hands upon and say, 'This is it'."

Christianity claims to have the antidote for meaninglessness. It claims that in the venture of faith one can come to an awareness of real purpose and meaning, an awareness of something on which one can lay one's hands and say, "This is it!"

Faith's promises can become facts for the person who works at making them facts. In the life of faith there is an indispensible element of the do-it-yourself.

Infidels No More

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Roman Catholicism and Islam, the world's two largest religions whose members once slaughtered each other as an act of faith, now coexist peacefully. At times they even co-operate.

Gone are the days when one viewed the other as "inferior" or "infidel."

At the Vatican now, the Secretariat for non-Christians, rather than the office for non-believers, deals with Islamic affairs. A recent Vatican communique referred to Islam-Roman Catholic ties as "fraternal among believers who have in common the respect of all religious values and faith in God."

Islam still lacks the equivalent of a religious centre like Vatican City. But more and more Moslem countries are establishing diplomatic relations with the Vatican. Eight have full ambassadors accredited here.

Vatican observers and Moslem envoys say Roman Catholic-Islam coexistence — in the making ever since the inconclusive Crusades centuries ago — gained momentum for cordiality in recent years. Some even say it's a natural step after ever-increasing ecumenism within Christianity.

POPE MAKES EFFORT

They point out the efforts of Pope Paul, who travelled 2,000 miles in 1967 for a trip to Turkey, which is 95 per cent Moslem. The Pope's main reason for going was to meet Orthodox Patriarch Athenagoras.

Even during his last overseas trip, an eight-nation swing to Asia and the Pacific last year for "the rediscovery of the church," the Pope's first stop was in Moslem Iran. He later visited the Islamic state of Pakistan and predominantly Moslem Indonesia.

In Jakarta, Buddhists and Moslems were among 50,000 attending the Pope's mass at a stadium. The pontiff later was presented a copy of the Koran in Arabic.

Some Roman Catholic-Moslem rivalry persists.

The two religions vie for conversion of pagans in Africa. The Roman Catholic side sometimes accuses Moslem missionaries of spreading the word in the jungles that Christianity is "the religion of the white man and imperialism."

In the current civil disturbance in Sudan, the Moslem countries give their sympathy to the Arab rulers of the north while the Christians are concerned with the suppression of their black minority in the south.

In the Nigerian civil war, Christian Ibos, in minority, fought Nigerian tribes of Islamic faith.

Intermittent Christian-Moslem fighting also flares up on a local scale in the Philippines, with the Moslems outnumbered there.

But, over-all, both religions have entered into dialogue on an unprecedented scale. For the first time, the Vatican held official talks last year with the Supreme Council of Islamic Affairs, headed by an Egyptian.

The Vatican and the Council agreed to consult each other regularly "on social, cultural and spiritual levels." They also plan to exchange permanent observers.

Underlying such contacts is concern for Jerusalem, the Holy City of Christianity, Islam and Judaism. After changing hands scores of times and surviving one sacking after another since the Crusades in the 11th century, the city now is in Israeli hands.

Christians and Moslems have access to it, but little say in running the city their traditions hold as a precious shrine.

Victorian Takes Perpetual Oath

MARYKNOLL, N.Y. — Brother John J. Beeching, MM, of Victoria, British Columbia, professed his perpetual oath to the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America today in ceremonies at the Maryknoll Seminary near Ossining, N.Y.

Brother Beeching, son of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Beeching of 3826 Merriman Drive, Victoria, has been a member of Maryknoll since 1964. Born in Castor, Alberta, June 29, 1940, Brother Beeching received his early education in Edmonton and Red Deer, graduating from Red Deer High School in 1958.

RED SHIELD DRIVE WELL UNDER WAY

The Salvation Army's Red Shield campaign has collected $30,069 towards it objective of $85,000, Lyle Wicks, general chairman, said Friday.

"The response is encouraging," Wicks said. "We fully expect to reach the objective."

The big drive in residential districts — the key to the success of the campaign — is under way.

Mrs. Diane Samson, chairman of the residential division, said nearly 1,500 canvassers are calling on homes.

Hurlers Not Intimidating Mets' Batting Order Now

By The Associated Press

Pitching is still the main strength of New York Mets, but nobody bullies their batting order anymore either.

The Mets continued to flex their muscles Friday night, pounding out 10 hits, including home runs by Bob Aspromonte and Cleon Jones, on the way to an 8-2 romp over Pittsburgh Pirates.

New York has won 13 of its last 16 starts for a two-game lead over the second-place Pirates in the National League East Division. And the Mets' .271 team batting average is high in the league.

"You can see what it means if you get hitting with our pitching," said manager Gil Hodges.

Last year, the Mets topped the NL in pitching but were ninth in club batting with a .249 mark while finishing third in the division title race.

In other National League action, San Francisco Giants whipped Los Angeles Dodgers 8-4, Cincinnati Reds downed Montreal Expos 5-2; Atlanta Braves nipped Philadelphia Phillies 3-2; St. Louis Cardinals beat Houston Astros 4-2 and Chicago Cubs edged San Diego Padres 32.

FIRST COMPLETE GAME

Lefthander Jerry Koosman pitched his first complete game of the year for the Mets, who chased Pittsburgh starter Bob Johnson in the first inning, shooting ahead to stay on Ed Kranepool's two-run double.

They scored again in the second, padded the lead to 4-0 in the third on Jones' homer and wrapped it up with four runs in the seventh—the last three on Aspromonte's homer.

Aspromonte, who batted .213 as a part-time player with Atlanta last season, with no homers and seven runs batted in, has hit .265 thus far for the Mets and shares the club lead in homers, with three, and runs batted in with 15.

The Wright move was the wrong one for Kansas City Royals manager Bob Lemon in American League play.

After Lemon lifted starter Ken Wright with a 3-0 lead in the ninth, Oakland Athletics scored five times for a 5-3 victory.

Why pull a guy working on a four-hitter?

"Because that's the longest Wright has thrown in the major leagues," said Lemon, "that's why I didn't go with him any longer. He looked tired. I'd decided he'd had enough."

Wright, formerly a relief pitcher, made his first major league start May 2 against Baltimore Orioles and lost 5-3 to Mike Cuellar after going 4 1-3 innings. On May 9, he pitched 4 1-3 again and got credit for a 6-2 victory over Detroit Tigers.

After Wright walked the leadoff batter in the ninth on his 135th pitch, an ineffectual parade of four relief pitchers marched in — but none could keep his finger in the dike. "I kept bringing in somebody and kept hoping he could throw strikes," said Lemon disgustedly, "but nobody could."

Washington Senators beat Detroit 3-2, Boston Red Sox tripped Baltimore 2-0, Cleveland Indians whipped New York Yankees 2-1, Minnesota Twins beat Chicago White Sox 4-3 and Milwaukee Braves stopped California Angels 4-1 in the other American League games.

Oakland ace Vida Blue, who appeared on hs way to a loss that would have snapped his eight-game winning string, said: "It's sure nice to come out of it with an 8-1 record instead of 8-2."

Washington's Denny McLain beat his former Detroit teammates in their first confrontation since he was traded last year. He blew a 2-0 lead in the top of the ninth, but the Senators came back to win it on Paul Casanova's sacrifice fly.

The Tigers traded McLain during the 1970 World Series after a season in which he was suspended three times.

Scrambling Green Leads at Houston

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — "If you can't scramble, you don't belong out here," said Hubert Green, possibly one of the best scramblers of them all.

The 24-year-old tour rookie, who has threatened strongly in the three last tournaments, scrambled out of all sorts of trouble and took the second round lead in the $125,000 Houston Champions Invitational Golf Tournament Friday.

Green, winner of $34,300 already this year, had a second round 69, despite putting one shot in the water, visiting the pinewoods several times and ambling in and out of six sand traps.

"I was in so many traps I was beginning to feel like Lawrence of Arabia," drawled the Birmingham, Ala. native, a Florida State graduate who joined the pro tour late last year.

WELL UNDER PAR

He had a 36-hole total of 137, five under par on the tough, 7,166 yard Champions Golf Club course, a tree-lined layout that sent the first round leaders reeling back in the pack and posed a variety of problems for pre-tourney favorite Arnold Palmer.

Kermit Zarley and Larry Hinson, who shared the 18-hole lead, each took a 75 for 142. Palmer also had a 75 and was well back at 146.

Canadian George Knudson of Toronto had 149.

Homero Blancas, a Houston native playing before his hometown fans, was just one stroke off the pace with a 68 and 138.

Blond Ben Crenshaw, a 19-year-old amateur who is a freshman at the University of Texas, barged into contention with a 69 for 139.

Ron Cooke Named Most Valuable In McGinnis Loop

Ron Cooke of CFB Esquimalt prevented a sweep of laurels by Empress Paint and Ingraham Buckaroos Friday by winning the most-valuable-player award at the sixth annual Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League awards night.

Empress, coached by Larry LaRochelle and managed by Emil Wegweitz, collected the Humber Brothers Trophy for winning the league title.

The Stuffy McGinnis Memorial Trophy for the playoff championship was won by Ingraham Buckaroos under coach Bill Carlow and manager Ken Walt.

Ron Toffy and Al Payne of Empress shared the best-goalkeeper award while Tom Allen of Bucks collected scoring awards for both league and playoff competition.

League treasurer Doug Sinclair received the President's Trophy, awarded for best service to the league by an official or player.

Homenuik Sets Under-Par Pace

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Canadian pro Wilf Homenuik fired a four-under-par 67 Friday to grab a two-shot lead in the $25,000 East Ridge Golf Classic.

Homenuik's two-under par 140 is two shots better than the foursome og Gordon Jones, Bob Menne, Dick Rhyan and Craig Metz.

The Winnipeg pro is the only golfer under par for two rounds. It took a score of 150 to make the 36-hole cutoff.

"IT'S REAL GOOD DOLLAR VALUE!" That's what Dwain Johanson, of Johanson Contracting Ltd., Vernon, says about this Bantam C450 Hydraulic Hoe. "I'm very happy with the machine; it's real good dollar value and you certainly can't beat Finning service. The Finning people at Vernon and Cranbrook, where I've done some work, have been terrific." The ¾-yd. C450 has done a good job for Johanson on subdivision work as well as municipal water and sewer installations. Other Bantam excavators, like the C475 and the 725A Teleskoop, do a good job too. The C475 hoe is a standard ⅞-yd. machine with hydraulic swing, hydrostatic drive, extendable tracks and two-speed hoist. The 725A Teleskoop is a multi-purpose hydraulic excavator with unique four-way ability: boom up and down, boom in and out, wrist action on the digging tool, and rotate action on the digging tool. There is a choice of buckets up to 7/8-yd. and other high production features. These Bantam excavators, backed by local Finning parts and service support, are "real good dollar value." See your Finning sales representative for full details.

Winter Water Kills—Coroner

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Coroner Richard Murphy of Campbell River, in his report on the drownings of two Vancouver men April 10, says experience has shown "that if you go into the water during other than summer months you will die."

Dr. Murphy was reporting on the deaths of John Donald Barber, 60, and John Alexander Wilson, 29, who drowned when their 40-foot catamaran houseboat went down in rough seas 10 miles south of Cape Mudge, near Campbell River.

He said the boat — advertised as unsinkable — did not carry a liferaft or rope-attached life-ring as required by regulations.

"It would appear useless to recommend that this regulation be policed," he said, "since there are just too many boats."

IN PRINCE GEORGE

Drama Festival Open to Public

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — All plays in the 5th annual B.C. high school drama festival and theatre conference will be open to the public, the organizers have decided.

In other centres, the public has been invited only to a final honors performance.

The festival will take place May 19 to 23. Hosts are Prince George and Kamloops.

Plays which have already taken part in regional festivals will be performed by theatrical groups from Prince George, Victoria, Vancouver, Dawson Creek, Coquitlam, Fort St. John, Surrey, Vernon, Kamloops and Burnaby.

Doug Edgar, co-chairman of the festival with Tom Kerr of Kamloops, said that when the festival had been held in other areas limited space caused performances to be closed. However, Prince George had ample accommodation.

About 350 teachers and students are expected to attend.

The performances of the plays will be part of the learning experience said Edgar.

Students will receive a "very direct" adjudication from Gil Bunch of Victoria.

In addition, they will "increase their own capacity" by watching the different styles of the performers.

Although the festival is non-competitive, the three best plays will be chosen for an honors performance May 22.

Each will have had the benefit of working with Bunch to improve their performance.

Afterwards, four $100 scholarships will be awarded.

B.C. Oysters For France

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thirty-five tons of British Columbia oysters are about to switch citizenship.

The first of a series of shipments of live B.C. oysters were to be loaded aboard an Air Canada plane at Vancouver today and flown to Bordeaux, the centre of France's oyster industry.

The oysters were hand-picked from five beds in the Pendrill Sound and Toba Inlet areas.

Immediately after their arrival in France, they were to be planted in oyster beds at the mouth of the Garonne River. It is hoped they will start spawning in August for harvesting later in the year.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: Willie, my whippet, is kind of a rusty grey color. What I am wondering is is that a good or bad color for him?—M.S.

Dear M.S.: There is no color problem where Willie Whippet is concerned. Farsightedly, standards long ago determined the color of a whippet as immaterial . . .

Dear Dr. Miller: Baldy is my first bird. I'd like to know what is the most important thing I can do to keep him to as old an age as possible. — R.R.

Dear R.R.: You didn't mention just what kind of a bird Baldy is. His requirements will vary considerably depending on whether he is a budgie or a buzzard or something in between. Basically, the two areas of concern are: (1) Providing the proper environment including adequate room, right temperature, lighting conditions, etc., and (2) proper nutrition. Assuming Baldy's off to a healthy start, his chances for a long life look good if these areas are adequately covered.

Dear Dr. Miller: I was stunned to learn that my mamma cat (Mamma-Cat) could have wormy milk. Her kittens, we discovered, were loaded with worms and the doctor said it could have been passed to the kittens through the milk. Since then I have wondered if wormy milk is common in cats? — G.G.

Dear G.G.: Transmammary passage of larva (wormy milk) is one way kittens may be infected, though probably the least common. Yet, it does occur with considerable frequency, even so. Under normal conditions, it's impossible to be sure kittens will not have worms. However, a scrupulously clean environment and adequate, expert worming of the mother minimizes chances of problems for the young.

Dear Dr. Miller: We're about to pick out a puppy but we don't know just what breed to get. I've always loved spaniels and I'd like to get another one but my husband likes a big dog. How can we best get together on this? — T.G.

Dear T.G.: Your answer could be a chip off the old Emerald Isle. The Irish water spaniel is without question the largest of the spaniels. Large male dogs exceed 65 pounds. He could be just the happy compromise you're looking for.

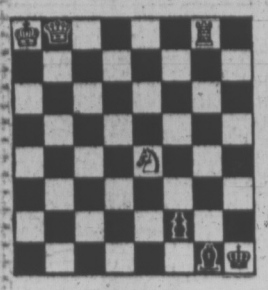
PROBLEM

By V. Diaconu, Romania

BLACK: 3



WHITE: 4

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below:

STRANGE BUT TRUE

The tournament was over. X had won it.

Now the games are being sorted for publication.

The controller going over X's final game runs into the following position:

Black: X: King on KN1; Queen on K3; Rook on QB6; Knight on KB4; Pawns on QR3, QN4, KN3 and KR2 (8 pieces).

White: Y: King on KR2; Rook on K2; Knight on K5; Pawns on Q3, KB4 and KR3 (7 pieces).

Black played 40...N-Q5, attacking the Rook.

(c) Best. After 23...K-N2; 24.NxKPch, and NxQ.

(d) After 29...RxP; 30.QxR, NxQ; 31. RxR, Black is lost, too.

(e) Last hope (34...NxPch).

(f) The end reminds me of the duck hunter who took along a friend who had never before hunted birds. Suddenly a single duck flew past and the hunter snapped the gun to his shoulder and released one load of shot and the duck plummeted to the ground. "How's that for a shot!" exclaimed the hunter. "Oh, I don't know," said his friend. "The fall would have killed him anyway."

The solution to the problem above is: 1.Q-N2.

Russian Excels as Chess Player and Pianist

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chess and music complement one another, providing something for "both the mind and heart," says a Soviet chess grandmaster who is also a concert pianist.

Mark Taimanov is not only one of eight players qualified for the quarter-finals of the world championships and the author of a three-volume chess encyclopedia, but also a professional pianist who, with his wife, gives about 60 concerts a year.

Sunday Taimanov meets American Robert Fischer at the University of British Columbia in a 10-round match, the first of the challengers' round matches.

'TOTAL DEVOTION'

He says he finds the combination of chess and music complicates life, but he considers himself very fortunate at the same time.

"Both of these professions really require total devotion and I am happy to be successful in both."

"If I meet reverses in one I always have the other to fall back on. If you are only a one-sided person and meet a reverse the whole world falls apart."

Taimanov, who has brought out "about 10 long-playing albums" of piano duets, says he has no idea how he finds time for all his activities.

"Every year I spend five months giving concerts, five months travelling on chess tours and six months preparing for both." He added he has always lived this way and cannot conceive of any other tempo of life.

"I was writing the last volume of the encyclopedia during the U.S.S.R.-world match last April," he said. "All the other players would go back to the hotel to have dinner and rest, but I would go back and work on the book."

Taimanov started learning to play music before he started playing chess.

"I attended a special music school as a young child and it was there I met my wife (Lubov Bruk). We had the same instructor and it was his idea that we play paino duets together.

"Since then we invariably play together at concerts."

'HAPPIEST DAYS'

He said his son graduated from the conservatory Wednesday after also studying with the same instructor.

"Our happiest days are when we play three painos together," he said.

Taimanov's introduction to chess came indirectly from his involvement in the music world.

"When I was 10 years old I was the hero of a film called 'Beethoven Concerto'," he said. "The story was about a gifted musical child.

"Strangely enough I didn't play the piano in the film, but the violin.

"It was because of this film that I became a chess player."

CHILD CELEBRITY

As payment for his role Taimanov received a grand piano. More important, he became a child celebrity and received invitiations to meet many different groups, including the Pioneers, the Russian equivalents of Boy Scouts.

On a visit to the Palace of Pioneers, Taimanov said:

"I was asked which activity I wanted to join and I decided the chess room appealed to me most.

"It was there that I came under the instruction of Mikhail Botvinnik, then chess champion of the U.S.S.R. and later world champion for 11 years.

"Even now I consider him a great authority and consulted him before I left on ways ot ackling Fischer.

Taimanov described his American opponent as "one of the great chess players of the world."

He said in recent weeks he has been studying Fischer's style of play and personality. "After that it is just a matter of being rested and in good physical condition."

Taimanov at 55 is 17 years older than Fischer, but he doesn't feel the age difference will matter.

Hush Puppies Contest report:
Juvenile judges get nasty.

The Hush Puppies Colouring Contest for Adults has been underway three weeks. If you're a slow colourer, you should have at least the yellow done by now (reference alongside for uncreative types).

Entries so far are a mixed bunch. Some of them are good; but some others . . . well, maybe they did things in too much of a hurry. Our judges (twelve-year-olds from the art class of the Kitchener Parks and Recreation Commission) said if they did work that sloppy, they'd lose their allowance for the week.

If you have an insane urge to win one of our five Basset Hound puppy prizes (it'll grow up to look like our Hush Puppies mascot) get a colouring picture and entry form from any shoe store that sells Hush Puppies.

And watch out for further contest reports as the pace gets more frantic —only three weeks to go.

BAREFOOT COMFORT IS A LITTER OF HUSH PUPPIES.

The new Mercedes-Benz 280S: "Nips through traffic like a sports car."

The new Mercedes-Benz 280S explodes the myth that a so-called "fine car" has to be a huge car. Compared with its major rivals, the 280S gives away nothing in interior room, yet measures a full two feet shorter on the outside. You can nip through traffic with the ease of a sports car.

If the 280S handles like a sports car, perhaps it's because its fully independent suspension first appeared on a World Championship Mercedes-Benz racing car. It gets a ferocious grip on the road, yet individual suspension at each wheel actually gives you a smoother ride than those spongily sprung "luxury" cars.

Short of the limousine class, you're unlikely to find a more comfortable or better-made automobile than the 280S. Its heavy-gauge steel "unitized" body and chassis are welded together at 10,000 points to squelch squeaks and rattles forever. By ordinary standards, the 280S is a much better car than it has to be. Some critics have called it "over-engineered". It's true. And Mercedes-Benz is proud of it.

Interested in a car that substitutes engineering and workmanship for status and gee-gaws in the "luxury" sedan class? The new Mercedes-Benz 280S ranks as the most roadworthy car of its kind. It's on display in our showroom now. Come in for a demonstration drive today.

Consumer Watchdog Job Grows

By ROBIN BURGESS

Investigating consumer complaints, negotiating refunds, educating the public to know their rights under the Consumer Protection Act . . . Michael Hanson handles it all.

In December, 1969, one year after the B.C. Consumer Protection Act was passed, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson appointed Hanson B.C.'s consumer protection officer.

From the beginning it's been a massive job — and getting bigger all the time.

Last year, said Hanson, his office, which consists of himself and his secretary, handled 650 complaints.

The full-time secretary is a relatively new addition. Until mid-November of last year, Hanson had only a part-time secretary.

Hanson's present office, his third in a year and a half, is located on the lower main floor of the Law Courts Building.

He and his secretary have occupied this particular office since March. Hanson is confident this is his last move.

The job of protecting consumers isn't a new one for him.

Before coming to Canada in 1968, Hanson was consumer advisory officer in the London borough of Kent for a motor agents association.

"I'm not a lawyer, but I've got a good working knowledge of the law, particularly in the area of consumer protection."

For a man working virtually alone, he has achieved spectacular results.

Corrections Added Up to $27,000

Last year he obtained cash refunds and account reductions for disgruntled consumers totalling $27,000.

"I don't accept complaints until the consumer has shown that he's done his level best to resolve the problem himself," Hanson said. Another of his rules: all complaints must be submitted in writing.

Fifty per cent of the complaints that reach his office fall into two categories, motor vehicles and credit.

The author of a sample letter had bought an expensive German-made car of a type that's world famous for quality. The owner had taken more than three pages to list things that had gone wrong with the car since he bought it six months earlier.

After receiving the complaint, Hanson contacted the company. Some kind of settlement is being negotiated, he said.

In another case, this time involving credit, a husband applied to a consumer finance company for a personal loan and his wife co-signed the contract.

The husband, a chronic alcoholic, left his family and moved to a new address known to his wife.

The wife, on social assistance, explained the situation to the finance company. The firm arranged for her to work at their office as a janitor for $40 a month, from which payments of $26 on the loan were deducted.

Hanson forced the company to return the money to the wife, and no further demands were made to her.

Toupees, hearing aids, collection agencies, dance studios, health spas . . . all are among the items and organizations consumers complain about.

Complaints that don't fall under provincial jurisdiction — such as those about false advertising — are referred to the proper federal department.

But do most B.C. consumers know they have recourse to a government consumer protection officer?

Hanson claims they do.

"You might ask about a consumer in Dawson Creek. How would he know about my office? But I get complaints from Dawson Creek," said Hanson.

One thing that bothers him is that his office, by its very function, is assumed to be pro-consumer.

"It's always being painted in pro-consumer terms, but it isn't. It's right down the middle.

"A third of the complaints received last year were turned down on the grounds the consumer didn't have a leg to stand on," said Hanson.

For example, many consumers complain about stores that won't refund money on merchandise in good condition returned solely on the grounds the customer decided he didn't want the item after all.

Department stores which take goods back that aren't defective do more than is legally required, said Hanson. Stores do not have to extend that service, nor do they have to advertise the fact if they don't.

Altrusa VP Says Nixon 'Ill-Advised' on Calley

An executive of Altrusa International and women's rights advocate, lawyer Mary Griffith of Denver, Colo., said here Friday President Nixon was "ill-advised" in intervening in the Calley court martial.

Miss Griffith, second vice-president of the world-wide service organization Altrusa International, is attending the group's District 12 Conference in Victoria this weekend.

Miss Griffith pointed out that as commander in chief the president had the right to intervene and overrule the military court.

"Usually, presidents leave such things alone," she said.

She cannot see why Calley was tried in the first place: "It's asking a lot of a young officer in hostile territory. They can go berserk."

The United States has clearly indicated it wants out of the war and must find a way to pull out, Miss Griffith said. Troops in the field feel a lack of support from home that us undermining morale.

Describing her experience in the WAVES, Miss Griffith said that as adjudication officer it was her job to figure out who was married to whom and which children were legitimate.

Working on the commission on the status of women has convinced her that in North America it is the attitude toward women that needs changing more than anything else.

She has just returned from a trip to Morocco. "I wouldn't know how to begin to tackle the problem of the status of women there," she said.

The conference at the Empress ends Sunday.

3,000 to Jam Park For Youth Festival

A festival of youth sponsored by the Boy Scouts of Greater Victoria at Beacon Hill Park in July promises to be one of the big centennial events of the year.

More than 3,000 young people will be involved in the four-day festival starting July 1.

Crafts and skills, including bridge building, shows and band concerts are included in the program — subject to the approval of city council.

Cubs, Brownies, Scouts, Girl Guides, Rangers and Rovers, plus members of other youth organizations, will participate in the festival.

It will open on July 1, Dominion Day, at 8 p.m. with a program of entertainment staged by members of the Victoria Chinese Lions Club and the Boys' Club of Victoria.

Festival grounds will be located between the deer pen and the world's tallest totem pole.

Evening entertainment on July 2 will be provided by YM-YWCA, Katherine Costain Dances and Songs of Norway. On July 3, performers will be Scouts and Guides, plus the Victoria Youth Band.

NO MORE DEAD DOGS

New Era for Manor

By PAT DUFOUR

Electric heat, carpeted hallways and a roof-top solarium on which to sun are a far cry from a run-down hospital ward, complete with the carcass of a dead dog on an old mattress.

Rose Manor has gone the full cycle since it opened in April 1898.

It will step from the ancient to the modern June 12 when it officially opens its new wing, complete with 16 prefabricated units, each with its own dressing room, a bright airy dining room, groundfloor patio and large solarium.

Designed by architect D. M. Cowin of the Victoria engineering firm, Willis, Cunliffe, Tait and Co. Ltd., the wing is the first of its kind in North America: the units being built in a shed at the former Victoria Machinery Depot, transferred and put in place on the site.

Former chief librarian of the Victoria Public Library, Miss Margaret Clay has been asked to officiate at the opening.

She is a descendant of Mrs. W. L. Clay, one of the small band of women who fought City Hall and the Establishment of the day to start a home for elderly women.

Miss Clay's presence at the opening will be a link with the past which is recorded in the book of Mrs. I. A. Gould, who tells of the struggle she and her co-workers had in getting the home started.

She recalls her first view of Rose Manor.

The building had formerly housed the old French Benevolent Society Hospital. Because the key didn't fit, Mrs. Gould was forced to scramble through a window, her first sight being a dog's carcass stretched on a mildewing mattress.

In its structure, the board of Rose Manor is identical to the one that first governed the former Aged and Infirm Women's Home. The 15 members are all volunteers, of varying walks of life, who run the home on a non-profit, self-substaining basis.

The occupants of the new wing moved in this month, swelling the numbers at the home from 112 to 128. Occupants of the old part of the building were given first choice of the new rooms.

Costs still remain reasonable, ranging from $90 a month in the old building to $140 in the modern wing. Laundry costs a $1 extra.

Already women's groups are volunteering to help make the new units models of comfort. The Women's Guild of St. George's Church has furnished one, and two others will be done by the Carne Rebekah Lodge and the Perceptor Alpha Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

The new wing has cost $160,000 and still more improvements are being planned by the board, headed by Mrs. John Devlin.

The former dining room is next on the rejuvenation list. It will be carpeted, titivated with wood panelling and floor-length drapes and made into a comfortable social lounge.

The portion of the garden cut by the new construction will be replanted.

Board members are confident the necessary funds will be found.

One of them, Mrs. Hugh McGregor, said whenever an emergency arises there's always a legacy or donation that helps meet the crisis.

With the confidence of her predecessors, she adds:

"It is rewarding when you have such wonderful co-operation from the powers that be!"

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Fit for Buckingham Palace . . .

Of all the gifts the Queen took home with her on Wednesday . . . surely one of the choicest and loveliest must be the ivory carving commissioned for her from internationally known Canadian sculptor Robert Dow Reid . . . We say this confidently because we saw some exquisite examples of this artist's work at the Handloom's Empress shop the other day . . . and were so lost in admiration that we're afraid we forgot to take notes about a number of other very interesting offerings also on display at both Handlooms! . . . To get back to the ivory sculptures . . . they're carved from the teeth of sperm whales . . . in the form of birds, penguins, fishes, mushrooms . . . poised on settings of teakwood . . . talk about cold ivory! . . . This ivory is warm and vibrant . . . The school of dolphins cavorting against a teakwood wave positively shimmers, in petrified motion . . . And the ringneck bird . . . a glorious thing if ever we saw one! . . . Poised in flight over an expanse of sterling silver reeds . . . growing on a soapstone ground . . . lovely! . . . There's a group of cormorants with a baby . . . Two penguins with an egg . . . Winter geese . . . several groups of mushrooms . . . There's just no way we can convey to you how truly beautiful these carvings are . . . so we just hope you'll go and see them for yourself . . . From now on Mr. Dow Reid's creations will be sold exclusively at both Handloom shops . . . The Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

A wisteria crepe shirtdress for evening is floor-length with slit-up front . . . belt buckle like a huge butterfly.

Freshest young clothes in town . . .

Miss Frith's new . . . and, as of this writing, un-named . . . junior shop is a joy to step into! . . . It has all the freshness and elan of youth . . . without any of the freakishness one sometimes encounters in youth-oriented shops . . . That's not to say everything isn't up-to-the-second, though! You only have to look at the delightful young things trying on graduation dresses . . . pirouetting in granny dresses, or looking delicious in miniscule bikinis to know that here's a store whose clothes are "with it" in every sense of the word! . . . Just new in this past week are dresses with gold cotton ribbed knit tops and multi-striped seersucker skirts and sleeves . . . the latter slim knit to the elbow, then full seersucker caught to the wrist in a cuff . . . We thought these very pretty and feminine . . . Also liked the floaty polyester chiffons with set-in waist, bias-cut skirt and knife-pleated fullness on the sleeves and front . . . delicate rose and mauve tones . . . The see-through dresses of bubble knits with raised stripes, long sleeves and the popular "skinny" look are very unusual . . . These come in several different textures and color combinations . . . All sorts of orlon boucle short pants and matching long sweaters . . . in delectable shades, and various eye-catching detailing . . . And we saw simply scads of bikinis . . . and little raffia brimmed hats in all colors . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Contradictory fabric trends: Denim, canvas and leathers in the "tough" category; fluid knits, crepes, jersey, organzas in the "soft" trend.

Greatest selection of Florsheim's at Mundays . . .

Almost from the time we first started to wear grown-up shoes, happiness was owning a pair of Florsheim's . . . In those days one had to go to New York for them . . . but now these superbly-fitting shoes with the exclusive Wispa-shank construction are made in Canada . . . Same smart shoes as heretofore, but less expensive . . . just $26.95 for all models! . . . We saw Munday's spring and summer collection of Florsheim's this week . . . and promptly treated ourself to a new model . . . a dressy pump of navy calf with patent overlay and gold tipped ornament . . . graceful high heel . . . This also comes in taupe calf with bone overlay . . . Another dressy shoe has high fitting throat with elastic goring . . . Black crushed patent or bone calf . . . A black patent pump, also with high throat and goring has a lower heel, wrap-over styling and silver buckle . . . One of the biggest-selling patterns in the U.S. is a very plain shoe with mid heel and two lines of pin tucking across the vamp . . . Comes in navy patent kid and bone calf . . . also in a pretty cinnamon shade of frog's leg patent . . . There's a matching handbag for this . . . making a very nice set . . . An excellent walking shoe in Irish oats grained calf has crepe sole and high-cut elasticized vamp, stacked heel . . . Several other smart patterns of Florsheim's, including a very different low-heeled shoe in several shades of brown kid at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Fabric boots in floral prints, denim blue and pastels are making fashion news.

The new Mirsas are here . . .

The very fact that a store sells Mirsa knits is like an accolade . . . a badge of merit so to speak . . . because the Marchese di Grecy . . . the titled Italian woman who IS Mirsa . . . is pretty choosey and only allows the very best stores throughout the world . . . to carry her lovely knits . . . Naturally, you find Mirsas right here at Wilson's . . . They phoned us the other day to say a new shipment had arrived . . . so we hurried downtown for a look . . . Saw some exceptionally smart pant suits . . . plain wool knit pants and long striped jackets . . . navy and white or tan and white . . . You could also buy a plain navy sheath . . . and so make a whole week-end wardrobe out of this! . . . There's also a camel and black suit with separate but matching camel colored dress . . . If you wear size 8, you might like the red and white candy striped, 3-piece pant suit . . . just this one, and we think it's a winner . . . A whole lot of Mirsa dresses in various types of washable polyester knits . . . Many are the much-wanted shirtdress styles . . . a long-sleeved cotton knit in a red and white print design is particularly smart . . . There are two-piece suits with short sleeves . . . plains and prints . . . and every one with that inimitable Mirsa styling . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

There are various ways of arranging such a trip, so ask Paulin's for a folder . . . and let them tell you all about it . . . DEAR ABBY . . .

Bed Upsets Her

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents were happily married for 32 years. Then my mother died. It wasn't sudden. She had a terminal illness, and it was a blessing when she finally went.

Two years later Dad married a lovely widow who had been my mother's dearest friend. My sisters and I (all married) were very happy to see Dad marry again. Now, the problem:

Dad and his new wife are living in the lovely home Dad and Mother built and furnished some years ago. They are using the same furniture, even the king-sized bed Mother and Dad shared for so many years. Just the thought of it upsets me, so I told Dad he ought to get another bed. He thought I was joking, and he laughed about it. I wasn't joking, Abby, I was serious. I am still terribly upset knowing that Dad is sleeping in that bed with another woman.

Don't get me wrong. I really like Dad's new wife, but not in my mother's bed. Am I wrong to feel this way, or shouldn't Dad get another bed?—Upset Daughter.

DEAR DAUGHTER: If it doesn't bother your father, or his new wife, it shouldn't bother you. Don't mention it again. It's mind over mattress.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and just had my sixth baby. My husband is 23. I had him talked into getting one of those operations men have so they can't father any more children. It's called a "vasectomy." Then the day before he was supposed to have it done, some guys at work told him he was a fool to risk losing his manhood.

The way my doctor explained the operation to me, it could be done right now in the doctor's office and it wouldn't hurt my husband's manhood at all. How can I get this through his head, Abby? We can't afford any more kids and I am worn out from those I have. Thank you.—Colorado Reader.

DEAR READER: Tell your husband to quit listening to the guys at work and to listen to a doctor who will tell him that a vasectomy in no way reduces a man's manhood. And it takes more of a man to protect his wife against unwanted children than to take his chances.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been separated (not divorced) for 11 years. Each year on the anniversary of our marriage we celebrate together. We have grown children and two lovely grandchildren. We have been celebrating the whole 21 years we've been married, but I have had friends tell me that this is wrong. They say since we are not living together, we should not celebrate our wedding anniversaries. I say as long as we are still married and not divorced, we can celebrate if we want to.

My husband and I have a friendly relationship, so please tell me if you think we are right — or are our friends who criticize us?—Still Celebrating.

DEAR STILL: You don't need permission or approval from your friends to celebrate your wedding anniversary, even though you're separated. So if it pleases you, go ahead and celebrate, and more power to you.

CANTON PORK BALLS . . . with a ginger-peachy sauce

Chinese-Style Pork Balls

Many shoppers have taken advantage of the low price of pork during these past months. Pork is still easy on the food budget and provides outstanding food value. This meat supplies high quality protein, is an excellent source of B vitamins and a good source of phosphorus and iron. Pork is well trimmed, so the lean portions of cooked pork contain the same amount of calories as the lean of other meats.

One of the most economical ways to buy pork is in the minced form, and one pound serves four persons. By shaping the pork into meat balls and finishing the cooking in various sauces, the home economists at Canada Agriculture have given the pork balls a different flavor and appearance.

The Canton Pork Balls recipe has been so named because of the subtle seasonings suggesting the Chinese cuisine. These practical people, as well as others, have eaten pork for centuries. In fact, the early alphabet character for "home" was the combination of a roof over a pig.

CANTON PORK BALLS

Pork Balls:

1½ pounds lean minced pork
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon ginger
1 beatten egg
2 tablespoons fat

Mix pork, onion, seasonings and egg. Form in 1½-inch balls. Brown meat balls in fat until done (about 10 minutes). Remove from fat and drain.

Sauce:

½ cup chopped onion
1 cup sliced celery
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon ginger
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 cup chicken bouillon
½ cup syrup from canned peaches (or syrup plus water)
¼ cup vinegar
1 cup diced canned peaches

Drain all but 1 tablespoon fat from pan. Saute onion and celery in fat until onion is transparent. Combine remaining ingredients except peaches and pour into pan. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Add meat balls and peaches. Cover and simmer gently 10 minutes. Serve with hot rice or noodles. Serves six.

CURRIED PORK BALLS

Use the same recipe for pork balls, substituting one-half teaspoon curry powder for the one-quarter teaspoon ginger. This sauce requires considerable cooking to develop the flavor.

Sauce:

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup diced celery
3 tablespoons butter
1½ cup diced peeled apples
3 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon curry powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups beef bouillon

Saute onion and celery in butter until onion is transparent. Add apples; blend in flour, seasonings, sugar and lemon rind. Gradually add lemon juice and bouillon. Stir and cook until smooth. Cover and simmer 1 hour. Add meat balls and simmer 15 minures longer. Serve with hot rice. Serves six.

Liberal Opinions on Women to Be Polled

Next week a three-woman task force, headed by Jan Steele, right, will begin travelling across the country investigating the opinions of liberal party members on the royal commission report on the status of women. Esther Greenglass, left, and Mme. Lambert Gibeault are the other members of the task force. (CP Wirephoto).

OTTAWA (CP) — A three-woman group chosen by the Liberal party will investigate the opinions of party members on recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women, Jan Steele of London, Ont., told a news conference recently.

Mrs. Steele, executive vice-president of the Liberal party in Ontario and one of the three, said they will deal only with recommendations which could be implemented at the federal level.

She and her colleagues, Prof. Esther Greenglass, a psychologist at York University, Toronto, and Mrs. Lambert Gibeault of Hull, Que., president of the Women's Liberal Federation of Canada, have set up next Wednesday in Winnipeg the first of a series of meetings across Canada to find out Liberal opinions on the report. Some meetings would also be open to the general public, but this will be decided at the local level.

Mrs. Steele said the group hopes to determine which recommendations the party thinks should have priority.

Asked what the group hopes to accomplish that the royal commission has not already done, Mrs. Steele said the group's responsibility is a political one.

"The royal commission's report has a great many recommendations and it's up to us as part of the Liberal party to find out primarily which should be implemented by legislation."

Mrs. Gibeault said the group's work would help to see that the report is not shelved.

The group's itinerary is: Winnipeg, May 19; Ottawa, May 25; Montreal, May 27; Quebec City, May 28; Moncton, N.B., June 1; Halifax, June 2; Charlottetown, June 3; St. John's, Nfld., June 4; Toronto, June 7; London, Ont., June 8; Vancouver, June 15; Calgary, June 16, and Edmonton, June 17. Meetings in Regina and Saskatoon have been postponed.

Manitoba Cabinet Minister 'Apologizes' to Abortionists

WINNIPEG (CP) — Joe Borowski apologized, in his own fashion, to a group of women whose planned meeting to support free abortion on demand was locked out of the Manitoba legislature building last Saturday.

He then went on to deliver some opinions on abortionists, drug addicts, advocates of permissiveness "and other assorted weirdos."

In a letter to Irene Boxer, the group's leader, the public works minister regretted that through a mixup in instructions the women found the legislature locked after previous arrangements had been made to hold their meeting there.

He also referred to the group's feeling that he had insulted them in later remarks on a radio program.

"My answer is that it's impossible to insult an abortionist."

For two pages, including a quote from bandleader Lawrence Welk urging a return to Christian principles, he took off on drugs, pornography, rebellious students and irresponsible professors, and criminals who claim society is to blame because of their environment.

". . . And finally we have the courts, who through their decisions, have eroded our real right while pretending to extend freedom to all when in reality they give licence to a few. Guilt or innocence is of less importance than the legal niceties."

He added:

"Perhaps you are wondering what all this has to do with abortions. All I'm simply trying to indicate is the moral toboggan slide we are on and your demand for instant abortion is simply one of the many evils in our society which are eroding and destroying the moral fibre of this wonderful Christian country of ours."

He found it ironic that those who generally display "such compassion and hand-wringing concern for the sanctity of life" when it comes to "the execution of cop-killer gangsters, rapists, killers and Mafia thugs," are the same individuals "who demand the cruel execution of helpless, unborn children."

The unwed mother deserves pity but abortionists "seem to forget that she is the author of her own misery."

Mr. Borowski added:

"When you speak of me or the church forcing our moral standards on you, remember we have a greater responsibility than you.

"I was elected by the people in a free and democratic election and therefore have earned the right to try and set moral standards . . . and so has the Church, which speaks for even more people than any elected government in the world."

8 CARDS OF THANKS

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time.
—The Blackstock family.

In the loss of our mother, Mrs. Cora Flynn, our special thanks to Doctor L. Ptak and Doctor G. May, for their untiring attention during her declining years; to Reverend Travis for a most consoling service, and to McCall Bros. Funeral Chapel.
—Jim, Ed, Reg and John Flynn, Thelma McKinty and Margaret Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Finn and family wish to thank the Doctors and Nurses of the Veterans Hospital for the great care given Mr. David Croston during his illness, and to the B.P.O.E. No. 2 for the assistance in the memorial service.

I wish to thank my many friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy at the passing of my husband, Sidney Ernest Harry Harrowing. Special thanks to Drs. D. A. Bute, J. D. Hough, F. A. Perera and H. H. Macartney, also the nursing staff of St. Joseph's Hospital.—Mrs. Anne Harrowing.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we wish to thank our many friends, neighbours, relatives and Rose's young friends, for the many expressions of sympathy and kindness, beautiful floral and charitable tributes extended to us in the recent sudden loss of our son Ross.
George and Irene Fairfield, George Jr. and Shari.

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time.
—The Blackstock family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DEE — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Sylvia who passed away 9 years ago today.
Absent the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear,
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept,
To love and to cherish and never forget.
—Always remembered and sadly missed, Mom, Dad, brother Alan, and Ada.

HORN—In loving memory of dear Mother, who passed away May 15, 1970.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took her home — it was His will.
—Sadly missed by her loving daughters, Helen and Beatrice.

McINTYRE—In loving memory of Mary Winnifred (Billie) McIntyre, who passed away May 15, 1965, Sydney, Australia.
We are thinking of you today, Billie,
Thinking of the past,
Picturing you in memory
Just as we saw you last.
How can our hearts forget you
When everything we do
Reminds of the times—too few—
We were able to spend with you.
Loved and ever remembered by us all.
—Allan, Mother, Betty and Thelma.

REDING—In loving memory of Rex, my dear husband, who passed away May 15, 1970.
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
To sit and talk with him awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be my dearest wish today.
Dear Lord, forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that he were here.
Others are taken, yes, I know,
But he was mine and I loved him so.
—Deeply missed and lovingly remembered always, by his wife, Sandie.

RIDING—In loving memory of our Daddy, Warrant Officer Reding, who passed away in Japan, May 15, 1970.
Though they laid you to rest far away,
Our love is with you every day.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be
But dear to our memory you ever will be.
—Ever remembered, your loving sons, Ronald, Gary, daughters Cheryl and Andrea.

WEEKS—In loving memory of Mr. Walter Weeks, who passed away on May 15, 1969.
"His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away."
—Ever remembered by his wife, A. Weeks, and family.

Servants End Wage Appeals To Province

The British Columbia Government Employees' Union wound up a series of wage appeals Friday and is awaiting word from the government on wage adjustments affecting 13,000 members.

John Fryer, general secretary of the union, termed the meeting with the Civil Service Commission "frank" and said the union got a fair hearing.

The government granted all employees in the union an average 6.5 per cent wage increase effective last April 1, but many tradesmen felt the raise left them far short of parity with others.

Groups represented by the union include employees in the department of highways, the Liquor Control Board and the jail service.

Esquimalt Shares Cost

Esquimalt today became the first municipality on Vancouver Island to share in school playing fields costs and use them for regular recreational programs.

The municipality is assuming half the cost of the five schoolgrounds' maintenance, estimated to be $9,000 a year.

In return they will have the use of the playing fields after 5 p.m. each day and all day on holidays and Sundays.

The school board will continue to be responsible for watering the grounds while the municipality will mow the lawns and keep the grounds in good shape.

Mayor Arthur Young calls the arrangement "the best value you can get for $4,500," adding that it's the best and least expensive way to solve Esquimalt's shortage of playing fields.

The municipality's recreation director Harold Moist said the grounds will be used for soccer, baseball and other sports in the recreation program.

HEIRS FILE SUIT TO KICK OUT CATS

SEATTLE (UPI) — The children of the late Charles V. Anderson have gone to court to keep the family home from being reserved for his cats — as he instructed in his will.

Anderson, a retired manufacturer who died last Oct. 18, left the $35,000 home and the income from a trust estate to Rastus and Lucy, a pair of cats he obtained from the Humane Society pound.

He authorized Seattle-First National Bank, as trustee, to hold the homes for the cats, hire a housekeeper to care for them, make necessary repairs and maintenance and pay veterinary fees.

The remainder of Anderson's $98,800 estate was left to his son, Paul J. Lundbeck, Oakland, Calif., and two stepdaughters, Stella Sharp, Seattle, and Virginia Gable, Chicago.

They filed suit this week against the bank, asking it to kick the cats out of the house, sell it and distribute the money not needed to board the cats until their deaths.

Pollution Chairman

Valter Raudsepp has been appointed chairman of the Pollution Control Board, replacing F. S. McKinnon who was recently appointed to the Public Utilities Commission.

Raudsepp, who is deputy minister of Water Resources, takes over as chairman as three cabinet minister leave the board to serve on the cabinet environment and land use committee which is to be the major environmental decision-making body.

The ministers are Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, Resources Minister Ray Williston and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

At the same time, Forests Deputy J. S. Stokes has been added to the PCB, which is the appeal mechanism for decisions made by the pollution control branch of the water resources service.

Costly Ball Picketed?

The Victoria Low Income Group's executive will decide Monday night whether to picket The Empress Friday when the Victoria Days' committee holds its $25-a-couple inaugural ball.

President Walter Olszewski charges that the price is discriminatory, aimed only for the middle or upper classes.

His group also intends to send a couple to the ball as a protest, dressed, probably, in blue jeans. The problem, he said, is to scrape up the $25 between now and Friday.

Committee spokesman Reg Hind said that although the ball is expensive three others are planned for the Victorian Days week. Two cost only $5 and one, $10.

In addition, he says, there will be six street dances — all free. Four will be held in front of The Empress, one at Esquimalt and one in Sidney.

No More Funds

Victoria won't get any more money from the provincial government for the Wharf Street urban renewal scheme, Mayor Courtney Haddock said today.

Haddock was commenting on the results of a meeting Friday at noon between city officials and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell at which Campbell formally notified Victoria it is receiving $750,000 for the renewal plan.

The money — $500,000 of which comes from Ottawa and $250,000 from the province — will be used to help purchase the Ocean Cement Ltd. property.

Estimated price for the land is $1 million. Haddock said the city will start negotiating a final price early next week.

The cement company will relocate on land near Rock Bay further up the Inner Harbor. Relocation is expected to take two years, Haddock said.

Before the Judge

A Vancouver housewife, who had $100 in her possession when arrested Friday for attempting to shoplift at The Bay, today was fine $250.

Mrs. Joan M. Page, 34, of 4055 West 13th Ave., admitted taking two zip fasteners, a pair of socks and a pair of barrettes from The Bay. Value of the articles was $2.99.

Paul B. Miller, 18, of 1680 Teakwood, was fined $75 and placed on six months' probation for theft under $50.

Miller had pleaded guilty earlier to taking a carton of cigarettes from Canada Safeway at 3958 Shelbourne.

Judge William Ostler said Miller's pre-sentence report showed he was industrious.

Forest Fire Threatens B.C. Bridge

Winds gusting to 50 miles an hour Friday fanned a forest fire near the Kiskatinaw River, between Fort St. John and Dawson Creek in northwestern British Columbia, threatening a bridge linking the two centres.

The fire was one of more than 100 burning in the province Friday.

Traffic on the Alaska Highway between Fort St. John and Dawson Creek was delayed, but the highway was kept open. Flames were reported to have jumped the highway.

The fire, burning since May 7, covers close to 4,000 acres. It was under control at one time, but strong winds have pushed it past all fire guards.

In the B.C. interior, a 13,000-acre blaze known as the West Fire continued to burn east of Quesnel as firefighters fought to build a guard around it.

Accident Victim 'Fair'

A boy who suffered head, stomach and leg injuries in a traffic accident Friday is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Six-year-old Nanon Visy, 923 Inverness, was hit by a car as he stepped on the road while playing near his home.

The driver was Mrs. Ruth Maude of Fulford Harbor, police said.

Three persons involved in accidents Wednesday evening are in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Robert Serviss, 23, of 1291 Derby suffered a broken leg when his car collided with another driven by Alma Jorgensen, 4244 Metchosin, at Government and Bay.

Maurice Auger, 23, of 639 Dunedin, received a broken jaw in the same accident.

Ronald Keddy, 69, of 408 Cook is in hospital with broken ribs. His wife Freda, also 69, was driving when their car collided with another auto driven by Maria L. Almeida, 3701 Saanich at the corner of Yates and Blanshard.

Fatality Survey

A provincial department of highways' survey on 1970 traffic fatalities on highways shows 85 per cent of drivers and passengers killed were not wearing seat belts.

Of these, 27 per cent were in vehicles not equipped with belts and 58 per cents in vehicles equipped with belts that were not used.

Information was not available in another nine per cent of the cases. Six per cent died using seat belts.

The numbers of unused seat belts rose from 47 per cent in 1969 to 58 per cent in 1970.

Vehicles unequipped with seat belts decreased from 47 per cent in 1969 to 27 per cent the following year.

Offices Closed

Provincial government offices will be closed Monday, May 24, to observe the Queen's birthday and the Victoria Day holiday.

The provincial museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Saturday, Sunday and Monday of that weekend.

Uvic Names Building

The University of Victoria has named its new biological sciences building after a former professor, Dr. Jeffree Cunningham.

Cunningham taught at Victoria College from 1924 to 1951. He retired as head of the biology department after starting as an instructor.

The university honored him with an honorary doctorate in 1964.

KISS OR FIGHT? POLICE NOT SURE

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Adrian Shephard, 20, and his girl friend, Christine Roberts, 18, were making up after an argument, kissing and cuddling in a store doorway.

But their embraces were so energetic two passing policemen thought they were fighting and arrested Shephard for disorderly conduct.

A Nottingham judge cleared him of the charge after he explained what they were doing.

"I suppose the cuddles were a bit more energetic than usual, but we wanted to show each other how sorry we felt," Shephard said.

"Save-Your-Hair Day" Set For Mon. & Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

Scalp Specialist Here To Demonstrate New Home Treatment

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, May 17 and 18. This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In their announcement, they named trichologist Mr. I. Edgar to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Sussex Hotel.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Edgar. Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No. We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. The important thing is: 'Don't wait until it's too late!'

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist.

He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

S. Africa Barred Japanese-Canadian

NARAMATA (CP) — A Japanese-born Canadian minister has been refused further entry into South Africa and has been declared a prohibited immigrant, a United Church of Canada meeting was told today.

Rev. Garty W. Legge, associate secretary of the church's board of world mission, Toronto, said Rev. Tadashi Mitsui had been serving as a chaplain to Protestant students at the University of Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland in Lesotho.

Mr. Mitsui had served in Lesotho since October 1968 and was the former minister of the Japanese United congregation in Vancouver at Renfrew United Church.

Dr. Legge told the British Columbia conference of the church that Mr. Mitsui on Jan. 3 arrived at Johannesburg International Airport en route to Lesotho from a visit to a leadership training event in Botswana.

He was met by South African security police and told he had eight hours to get out of the country. Mr. Mitsui protested to the Canadian embassy in Pretoria and received a brief reply.

It read in part:

"It is our understanding that only Canadian citizens of European origin may enter South Africa without visas and that Canadian citizens of non-European ethnic origin require visas for entry to South Africa.

"In order to avoid difficulties on future trips we would recommend that you arrange through the South African department of the interior, either in Pretoria or in Johannesburg, that your papers are in order for re-entry to South Africa."

Dr. Legge, who was reporting as the church's general council officer to the B.C. conference, had termed this reply by first secretary Charles V. Cole "mealy-mouthed, lackey-like . . . without any strong protest of any kind."

Accordingly he wrote External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and received replies from John Church, executive assistant, in Mr. Sharp's absence.

In referring to the letter from the embassy, Mr. Church said it "in no way means that the embassy accepts or condones the South African practice of discriminating between persons because of race or justifies inconsistency of treatment accorded to same person for no apparent reason."

Dr. Legge admitted Mr. Mitsui probably made known his and the church's abhorrence of apartheid and said this is undoubtedly at the root of his banishment. The South African government had chosen to ignore "the honorary white-person status traditionally accorded those of Japanese origin."

A follow-up letter from the Canadian government said no action was being taken. Dr. Legge expressed regret that no special intervention was being tried and no strong protest had been made.

Sentence Reduced

British Columbia Appeal Court in Vancouver Friday upheld the assault conviction of a 24-year-old Sooke man charged with assault causing bodily harm but reduced his sentence from two years to six months.

Now serving the reduced term is Wayne Garry Underwood, 2911 Sooke Lake Road.

He had been sentenced in Sooke provincial court by Judge Eugene Murphy Feb. 3.

The charge followed a Christmas Day fight between Underwood and another man at a party in a Sooke home. The other man suffered a concussion and facial injuries. It was the third charge of its kind against Underwood in almost five years.

NIXON SEEKS POWER TO HOLD SUSPECTS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Nixon administration asked U.S. Congress Friday to approve a bill that would allow suspects in federal crimes such as bombings or kidnappings to be held without bail for up to 60 days if a judge felt they would be dangerous to the community.

In submitting the so-called "pretrial detention" legislation to Congress, Attorney-General John Mitchell said it provides "a number of strong procedural protections to safeguard the rights of defendants."

He asked that pretrial detention be applied in federal cases where the suspect is charged with a "dangerous or organized crime act." The proposal defines such acts as loan sharking, racketeering, illegal sale of narcotic drugs, bombing, kidnapping, robbery and assault where it relates to airplane hijacking.

The legislation was similar to a bill that provided for pretrial detention in the District of Columbia which went into effect Feb. 1. Since then, only four persons have been reported to have been held without bail under its provisions.

Claiming the bill "is directed toward protecting the public," Mitchell said members of organized crime in particular are often able to post bond before their trial, regardless of the amount set.

The pretrial detention legislation was submitted as a separate bill accompanying a package of proposed amendments to the 1966 bail reform act.

The other proposals would permit federal judges to set non-financial conditions for pretrial release and give them authority to revoke a suspect's release if he violates those conditions, intimidates or threatens a witness or juror, or commits another felony.

Nixon Warns Allies

Times News Services

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — President Nixon, with the support of 24 former top officials from both political parties, said today it would be "an error of historic dimensions" for any of the North Atlantic Treaty allies to unilaterally cut their military forces in Europe.

Nixon issued the statement in a stepped-up campaign to defeat Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield's amendment to reduce U.S. troops in NATO by 50 per cent — from 300,000 to 150,000.

Nixon's statement followed one made Friday by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt in which Brandt said the U.S. could not cut its troops in Europe without its allies following suit.

Brandt said West Germany and the other NATO members have always taken the view that defence burdens should be shared equally.

"When they (the burdens) are reduced, they must be reduced for all; when they must be increased for security reasons, then likewise all must take part", Brandt said.

PROMOTE PEACE

Nixon's statement today said:

"At this point in time, it would be an error of historic dimensions for any of the North Atlantic Treaty allies to reduce unilaterally the military forces maintained in Europe for the common defence.

"As the most powerful member of the alliance, the United States bears a responsibility for leadership.

"Let us persevere to carry forward the policy of this nation under five successive presidents representing both political parties, confident that our united strength will promote the enduring peace we seek."

HIGH LEVEL

The White House said that former U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson spearheaded the move for backing by a high level bi-partisan group of former state department officials, defence leaders, NATO ambassadors and supreme allied commanders in Europe.

INAPPROPRIATE

Former presidents Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson were not asked to publicly support the statement, the White House said, "because it was thought it would not be appropriate."

Former defence secretary Clark Clifford and former deputy secretary of state, James Douglas were approached, but refused to sign the statement.

Former defence secretary Robert McNamara declined to comment because of his position as president of the World Bank, the White House said. "He does not want this abstention to be interpreted as non-support of the statement," it added.

The statement was the outgrowth of a 90-minute meeting at the White House Thursday when Nixon summoned such elder statesmen as Acheson, former high commissioners of Germany Lucius Clay and John McCloy to discuss the Mansfield amendmest.

Professors May Shun Uvic In Wake of Censure—Doyle

Censure of University of Victoria president Bruce J. Partridge by the Canadian Association of University Teachers "may well discourage" teachers across Canada from taking jobs at Uvic.

Dr. Charles Doyle, president of Uvic's Faculty Association, made this statement today after returning from a Toronto meeting of the CAUT national council which censured Partridge by a vote of 39-3.

"It doesn't amount to a censure of the university but it may well discourage faculty members from coming to a university with a censured president," Doyle said in an interview.

It is the first time CAUT has imposed censure on an individual president of an academic institution.

RESPONSIBILITY

"It seemed clear that the responsibility in this situation seems to come back to Partridge all the time," Doyle said.

"He's trying to have it both ways. The ultimate responsibility is his. His decision is the same as the dean's but both of them overturned the decision of a faculty advisory committee."

Doyle attacked Partridge's allegations that a small group of "dissidents" had been trying to bring about censure of Uvic. Partridge had called for their resignations.

REAL ISSUES

"I know that I am not a dissident," Doyle said. "President Partridge must realize that I and the executive (of the faculty association) are deeply concerned over real issues. What we want to talk about are these issues."

"Every time we try to get President Partridge to address the issues, he tends to resort to hints that it's a question of personalities. That puts me in with the dissidents," Doyle said.

The censure came after months of controversy over non-renewal of contracts for

Tax Break Hinted For Low Incomes

JASPER— Speaking off-the-cuff here Friday, Energy Minister J. J. Greene hinted of changes to come in Canada's tax laws to give a better break to low-income Canadians.

Greene threw away a prepared speech to tell the annual meeting of the Petroleum Accountants' Society of Western Canada that 70 per cent of the tax load in this country is borne by people with annual incomes under $7,000.

"Many great and well-to-do companies don't pay any taxes at all," he added. He characterized this as "private affluence and public squalor."

Many of Greene's listeners wondered if his talk presaged changes to be contained in Finance Minister Edgar Benson's budget next month. In some respects his words seemed to echo those of former communications minister Eric Kierans when he resigned from the federal cabinet two weeks ago.

Greene said that when the federal government proposed tax changes designed to reduce major inequities, while continuing to encourage economic growth, heavy opposition came from "those who felt they were going to be hurt."

New Dam Could Run 20 Big Mines—Shrum

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum said Friday a dam of the size being considered for northwestern B.C. by private developers could keep 20 big mines going.

Mr. Shrum was commenting on a study being conducted in the Iskut and Stikine River systems into the possibility of construction of a 600,000 kilowatt power dam.

"There is no point in going there if there isn't a market for the power."

He said the Iskut is awfully rough country through which to build a power line, but agreed that one could easily be built into Alaska's Panhandle country.

That could open up a market, he said, as could a copper smelter long suggested for B.C.

Thousands Cheer Purge

Cairo Trials Likely

CAIRO (Reuter) — Thousands of workers and youths demonstrated for President Anwar Sadat in the streets of Cairo today as the Egyptian leader continued his investigation of a plot to dislodge him from power.

Under house arrest as the students chanted pro-Sadat slogans in front of the Kubbeh Republican Guest Palace were former war minister Gen. Mohamed Fawzi and Interior Minister Sharaway Gomaa.

Others in detention include former information minister Mohamed Faeyek and Abdel Mohsen Abul Nur, boss of Egypt's monolithic political machine, the Arab Socialist Union.

Also under house arrest are former assembly speaker Dr. Labib Shoukair and his two deputies: Dia Eddin Daoud, another top Arab Socialist Union executive, and Samy Sharaf, former minister for presidential affairs.

Informed sources said Sadat might order a public trial of some of the men involved in what he described Friday night as an attempted coup.

TIMES INTRODUCES FAMILY SECTION

In line with modern newspaper trends, the Times today initiates a new Family section replacing what traditionally have been known as the "women's" or "social" pages.

This section will retain most of the features currently carried on these pages. But over the coming weeks and months the Family section will progressively broaden its horizons to include more news and features of interest to the whole family, to men as well as women, to young and old.

Keep an eye on the Times Family section. You're going to find it interesting.

From Samarkand To Siberia With Pierre

(Times Ottawa bureau reporter John Kika will be accompanying Prime Minister Trudeau on his Soviet visit which starts Sunday. Here is his somewhat bemused pre-takeoff report.)

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA — To Russia with the lovers should be a romantic assignment and the sly Soviets are doing their darndest to make it a second honeymoon — for the press, not Pierre and Peggy.

Certainly the prime minister hadn't planned it that way for his 11-day Russian romp which begins here Sunday, appropriately at the witching hour, as the Peace Tower clock sounds 12 muffled alarms into the night.

Who Knows What Awaits?

That'll be the signal for Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau, their retinue of 21 and 40 press type people to jet up into the dark sky to who really knows what awaiting them on that long Soviet sojurn from Samarkand to Siberia.

For it seems the Kremlin's clerks still are trying to crank out some kind of a program for the Canadian Kids coming to say hello.

Hark; do you hear those whispers rustling through Red Square?

"Pierre who? But why us? Gromyko invited him two years ago? For Mars sake, why? Trying to fill an awkward pause in Sharp's Dulles' reminisces?

"Oh well, okay. But tell them Maoist toadies nothing. And make certain the customs men check his bags for snowballs this time. He had 175 inches and a lot of time to prepare ammunition last winter."

And virtually nothing is what the Russians have told the Canadians in advance. For weeks frantic messages have been passing back and forth to Moscow asking again and again: "Okay, so what are they going to do over there?"

Travel Itinerary Sketchy

And Pierre's crisp instructions on where he wanted to go and what he wanted to see were handed on, too — apparently to be dumped promptly into a wastebin.

Barely a week ago came "an outline" of the travel itinerary. It listed the arrival and departure times at Moscow, Kiev, Tashkent, Norilsk, Murmansk, and Leningrad. Nothing more. Except for arrival and departure times at Ottawa, added locally to help fill out the itinerary.

The briefing went something like this.

When PM was invited ("Who? Gromyko. Why? Search me, I think Sharp couldn't stop talking or something.) He was to go last autumn when time was ripe to settle and sign up a few things — settle the rotten fishy problem with Soviet trawlers on West Coast and sign our first technological and industrial exchange agreement.

But FLQ had other plans so he didn't go and the fish problem and exchange agreement have been taken care of in the meantime.

Ah, yes, the Russians do know Margaret's going. Uh, no, we still don't have her itinerary so we don't know if she'll sit and knit while hubby and kindly Kosygin swap translations of Old Right economics or whether she'll just sit and knit in her hotel room.

Women's Lib in Moscow

Well, yes, we were raher hoping you'd not bother to notice if she mingles on Red Square in her new babooshka-and-hot pants — she really doesn't want to attract attention unnecessarily. Only check on Women's Lib from the street sweepers.

Seriously though, the PM is really looking forward to this trip as he told the Russians because he wants to learn as much as he can about how they're doing in Siberia in view of his keen interest in our own north.

Yes, he told them that really was the main thing he wanted to do on this trip.

Why yes, they very kindly arranged for him to spend more than a day in Siberia. In fact, he's allowed to actually stay 24 hours and 35 minutes in Norilsk in the heart of Siberia.

Well, don't laugh; it's a real big breakthrough — no one's been allowed in there since Art Laing visited it in 1965.

Anyway, it's considered a really important precedent — well, allright, reconfirming a precedent — so that we can get Jean Chretien in there later this year.

That's why we're so excited that the PM has been able to get his foot into Norilsk for a day. Now we've got them. If they let in the advance man, can they continue denying our northern star?

Nixon Warns Allies

Times News Services

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. —President Nixon, with the support of 24 former top officials from both political parties, said today it would be "an error of historic dimensions" for any of the North Atlantic Treaty allies to unilaterally cut their military forces in Europe.

Nixon issued the statement in a stepped-up campaign to defeat Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield's amendment to reduce U.S. troops in NATO by 50 per cent — from 300,000 to 150,000.

Nixon's statement followed one made Friday by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt in which Brandt said the U.S. could not cut its troops in Europe without its allies following suit.

Brandt said West Germany and the other NATO members have always taken the view that defence burdens should be shared equally.

"When they (the burdens) are reduced, they must be reduced for all; when they must be increased for security reasons, then likewise all must take part", Brandt said.

PROMOTE PEACE

Nixon's statement today said:

"At this point in time, it would be an error of historic dimensions for any of the North Atlantic Treaty allies to reduce unilaterally the military forces maintained in Europe for the common defence.

"As the most powerful member of the alliance, the United States bears a responsibility for leadership.

"Let us persevere to carry forward the policy of this nation under five successive presidents representing both political parties, confident that our united strength will promote the enduring peace we seek."

HIGH LEVEL

The White House said that former U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson spearheaded the move for backing by a high level bi-partisan group of former state department officials, defence leaders, NATO ambassadors and supreme allied commanders in Europe.

INAPPROPRIATE

Former presidents Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson were not asked to publicly support the statement, the White House said, "because it was thought it would not be appropriate."

Former defence secretary Clark Clifford and former deputy secretary of state James Douglas were approached, but refused to sign the statement.

Former defence secretary Robert McNamara declined to comment because of his position as president of the World Bank, the White House said. "He does not want this abstention to be interpreted as non-support of the statement," it added.

The statement was the outgrowth of a 90-minute meeting at the White House Thursday when Nixon summoned such elder statesmen as Acheson, former high commissioners of Germany Lucius Clay and John McCloy to discuss the Mansfield amendmest.

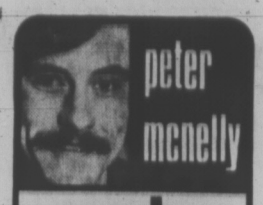
Napoleon Lost War But Won the Film

'Waterloo' Dominated By Steiger



Waterloo came as a pleasant surprise for me.

It looked so bad in the previews, and few kinds of movies are duller than historical epics. All those Great Men prating around like bemedalled brass gods mouthing Great Words about Great Events. How ridiculous.

But Waterloo is all passion. The inevitable pomp and circumstance — flags, horns, the omnipresent cast of thousands—are just fluff before the gutty grandeur of Napoleon and the silky majesty of Wellington.

But let's not say much about Wellington, for everyone knows he won. Waterloo is Napoleon's movie, and in Rod Steiger's hands he is a magnificent loser.

Steiger controls the movie. Through the sweat and bounce of his tight, fat body, exudes a soul intoxicated with power. The power which we like to think history once surrendered completely to genius.

This is the Napoleon which producer Dino De Laurentiis has created. The historical man is irrelevant here. Waterloo conjures a wild, romantic emperor-general, and Steiger makes him human.

Surely there must be some truth in this conception of Napoleon. And if there's none, who cares, the movie's good.

Some of the crowd scenes are among the finest I've ever seen, because they really bring off the feeling of a happy mob. The great battle is presented in full detail. Napoleon and Wellington watch it all through spyglasses, debating each other's strategies like chess masters. And they are far from certain whose plan is the shrewder.

Their regiments trundle forward at their total command, then feint retreats, run or stoically encounter slaughter. These war scenes far surpass anything done in Patton.

Waterloo doesn't waste much time on politics or high society, though the film suffers through a foolish episode during a military ball at Wellington's camp in Brussels.

The plot is mostly a succinct linkage of events which bring the giants to battle. And as the events develop, Steiger steals the movie from Christopher Plummer (Wellington).

Plummer is a fine actor, but he simply cannot compete with Steiger. Plummer's stuck with this creepy British aristocrat for a character, a man who fancies wine and wit as much as victory.

Wellington may have been a fine gentleman, I have no way of knowing. But given a choice between a captive of the class system and a sweaty, populist hero—however false these caricatures may be — I'll side with the populist.

That's the choice Waterloo offers. It's such a simple and romantically drawn film that the best thing to do is take sides.

One final note. The photography accomplishes a difficult task. It overcomes the breadth of the events to breathe yet another dimension of humanity into the movie.

By cleverly shooting the scenes between short and long-distance ranges and by always catching the characters in motion, director Sergei Bondarchuk virtually eliminated the scarecrow woodenness which has killed so many movies of the same scale.

If you go and see Waterloo, don't get mad because it didn't say so many things which could have been said about war and power. Just enjoy it.

Far East Art Gives Gallery Stature

looking at art

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has been specializing in Far Eastern art and has built a collection of international importance. Though the gallery's grant from the city and municipalities falls short of paying basic operating costs, the collection has grown by way of gifts.

Last year when the gallery was in financial danger, the intermunicipal council voted special funds. Had the gallery with its collection now valued at one and one-quarter million dollars failed financially, it would have embarrassed the cultural pride of all Victorians.

As a consequence, this year the gallery's grant might be increased from $12,000 to $24,000. Oak Bay and Esquimalt have agreed to this doubled figure; Victoria and Saanich have still to decide.

If the money is granted, only the gallery's deficit will be repaired; there will be no surge of funds into gallery projects or purchases. Compare this with the galleries of Saskatoon and London, Ont., cities of similar population; their grants are $110,000.

Outstanding among the gifts to the gallery have been those of Mrs. Isabel Pollard. In memory of her late husband, a silk importer in trade with the Orient, she has given Japanese works of all periods, lately a series of contemporary prints.

There are reasons for the gallery focusing on the Far East. British Columbia is on the Pacific "Rim." The geographical relation to the East is no more distant than to Europe. With Japan rising as a world power, the art gives hints to a cultural history that must be recognized. Today there is much interest in Far Eastern religion and philosophy for which art provides documentation.

Also, Eastern art is not as expensive as Western. European master works of good quality bring hundreds of thousands of dollars. The competition for these works is keen among the large museums in metropolitan centres.

However, as more museums begin to recognize the importance of the East, prices will rise. They have already begun to do so.

Another advantage to collecting Eastern work is the presence in Victoria of Old China Hands. Traders, sailors, professionals, they lived in the Far East and brought their collections of art with them to Victoria on retirement. Donations from this source have been significant.

Not all works offered to the museum are worthwhile; it takes an educated eye and much study of Eastern art to collect only important and genuine works. This professional scholarship is beyond the means of the Victoria gallery's finances. Colin Graham, the director, involved in administration and other duties, cannot compete with scholars who do nothing but research, so he has relied on the Royal Ontario Museum's staff of oriental scholars. The Ontario Museum's collection rivals that of Victoria's.

It was the Royal Ontario Museum which put the Victoria Gallery in touch with Professor Trou Mori of the art department at the University of Osaka and with Bunzo Nakanishi, a connoisseur-collector. These men advise the local gallery on purchases and themselves have contributed important gifts.

Since many gifts have come directly to the gallery, they cannot oversee every acquisition. But both have come to Victoria and, staying a month, inspected the collection from top to bottom.

There are pieces of international significance. Pride of the gallery is an A-Ji-Kan symbol, a painting designed for meditation. Its main figure, almost abstract, is the Japanese ideogram representing the vowel Ah, a ritual incantation of the Tendi Sect in Kioto. There is only one other similar painting outside Japan, in Boston, and in damaged condition.

In the winter of 1972, at the Royal Ontario Museum, there will be a major exhibition of Far East works. The Ontario museum will borrow 150 of Victoria's top objects. The hard-bound catalogue for this show will be well researched and will provide needed documentation of the Victoria treasures. Doing research on Victoria's objects will be six PhD students in art history from the University of Washington.

In the spring of 1973, 150 pieces from Ontario will come to Victoria for another exhibition. Again this will be an occasion for a catalogue.

Though the Victoria collection covers all facets of Far East art, the museum specializes in the Nanga school, having in the collection 15 high-quality pieces.

From the 10th century onwards, there have been periods when a wave of Chinese influence swept the Japanese art scene. The last of these influxes occurred near the end of the 18th century and during the beginning of the 19th. Vital Japanese painters of this period looked to China and the Ming Dynasty. Their work belongs to the Nanga school.

Having an important collection is difficult for the gallery and its volunteer workers. When a scholar arrives to study the collection, much of which is not displayed but stored in the basement, works must be unshelved, temporarily displayed and filed away again.

The growing importance of the Far East collection will not overshadow other aspects of the Art Gallery. Colin Graham, gallery director, will collect art of any tradition if the pieces are worthwhile. The gallery will continue as a showplace for local art and provide local artists with a centre of activity.

After all, there would be no art in need of preservation, no art for the eye of scholars, if there were not at sometime a community supporting contemporary artists.

'We'll Make It—If You Think There's Doubt, Forget It'

By PETER McNELLY

If realtor Eric Charman makes a success out of the 1971 United Appeal campaign this fall, no one will be able to say he is not a super salesman.

No matter how much money the Community Chest finally sets for its 1971 goal, campaign chairman Charman is convinced — and put that in hard-sell confidence — the money will be raised.

The drive is four months away. And while the Chest and its 25 member agencies are enduring the blood-letting ritual known as budget-cutting, Charman's busy thinking up ways to re-organize the campaign.

Last year's goal of $701,314 fell $50,000 short of hitting 100 per cent. Charman estimates the 1971 drive will seek between $765,000 and $800,000.

However, the agencies already have submitted a preliminary budget of $830,000.

Some Chest board members feel this is too much to ask, but some agency directors are beginning to feel that the Chest has put itself into the position of cramping agency programs by seeking only the amount of money it thinks the campaign can raise.

One agency told the Chest's board of directors this year the campaign should go to the public with a goal that represents the actual needs of all agencies.

If the campaign falls short, the argument goes, the final agency budgets can be set later.

CHARMAN
'realistic needs'

Charman, who also is on the board of directors of the Community Chest, says this proposal is workable. But without publicly committing the Chest to this apprach, he took it a step further during an interview.

"If we could strive to meet the more realistic needs of the agencies, rather than the chopped-down budget figure, perhaps we would get more enthusiasm.

"I don't like a budget based on what we think we can collect. It's not the fault of the people that we haven't made it, and I mean this: it's the United Appeal's fault . . . We have not identified with the agencies."

Charman says there's too much talk during the year about the Community Chest and not enough about the work the agencies do. So his fall strategy will be to emphasize the agencies.

He intends to sponsor open-houses during the campaign so the public will be able to meet agency staff and discuss their work. This tactic has been successful for Victoria Cool-Aid on a number of occasions.

Charman also intends to spend much more money on advertising. He believes that no matter how good your press is, the best way to take a direct message to people is to advertise it. However, he won't hire a public relations firm.

Charman's ideas about running the United Appeal campaign amount to a thorough revamping in its fund-raising techniques. Many of his ideas, he admits, come from successful campaigns in the United States.

That's no reason they shouldn't be used here, Charman says. For example, many people say the Boy Scouts and the YM-YWCA should not be in the Community Chest. That's normal, says Charman.

How did Chicago overcome this problem? By running full-page newspaper ads which read: "So you don't like everything we are doing . . . and that means you're going to let this child suffer?" Then the ad had a picture of a crippled child.

That, if anything, is hard-sell promotion. But in some respects it's accurate, for a substantial amount of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children budget — $45,000 out of $118,000 in 1970 — comes from the United Appeal.

Charman has not picked all his campaign staff, but they will be aggressive. To make their jobs easier, he is redrawing their duties.

He has Community Chest-paid staff preparing detailed information on the history of residential and business donations over the last few years. One thing he's discovered is that Victorians give approximately $3 per capita to charities, a figure which ranks them a poor 28th among Canadian cities.

But Charman won't blame this on a lack of generosity. He maintains the money is there waiting to be given. The task is to go about getting it properly.

For example, he said the Chest has not revised its individual advance gifts list for 10 years, and hundreds of people in the residential canvass who gave $2 a decade ago still are giving the same amount.

In 1970, Charman was head of the individual advance gifts division, and he raised $76,000. This money came from only 300 donors. Charman says a great many wealthy retired people have moved to Victoria who are not on the individual gifts list.

"It's our job to search them out," he says, and he plans to triple the list.

In 1971 Charman hopes to double the amount of advance donations to $150,000.

Last year's residential canvass took place at night in bad weather. Charman's change here is to hold the canvass on a Saturday morning and at the same time set up booths at shopping centres in the region to catch householders missed at home.

Instead of asking for a $2 or $5 donation, Appeal canvassers will be requesting householders to arrange monthly donations. Many people, Charman believes, easily can afford $5 a month.

To sample the strength of business and industrial donations, Charman is going to pick one firm for a pilot canvassing project this summer. He will try to raise $50,000.

When campaign staff canvass businesses, Charman says, part of their approach will be to tell the firms that without private support governments will move further into the social assistance field.

United Appeal campaigns in Victoria have succeeded only four times in the last 13 years, giving them the worst record in Canada and a loser's image. But Charman isn't hung up on past failures.

"We're going to make it. If you think there's any doubt, forget it."

Appeal and Uvic Link Up

University of Victoria development director Floyd Fairclough has been named co-chairman of the 1971 United Appeal campaign.

His appointment was announced today by campaign chairman Eric Charman. Fairclough, 47, of 3648 Crestview, has been associated with Uvic since its inception in the mid-1960s and was development director for Victoria College from 1960 until it became a university.

He is experienced as a professional fund-raiser in New York and Chicago and was vice-president of the fund-raising firm Deachmann, Fairclough and Parks in the 1950s.

Fairclough also ran the successful Royal Jubilee Hospital expansion drive in 1958-59. He is on the board of directors of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic, a United Appeal agency.

Announcing Fairclough's appointment, Charman said, "Fairclough has shown great organizational ability, and I'm very glad to bring the university into liaison with the community for this campaign."

Charman also announced that Mrs. Shirley Baker, Uvic women's activities co-ordinator, will be chairman of the appeal's residential convass division. Mrs. Baker held this position in 1968 and ran a successful canvass.

Low Income Home Funds Welcomed

Walter Olszewski, president of the Low Income Group, said today he hopes "the people of B.C. get a very good chunk" of the $100 million federal funds to be made available to buy homes.

The program, announced by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. Friday, will help families earning between $4,000 and $6,000 a year buy homes.

Money will be loaned at 8¾ per cent interest, repayable over 25 years. If these requirements cannot be met interest could be reduced to 7¼ per cent, repayable over 40 years.

Olszewski said the program is just what's needed to encourage people on welfare or low incomes to buy houses.

'LOT BETTER'

"It's a heck of a lot better than renting. I owned my own home once — I'd like to again."

He said the federal program's interest rates are a welcome change to most.

"Where else can you get a low mortgage at that interest?"

Under the program, down payments of five per cent of the cost of the house, must be made.

MORE ASSISTANCE

Olszewski said this can be met with assistance from the B.C. Home Acquisition Act fund.

"On a house that costs between $12,000 and $14,000, this means a down-payment of about $700."

Under the terms of the federal and provincial plans, a person would be able to get a $1,000 provincial grant and make the necessary deposit on a $20,000 home.

FIRST THUNDERBIRD SLOOP in the Pacific Northwest to be completely built of fiberglass was launched Friday at Ogden Point with the customary crack of champagne. There was also a spare bottle, complete with plastic cups. Ready for the big moment are Mrs. Glen Higgins, 54 Howe, right, wife of the sloop Freeway's owner, and Mrs. John Booth, wife of the builder of the plug and mold. Thunderbirds are the largest fleet in the area and were designed by the late Seattle marine architect Ben Seaborne.

25 Suicides Committed Here in 1970

The suicide rate for the four Greater Victoria municipalities in 1970 was 14.3 per 100,000 people, according to police records.

This rate is considerably lower than the figure of 19.2 per 100,000 people in Greater Vancouver, which that region's Crisis Intervention and Suicide Prevention Centre said this week is "approaching the highest levels in the world."

A breakdown of the 25 suicides and attempted 114 suicides for the four core Greater Victoria municipalities last year shows Victoria had 15 suicides and 65 attempts, Saanich with 9 suicides and 43 attempts, Oak Bay with one suicide and five attempts and Esquimalt with no suicides and one attempt.

Victoria's 1970 figures show a slight increase in the number of suicides in 1969 when 13 people took their lives. But the 65 attempted suicides in Victoria for 1970 show a decrease of four from 1969.

Comparative figures from Saanich show a decrease of two suicides from 11 in 1969. However, eight more Saanich residents attempted suicide in 1970. Figures for 1969 were not available for Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

The Greater Victoria rate was arriving at using an estimated population of 175,000.

Ernest Mainwood, a director of the Crisis Intervention and Suicide Prevention Centre Wednesday told Vancouver council Canada's average suicide rare stood only third to that of Austria and Sweden.

"And the rate in Greater Vancouver area is by far the highest in Canada," he told council.

The rate for Austria is 23 per 100,000 people, and the rate for Sweden is 21 per 100,000 people, he said.

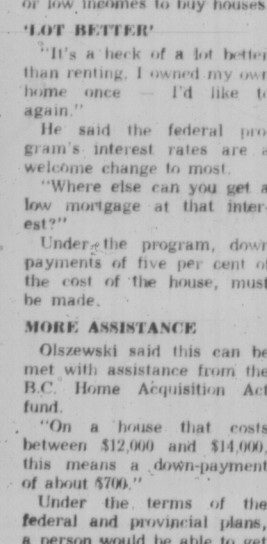
In Victoria, 10 of the 15 suicides were males, but 43 of the 65 attempted suicides were females. Most frequently chosen method of suicide and attempts in Victoria last year was overdosing with medication.

The greatest number of attempted suicides for females in Victoria came from the 16 to 22-year-old age group (13 attempts) compared with five attempts for males in the same age bracket.

Next highest age category for attempted suicides was females in the 25 to 30 age (eight cases) compared with five attempts for men in the same group.

There were six attempts by females in the 33 to 37 age group compared with two men for this category.

This Museum Can't Display Another



TOP MAN OF Multiple District 19, Lions International is Jack Tang of the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club. He was elected unanimously this morning by more than 2,100 delegates attending final convention sessions at the Esquimalt Municipal Sports Centre. Alan Smith of the Esquimalt Lions Club was elected district governor of 19-1, one of the nine areas of the district.

Provincial Museum director Bristol Foster is opposed to a city council proposal that the government take over the Bastion Square Maritime Museum and accommodate the exhibits in the provincial museum.

"It's not realistic," he said. "We couldn't begin to do justice to the exhibits of the maritime museum with the space we have available."

The city made the proposal to the government to avoid having to subsidize the museum with grants every year.

SHIP REPLICA

Some aldermen suggested that the maritime relics could be used on the replica of Capt. George Vancouver's ship to be constructed for the human history display in the provincial museum. Work on the project is expected to start this sumfer.

Foster pointed out the maritime museum has 11,500 square feet of display which covers all the maritime history of western Canada to the present day.

'NO WAY'

"Our Capt. Vancouver ship — the Discovery — will only have 1,500 square feet of display space," he said. "Obviously there is no way we could compress 11,500 square feet of exhibit space into 1,500 square feet."

He also noted that the provincial museum would only be telling the maritime history of B.C. at the time the province was discovered by Capt. James Cook and Vancouver.

'ONLY HIGHLIGHTS'

"The aims and objectives of our exhibits and those of the maritime museum are different, but parallel," he said. "They are complimentary to one another, not in competition with one another."

The maritime museum tells its story in depth," he added. "We only show the highlights."

Douglas Turnbull, president of the Friends of the Museum, said the museum is a big asset to the city and if it was moved would be a loss to Bastion Square.

"Bastion Square would suffer if it was moved," he said. "It is the centre of attraction."

About 50,000 people visited the museum last year.

Jolt Victims Recovering

Painters Richard Finney and Frank Hancock, burned in a powerline accident Friday, are in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Finney, 18, of 11303 Chalet in Sidney, suffered burns to his right foot and right knee and Hancock, 31, of 7173 Brentwood, was burned on the soles of both feet.

They were injured when the ladder they were using to paint an apartment hit a 6,900-volt powerline, snapping it in two places.

arthur mayse

IF THERE'S ONE OBJECT I'd prefer not to glimpse among May's greenery, it is a fist-sized mass of grey filament out near the end of a leafy bough.

That oversize cocoon holds tent caterpillars, an insect species we can get along nicely without.

This morning I spotted a tent high in a Pacific Willow, and kept an eye peeled for others among our fruit trees. Sure enough, a second colony of miserable spinners had pitched camp in a crotch of our heavy-bearing little Yellow Delicious.

But those were the only ones in sight, and a call to the Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside brought reassurance.

Indications are that tent caterpillars have hatched in no more than normal numbers this spring, and aren't expected to prove much of a problem.

That's good news, because every few years comes a peak infestation when the furry tentmakers deploy in munching hordes. They squish underfoot, drop down strollers' necks, and play the devil with the foliage.

They aren't fussy eaters, although I've noticed in disgust that they're partial to a cherry-leaf main course topped off with an apple-leaf dessert.

Nobody and nothing sets store by them except the few parasites that prey on them. Birds largely ignore them and gardeners detest them.

I suppose all-wise nature has a place for the tent caterpillar in her plan, but it continues to elude me.

When a citizen writes a letter to a mayor asking that a street name be changed, the mayor is duty-bound to pass the suggestion on to his municipal council.

But that doesn't necessarily mean he approves the proposed change, and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis tells me that he has no designs on Foul Bay Road's time-mellowed title.

"I've always though well of the present name," said good Mayor Hugh, "and I wouldn't like to see it replaced."

The changing of street names, he pointed out, is a lengthy process attended by various difficulties, and should be approached warily.

But naming a new street is something else again: and here we arrive at an idea which Curtis hopes will garner support.

He thinks it's high time we honored our greatest artist by naming a street after her.

"I feel that Emily Carr's name should be given to one of our new streets," he said, "and this would be a particularly appropriate year for us to do so."

A sound motion. I like it, and hope the mayor will find solid support for it.

And while we're on the subject, how about a street for another Victorian of note? Amor de Cosmos, editor, premier and Confederationist — a man too long ignored.

As a minor shadow on a sunshiny Royal visit, there was the case of the loyal lady who waved so enthusiastically that her wedding ring took leave of her finger.

That shadow can now be lifted. Thanks to another viewer of royalty who found the flyaway token, Mrs. A. R. Horner of 36 Sylvan Lane is wearing her plain gold band again.

On that happy note, and hungry as a tent caterpillar, I'm off to see what's for dinner.

Sir Tyrone Guthrie Dies

GUTHRIE
famed director

NEWBLISS, Ireland (UPI) — Sir Tyrone Guthrie, theatre producer, director, actor and playwright, died today at his country home. He was 70.

A family spokesman said Guthrie was reading his morning mail after breakfast when he collapsed and died.

A commanding figure just short of seven feet tall, Guthrie established his most lasting reputation as a producer and director of Shakespeare.

His productions of Measure for Measure and Hamlet are still considered landmarks. He directed Richard III and All's Well That Ends Well at the first Stratford, Ontario, Shakespeare festival in 1953.

CBS Feature Film Venture Termed Success

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This month marks the fourth anniversary of Cinema Centre Films, CBS's bold venture into movie-making. After 26 feature films, the enterprise is considered a qualified success.

"We went into business at the worst possible time," says Gordon Stulberg, president of the CBS subsidiary.

"Theatre business was down and star salaries were up to a million dollars. But we matched the deals that were being made by other studios matched, but did not exceed."

Stulberg emphasized the latter point. CBS is being sued by the major film companies for unfair competition, and one of the claims is that Cinema Centre jacked up salaries of stars.

Cinema Centre paid the going wage, Stulberg said, to lure such million-dollar figures as John Wayne, Jack Lemmon, Steve McQueen and Lee Marvin. The result was a series of important films, some successful, some not so.

DISCUSSED HITS

The company president discussed the hits and flops with disarming frankness:

"Our produce can be divided into three categories. The first is comedy, and there we have done well. With Six You Get Eggroll, April Fools, A Boy Named Charlie Brown, Me, Natalie.

"The second category is action-adventure, and that has been our biggest success. Little Big Man is our 'home run'; even though it cost $9 million because of weather in Calgary, it will be a big money-maker. A Man Called Horse was also a smash, and we did well with The Reivers and Rio Lobo.

"Our failure has been in contemporary drama. That is like pursuing an elusive will-o-the-wisp, hoping to get your picture to the market at exactly the right time, as with Joe or Easy Rider. We haven't been that lucky. Hail Hero, Adam at 6 a.m., Homer and Royal Hunt of the Sun—which I considered contemporary in its racial conflict—were flops.

"Our best chance in that category was Boys in the Band. It did well in the big cities, but the heartland of America simply wouldn't accept a film about homosexuality, even though it had no outright sex."

'LOCK UP YOUR DAUGHTERS'

Bubbling Musical Has Stylish Touch

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Turn off the TV, lock up your houses and head for the McPherson Playhouse tonight or any night next week.

Lock Up Your Daughters is the name of the show there and it's worth the effort. It's a bright, blithe, bubbling musical, directed with a light hand and a stylish touch by Walter Burgess, guesting for Bastion Theatre from Toronto.

Final production of the current Bastion season, it is away happy and in a mood for encores.

This is a show that has plenty going for it in the first place.

It possesses all the picturesque charm of its 18th century setting and the plot witticism and tongue-in-cheek intrigue of its progenitor — Henry Fielding's comedy, Rape Upon Rape.

It has music by Laurel Johnson and lyrics by Lionel Bart of Oliver fame. And it has several appealing tuneful numbers like It Must Be True, Lovely Lover, When Does the Ravishing Begin? and The Gentle Art of Seduction.

To all this director Burgess's choregraphic gifts and flair for stylization have brought buoyancy, discipline and vitality.

There is a fine small pit orchestra, firmly and flexibly controlled by Howard Denike.

There are settings by Jack Trueman that are imaginative, and while they do not always work as well as they should — especially the revolves — they contribute to the character of the production.

And then there is the cast.

The overall impression is of a fine team of attractive people with delightful voices and a genuine sense of tempo, although the brio, in a show of this type, could be still more intense.

One or two individual performances being lower-keyed than others, were responsible for dulling the effect of a scene now and then.

But Janie Woods is entirely charming, competent and vocally lovely as the pure heroine; Edward Greenhalgh's Justice Squeezum is a splendidly oozing, leering comic portrait, and Marge Bridgeman's performance, luscious and lusty, is memorable — especially when she turns on the sex in the Ravishing and Seduction songs.

Barry Grimshaw, Roy Silver and Ray Middleton's voices are attributes of the production and there are several good supporting comic performances besides an amusing characterization by Stuart Kent as the bumbling coffee house politician.

Curtain time for Lock Up Your Daughters is 8 p.m.

If you're holidaying in Britain does it really make sense to tiptoe through the tulips first?

Two airlines fly out of the West direct to Europe this summer.
But only one actually flies to Britain. Air Canada's Western Arrow.
The other flies to Amsterdam. Then arranges with another carrier to take you on. For an extra $25 per person. The story is that you get to see Amsterdam for a couple of days for only $25 extra.
$25? C'mon, you're not going to eat? Drink? Get hotels? Taxis? Souvenirs?
Let's face it, most couples go a little overboard the first few days of their holiday. In that mood, your Amsterdam stop-over could end up as a substantial bite out of your British holiday budget.
And that money, spent in Britain, could go a long way... to a car and mileage or simple accommodation. So obviously, if you're going to Britain, it makes sense to go with the airline that goes direct, for less.
And that's us.
Air Canada. With our famous Western Arrow.
We're convenient.
From the West direct. Or from the East with BOAC. But we want to be more than that. So?
Atlantic 71. An all out effort from all of us at Air Canada to make sure that if you're not coming with us because we're convenient, you'll be coming because we care for you more.
Ask your travel agent about it.
Come see what you've been missing.
AIR CANADA 71 Atlantic 71
The only airline direct to London every day. From $409* return.
*29-45 day economy excursion return fare April 1/May 31. Fares slightly higher during peak season. *Service quoted from Vancouver.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time.

In the loss of our mother, Mrs. Cora Flynn, our special thanks to Doctor L. Plak and Doctor G. May for their untiring attention during her declining years; to Reverend Travis for a most consoling service, and to McCall Bros. Funeral Chapel.

Jim, Ed, Reg and John Flynn, Thelma McKinty and Margaret Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Finn and family wish to thank the Doctors and Nurses of the Veterans Hospital for the great care given Mr. David Croston during his illness, and to the B.P.O.E. No. 2 for the assistance in the memorial service.

I wish to thank my many friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy at the passing of my husband, Sidney Ernest Harry Harrowing. Special thanks to Drs. D. A. Buie, J. D. Hough, F. A. Perera and H. H. Macartney, also the nursing staff of St. Joseph's Hospital.—Mrs. Anne Harrowing.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we wish to thank our many friends, neighbors, relatives and Ross's young friends, for the many expressions of sympathy and kindness, beautiful floral and charitable tributes extended to us in the recent sudden loss of our son Ross.

—George and Irene Fairfield, George Jr. and Shari.

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. Her many friends at Victoria Gospel Chapel, D. McCartney, Graham McCall and staff, we are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you, who did so much to help us through this time.

The Blackstock family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DEE — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Sylvia who passed away 8 years ago today.

Absent the face we loved so dear
Silent the voice we loved to hear
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept,
To love and to cherish and never forget.

Always remembered and sadly missed. Mom, Dad, brother Alan, and Ada.

HORN—In loving memory of dear Mother, who passed away May 15, 1970.

One year has passed since that sad day.
When one we loved was called away.
God took her home — it was His will.
Sadly missed by her loving daughters, Helen and Beatrice.

McINTYRE—In loving memory of Mary Winnifred (Billie) McIntyre, who passed away May 15, 1965, Sydney, Australia.

We are thinking of you today, Billie,
Thinking of the past,
Picturing you in memory
Just as we saw you last.
How can our hearts forget you
When everything we do
Reminds of the times too few
We were able to spend with you.
Loved and ever remembered by us all.

—Allan, Mother, Betty and Thelma.

REDING—In loving memory of Rex, my dear husband, who passed away May 15, 1970.

To hear his voice, to see his smile,
To sit and talk with him awhile.
To be together in the same old way.
Would be my dearest wish today.
Dear Lord, forgive a silent fear,
A foolish wish that he were here.

Others are taken, yes, I know,
But he was mine, and I loved him so.

Deeply, missed and lovingly remembered always, by his wife, Sandie.

REDING—In loving memory of our Daddy, Warrant Officer Reding, who passed away in Japan, May 15, 1970.

Though they laid you to rest far away,
Our love is with you every day.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be
But dear to our memory you ever will be.

—Ever remembered, your loving sons, Ronald, Gary, daughters Cheryl and Andrea.

WEEKS—In loving memory of Mr. Walter Weeks, who passed away on May 15, 1969.

"His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away."

—Ever remembered by his wife, A. Weeks, and family.
